Dear Mr. President:

SECOND DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE
---MORE LEGAL AND SAFE THAN THE FIRST
---AGAINST JUDICIAL DICTATORSHIP

As we admire courage in China, and fortitude in Poland, Hungary, the USSR---can we stand up and restore American democracy---ending the dictatorship of dishonest judges, with their dishonest rulings---right now?

Please publicly nullify "Roe vs. Wade" now---as a dishonest, illegal, and unconstitutional usurping of power. (The 1973 dissenting Justices Rehnquist and White called it that---but saying "raw usurpation" rather than "dishonest.")

Do you wish to ask Justices Blackmun, Brennan, Marshall, (and possibly Stevens), if they have been involved personally in abortions, and in what year? If they say "yes" or "none of your business," would this confirm the suspicion that they are fighting off their own consciences by sanctifying abortion in their rulings?

Having sworn to uphold and defend the Constitution, you have every right to nullify Roe as an outrageous, dishonest attack on the Constitution. And 2 of 3 voters are basically pro-life, (as 1972 state laws, and some polls, show). If you ask pro-life governors, (and legislatures), to join you, they will. You may wish to ask some judges to join you; but even without them, this is your legal right.

If Roe falls because we push it, then the pro-life majority in America will command more respect in Congress for a Human Life Amendment.

Please make history---proclaiming constitutional democracy, here, too, not just in Communist countries, but here, in "the land of the free, the home of the brave."

With our best wishes.

Pro-life organizations, and their publications
Other pro-life media, and officeholders---federal and state

Have you sacrificed time, energy, and money, for many years, to achieve a Human Life Amendment? Do you deserve success as your reward? Can you lay aside your scorn for the ideas of your followers? Do you admire the courage---in the face of danger---in some Communist countries, and the fortitude---in the face of no danger---in others?

Can we Americans, with no danger, stand up like real men and women, to restore our Constitution and our democracy, along with the right to life? Will we go on surrendering forever? WILL YOU ASK PRESIDENT BUSH TO NULLIFY "ROE VS. WADE" NOW? He is an enormous power figure; and he may well nullify it---if pro-lifers ask him---especially their leaders who have access to him for a few hours a year. In the 9 years since 1981, Presidents Reagan and Bush never did this, because nobody asked them. But the real law, and 2/3 of the voters, and the example of Communist countries, are on our side. If Roe falls only because we timidly waited for a 5-to-4 lineup, for 9 years, there will be no more chance of a Human Life Amendment than before. One of our signers offers a bet, 100 to 1: never.

Some people have said that Americans are cowards, afraid when there is no danger to fear. If this is not true, will you---thinking about the courage shown in Communist countries:

- 1-ASK PRESIDENT BUSH, AND PRO-LIFE GOVERNORS, TO NULLIFY ROE; AND KEEP ASKING, IF NEED BE?
- 2-PROCLAIM THIS GOAL FROM THE MARCH FOR LIFE PLATFORM, ON JANUARY 22, AND AT ALL FUTURE RALLIES?----SO THAT TENS OF THOUSANDS WILL HEAR AND SPREAD THE CALL?
- 3-PUBLISH THIS IN YOUR PUBLICATIONS?

When we have the home of the brave, then we can have the land of the free. Please make history.

Indeed, this latest action by the Indian government is nothing less than a deliberate plan to demoralize, intimidate and murder Sikhs to create a psychosis of fear throughout the Sikh nation. Recall that in the past when the Indian government disliked the results of a Punjab election, it simply dissolved the government and declared Central Rule. In 1987 it dissolved the extremely popularly elected Akali Dal government and seized power. To this day India has refused to lift its Central Rule. Can there be any wonder why Sikhs want independence from India? I suggest that if the Indian government is so keen on elections, it should agree to a United Nations sponsored plebiscite in the Sikh homeland that Sikhs can decide for themselves, under free and fair conditions, their own geo-political future. But as you know, India will not agree to such an equitable solution.

I beg of you, Mr. Card, to realize the urgent importance of the plight of the Sikh nation. With the addition of this latest deployment, over 680,000 police, army troops and

Dear Andy

Thank you for coming to the N.G.A. meeting yesterday. I apologize for the way in which you were treated. It is my opinion that the "Do" went too far and hurt themselves. My discomfort level overflowed, perhaps unprofessionally, but you kept your composure in a manner which befits your station as a representative of the White House.

If this situation reoccurs or persists I expect to "overflow" again. Someone has to keep the N.G.A. from becoming another Senate Judiciary Committee. I am grateful to you and respect your good work!

Dear Mrs. Horner:

I have been waiting for more than a year for an answer from the White House in regard to my job application. I do not have any other alternative but to give you my sincere opinion and the motivations to write you on the issue.

I believe that White House Presidential Personnel erroneously thinks that my petition for the Copyright Royalty Tribunal Commissioner job is a reappointment. I do not share that technicality or concept, because my previous and current job was given to me by the Reagan Administration due to my long and deep involvement on its behalf.

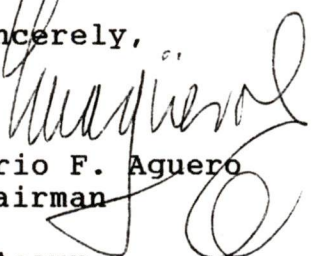

In reality, my application for this job, if granted, would be my first with the Bush Administration. I think that I deserve it due to my own merits based on my previous and loyal work for George Bush, both as Vice-President and President.

The CRT commissioner job was offered to me because of my vast experience, my qualifications and my knowledge in the different phases of radio, television, motion pictures, music, sports, and my long career of more than 35 years as a producer in the wide variety of the entertainment industry. During my term in the Tribunal I have served as Chairman in three periods of one year each.

I firmly believe that I deserve this job in the agency which has given me the opportunity and the freedom to do what I did in the 1984 and 1988 elections and hopefully again in 1992.

I expect to have a written answer of your decision soon.

Dear Andy,

As I mentioned to you in our telephone conversation during my previous visit this summer, I am presently conducting a job search. As you know, I am particularly interested in a position for the Administration in America 2000, the major education initiative. Through my various interviews and telephone conversations it seems that this initiative is at the developmental stages at the Dept. of Education and at the private corporation headed by Gov. Kean (The New American Schools Development Corp.).

This past Monday, I met with Porter Davis in Presidential Personnel. He stated that while jobs are presently tight, there still are some areas (notably, America 2000) which may be available. He suggested that my Mass. colleagues at the White House could be of further assistance in identifying a particular position. Prior to returning to D.C. this week, I spoke with Gusty Hornblower and John Sears. They told me that they had contacted Chase Vintermyer on my behalf.

While I fully understand that you are extremely busy, I would appreciate it if you would be able to pass around the enclosed resumes and/or provide me with some specific suggestions on individuals with whom I should speak. I would truly appreciate this.

I will be staying in Arlington, Virginia until Sept. 19th. You may reach me at (703) 243-0996.

Again, thanks.

Dear Connie:

Just a quick note to acknowledge yours of June 24, 1991, recommending Geneve Gil for a position with the Bush Administration. She sounds like quite a remarkable young woman! Per your request, I've passed her information on to the Office of Presidential Personnel, and someone there will follow-up directly with her.

It was good to hear from you. Please let me know how things turn out!

Sincerely,

JUL - 2 1991

Andrew H. Card Jr.,
Office of the Chief of Staff
The White House,
Washington, D.C.

Dear Andy;

The purpose of this letter is two-fold - first to tell you how proud I am of you and all that you have accomplished. There is never anything said about you that is not good, and that makes me very happy. It makes me remember the "Old Days" and all the fun we had. We certainly helped elect one great President, didn't we?

The other reason for this note is that I have as you can see, enclosed a resume' and letter regarding a young friend of mine, Genève Gil. As you can see by the resume', she is an extremely bright young lady, but she is also a sweet, attractive, unassuming person, one who would be an asset in any position. If you could route these papers in the right direction, I would consider it a personal favor.

By the way, my Nancy is doing very well as a State Senator. Bill W. has been helpful to her, and she has been fortunate to be getting very excellent press. She is working hard, but loves it.

I am no longer working in the Sheriffs' Dept. About time don't you think? We may be moving to Florida soon, as my daughter with whom I live, and her husband are looking into it. I hope not, because believe it or not I have met a wonderful man, and after all the years of misery with Fred, I hate to give him up.

Andy dear, thanks for past favors, and for your consideration in this matter. Please give my love to Ron K. I miss you both. Hope that the family is well. The kids must be quite grown up by now.

Fondly,

Connie

Dear Sir or Madam:

In the Fall of 1987, as Academic Director of the School for International Training's College Semester in Mexico, I had the great good fortune of working with Geneve Gil, a woman I recommend to you with utmost enthusiasm.

Given the structure of the program--which included formal language and culture classes as well as considerable independent work and homestays--I was able to observe Geneve in a variety of settings, academic as well as social. Though I could comment on a wide and impressive range of talents and skills, I will limit my remarks to the three qualities which I feel will be most helpful to you in your own evaluation.

First is Geneve's interaction with groups. From the very beginning, it was clear that Geneve would be an asset in achieving two of the program's primary goals: building community and collaborative learning. Whether brainstorming a topic or critiquing the work of a fellow student, Geneve demonstrated sensitivity always. Her criticisms were constructive and her suggestions for changing or improving a particular project were specific and to the point. With difficult members of the group, Geneve showed unusual patience, and her respect for those of lesser abilities was genuine. In formal classes, she handled herself deftly; able to listen--closely, carefully--Geneve was adept at drawing information from others, and could disagree firmly but amiably, even with Mexican professors who are, on the average, probably less open to questioning and criticism than their American counterparts. In short, Geneve was instrumental in bringing together a small but disparate group which ran the whole gamut of politics and personal philosophies.

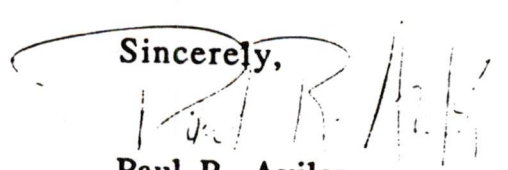

Geneve's sensitivity to other cultures is obvious: with roots in both Cuba and Mexico, she has done extensive coursework in Latin American Studies, as well as African dance and Indian vocals. During our time in Mexico, she consistently sought out Mexicans, taking every opportunity to engage with them both socially and professionally. In the Seminar on Mexican Culture, as in her project on Tzeltal and Tzotzil tribes in Chiapas, she was attuned always to culturally sensitive issues--U.S.-Mexican relations, for example, or the social and political dynamics at work between such groups as the Ladinos and the indigenous populations in the south. Moreover, Geneve rejected, without fail, pat interpretations of Mexican culture--be they stereotypes imposed from outside, or the myths which Mexicans generate about themselves. Perhaps most impressive was Geneve's constant questioning of the impact of anthropological studies (her own work included) on Indian communities--their social and economic impact, their effect on the arts, and of course, all the ethical questions raised by doing such a study.

Finally, I would point you to Geneve's intellectual abilities which are considerable. Her thinking combines the ability to reflect with the ability to analyze in almost equal measure. The work journal she produced for the Independent Study Project was exemplary for both its thoroughness and depth, and a study comparing the painter, Rufino Tamayo, with novelist, Garcia Marquez, could easily have been re-worked into a publishable essay. Geneve is quick to spot poor thinking; she writes clearly and demonstrates a real feel for language; and from all that I have seen, she takes on demanding projects, and then goes at them with gusto. As for her abilities in Spanish, Geneve is gifted with a fine ear, and is able to shift register as the situation requires. This skill was crucial in making contacts at the National Indigenous Institute and the National University of Mexico, which Geneve did with characteristic ease and initiative.

In closing, considering all the students I have taught--at Indiana, Syracuse, and the School for International Training--I count Geneve among the very best. Certain that she will accomplish a great deal, I am eager to follow her career after graduation, eager to know how she applies and develops the openness, flexibility, and intelligence that have made working with her a challenge and a joy.

Sincerely,

Paul R. Aviles

RONALD L. ZIEGLER

President and Chief Executive Officer

Ronald L. Ziegler came to the National Association of Chain Drug Stores in January, 1988, as President and Chief Executive Officer. He is responsible for ensuring the chain drug industry's strong presence in the health care and retail arenas and establishing NACDS as a leading information and research resource for pharmacy and the nation's chain drug stores.

Prior to joining NACDS, Mr. Ziegler served from 1980 to 1987 as President and Chief Executive Officer of the National Association of Truck Stop Operators. NATSO represents a $26 billion industry retailing 12 billion gallons of diesel fuel annually.

From 1975 to 1979, he was Senior Vice President and Managing Director of International Services for the international engineering firm of Syska and Hennessy. Mr. Ziegler was responsible for international business development and established the firm's Washington public affairs office.

In 1969, President Richard M. Nixon named Mr. Ziegler as White House Press Secretary, a position he held throughout President Nixon's term of office. Mr. Ziegler was later named Assistant to the President. He supervised the transition with President Ford's Administration in 1974 and he established Mr. Nixon's San Clemente office.

Earlier, he served as Press Assistant for the California Republican Legislative Caucus, and was then appointed Press Aide for Richard Nixon's 1962 California Gubernatorial campaign. Mr. Ziegler was an executive with J. Walter Thompson, one of the world's largest marketing and advertising organizations, from 1962 until his appointment as White House Press Secretary.

Mr. Ziegler is listed in Who's Who in America and is a member of the Association of White House Press Secretaries, the International Platform Association, and Sigma Chi.

Graduated with a degree in marketing from the University of Southern California in 1961, Mr. Ziegler is married to the former Nancy Plessinger. He and his wife reside in Alexandria, Virginia. They have two daughters, Cynthia and Laurie.

FACT SHEET

Founded in 1933, the National Association of Chain Drug Stores, Inc. (NACDS) is the national trade association of the chain drug industry of the United States of America. Based in Alexandria, Virginia, NACDS represents more than 150 chain drug corporations operating more than 24,000 retail community pharmacies which provide practice settings for more than 65,000 pharmacists nationwide. Chain drug stores are the leaders in the retail drug store industry, representing the largest components of this more than $67 billion market. Retail chain companies must have four or more stores to become an NACDS member.

With 19 members from 6 countries, The Association is expanding its international program with the intent to inter-relate American and non-American companies and associations with the common objective of improving health care for its consumers.

In addition, the NACDS membership also includes 900 suppliers of goods and services to chain drug stores.

The Association's primary activities include:

- Promoting and preserving the general welfare of the chain drug industry and of the consumers it serves;
- Monitoring activities of legislative, regulatory, pharmacy and special interest groups and initiating appropriate action which best serves the general welfare of the chain drug industry;
- Identifying common opportunities, techniques, and trends relating to merchandise distribution and chain drug store operations and initiating appropriate programs and services which best serve member needs and interests; and
- Encouraging membership participation of drug chains of every size of the United States, and of related groups in the international field.

NACDS serves its members by representing the concerns of the chain drug industry through interaction with Congress and federal agencies. It also strives to enhance the professionalism of pharmacy practitioners and executives by offering a wide range of conferences and continuing education programs accredited by the American Council on Pharmaceutical Education (ACPE), as well as a variety of publications and audio visual media.

To address the pharmacy manpower shortage, NACDS offers "Pharmacy ... America's Most Respected Profession," a pharmacist recruitment program which has achieved unusual success.

Non-American drug store chains, pharmacy chains, pharmaceutical industry, and associations representing such groups, nationally or regionally, are invited to become "International Members."

MEMORANDUM FOR JOHN H. SUNUNU
CHIEF OF STAFF
THE WHITE HOUSE

ANDREW H. CARD
ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT
AND DEPUTY TO THE CHIEF OF STAFF
THE WHITE HOUSE

FROM: RICHARD G. AUSTIN
ADMINISTRATOR OF GENERAL SERVICES

SUBJECT: Department of Defense excess food items

BACKGROUND:

The Department of Defense (DoD) has notified the General Services Administration (GSA) that approximately $150 million worth of food and related items, stored in four depots across the country, may be determined excess to DoD's needs during the latter part of July. The food was ordered by DoD for use in Operation Desert Storm. DoD has surveyed its components to determine how much is needed by the military services, and is performing an inventory to determine how much and what kind of food will be determined excess. The excess food will then be turned over to GSA for disposal.

In addition to food stored in the depots, additional items may be available at contractors' plants, at points of embarkation, and on vessels en route to the United States. In some instances, GSA is notified of the availability of these items on short notice, and it is GSA's responsibility to dispose of the food quickly in order to minimize loss through spoilage and to free up warehouse space. For example, a Navy resupply ship is now in port at Norfolk Naval Base unloading approximately 65 trailer containers of food, and another ship with approximately the same amount of food is expected to arrive in Bayonne, NJ in 5 days. (We do not have an estimate from the Navy of the value and content of the load. However, to provide an example of the size of the shipment, if it consisted entirely of B-Rations, it would equate to 494,000 meals worth $1.35 million.) The Navy has requested that we expedite disposition of the shipment, and we have already assigned 15 containers of this shipment to the Bureau of Prisons.

STATUTORY DONATION PROCESS:

When an agency determines property to be excess to its needs, it is made available to other Federal agencies to satisfy their requirements. If there are no Federal needs identified during screening, i.e. no agencies have a need, it is declared surplus.

As surplus property, it is made available to eligible recipients under the Federal property donation program administered by the GSA. Donations to eligible recipients, by statute, must be made in a fair and equitable manner. When property is donated, it is transferred through the state agency for surplus property and distributed to donees identified by the state agency. Providers of assistance to the homeless are among those recipients eligible to receive property through the state under the donation program, and, in accordance with the Stewart B. McKinney Act, property is made available at a nominal cost to such providers of assistance to the homeless.

There may be authorities in other agencies (e.g. FEMA) that would permit the transfer of the food directly to the homeless. GSA would be happy to cooperate with any such agency in its election to exercise such authority.

RECOMMENDATION

Existing law provides that excess Federal personal property may be made available to assist in meeting the needs of the nation's homeless. Accordingly, it is recommended that efforts be initiated to make this food available to providers of assistance to homeless individuals. With some assurance that no other Federal agency will seek utilization of this food supply, GSA is prepared to work with DoD to transfer this food to state surplus agencies for distribution. While GSA cannot condition the provision of these supplies to the states for donation to the homeless, an expression of desire from the President that it be so utilized would improve the likelihood of the homeless receiving its benefits.

Dear Andy,

Hello, how are you? I have enclosed some products from my wife's company, Fox & Co. Publishing, Inc. We create, produce and sell calendars, notecards, postcards and stationery to fine gift shoppes around the country. We even have mail order customers in both the House and the Senate. I'd appreciate it if you would pass along a set to the President and Mrs. Bush. They might enjoy it's depiction of life in New England. And of course the other set is for your family, I'm sure you miss Massachusetts occasionally.

Mario is doing very well in Paris but hopes to be reassigned to Milan by June. I think he travels more than the President, so the position in Italy means he will have to settle down in only one country. Maybe, he'll even find a nice Italian girl!

I have taken the liberty of enclosing my political resume for your perusal. I'd love to work in public service, perhaps you can forward it to your friends in the new Weld administration. I hear he's looking for a few good Democrats. Or for the right money, I'd move to D.C.

Thank you in advance for any help you can give me. I hope you'll enjoy the calendar and the new year.

Dear Mr Card,

I was recently offered an opportunity to compete for an internship with the Republican State Committee. An essay and resume were requested from each applicant. When I realized that references would be required, I gave the name of State Representative Edward Teague, in whose office I had previously worked as a volunteer intern. I also submitted your name, which I know could be considered presumptuous without first having asked your consent. Unfortunately, there was not time to do so, as the resume was due on May 31.

I hoped you would not mind, as the notes you had previously sent me have been kind and encouraging and I felt you would have given your permission if I had asked.

When you receive this letter the finalists will have been chosen for interview. I may or may not be among them. I do, however, appreciate your past interest in my political endeavors and trust that my use of your name was not something you would disapprove of.

I enjoy reading about you and those among you who help our President in his administration. Best wishes to you in the days ahead.

Dear Andy:

It was great talking with you yesterday. Glad to know that everything is going well. Mary and I were sorry that we couldn't get together while we were in DC but will look forward to a visit in the near future.

As I mentioned on the telephone, Andy, a very good friend of mine, Joyce Pollock, has applied for membership on the National Council on the Arts. She is an extremely well qualified candidate to serve on the Council and has supported the President and the Republican Party extremely well here in northern California.

Joyce currently serves on the California Art's Council, and chaired the Governor's Awards for the Arts in 1989-1990. She also serves as a Trustee on the Western States Art Federation, a federation representing thirteen western states in supporting and celebrating arts of the West. She is a National Patron for the American Council for the Arts and has consistently supported arts and theatre in Sacramento and northern California.

I first worked with Joyce when she was a volunteer coordinator on behalf of Sandy Smoley's 1978 Congressional campaign. Joyce has been involved in every major Party effort, including that of the President, and Governors Deukmejian and Wilson. In Governor Wilson's campaign, she was State Co-Chair.

Joyce was Chairman of the Bush-Quayle Election Committee here in Sacramento in 1988, often operating on very limited funds and working tirelessly towards the successful Bush-Quayle vote here in Sacramento County. Bottom line, Andy, is that she has been and continues to be one of our region's leading Republican leaders -- often working behind the scenes and without the need for personal recognition. She, together with her husband, Dr. Arliss Pollock, have probably raised more money on behalf of Republican efforts in our County in the last five years than any other volunteers.

I truly believe that the Administration would be extremely well represented by Joyce Pollock's membership on the National Council on the Arts. Chase has acknowledged Joyce's application, and if you have a moment to review her qualifications, I know you will concur with my enthusiasm over her application.

Best wishes, and thanks for your attention to my letter.

Very truly yours,

Dear Andy,

We really enjoyed fishing with you fellows at Ray's Lake on Saturday. It's a good thing we didn't bring our stringers up by the tournament and show up the Pro's.

When I got back to the motel Saturday night and emptied my pockets, there was your knife; my last words to you when I borrowed it were "trust me", and, knowing that most fishermen stretch the truth, you probably thought you would never see the knife again.

Thank you for the tie clasp, and, again, we enjoyed the afternoon of fishing with Fred, Bruce, and yourself.

God Bless,

Dear Andy,

Looks like we have now struck out with both the President and Secretary Cheney as regards to a notable commencement speaker at our June 15th graduation here at Buzzards Bay marking our Centennial celebration.

I would be very much indebted to you were you able to pick up the phone and attempt to persuade Colin Powell to accept the assignment along with the honor of being presented an Honorary Degree as well.

My letter (attached) formally extends the invitation. Given our notable participation in Desert Storm.....we consider General Powell's choice very much appropriate especially in view of his recent pronouncements in support of sealift enhancement.

I hope you can plug in for us and be persuasive with him as soon as is possible for scheduling purposes.

Dear General Powell:

I am pleased to inform you that the Board of Trustees of Massachusetts Maritime Academy, upon recommendation of the President, has voted to award to you the Honorary Doctorate Degree in Public Administration. Additionally, the Board voted to request that you serve as the Commencement Speaker at graduation exercises marking the 100th Anniversary of the College on June 15, 1991, the ceremonies being held at the Academy located on the Cape Cod Canal, Buzzards Bay, Massachusetts will commence at 9:00 a.m.

Annually our college has sought and attained various prominent speakers from the maritime industry and related activity and armed forces. We have had our campus graced by several Flag Rank Admirals, Jacques Cousteau, Ted Turner, Malcolm Forbes, Tip O'Neil, Sil Conte and numerous others in recent years.

Needless to say, the events of this year associated with Desert Storm and Desert Shield provide our nation with much to be grateful for with respect to national defense. President Bush, you, and all of the branches of the armed forces have done the job and done it well! By all accounts, however, the "fourth arm of national defense" still needs a critical boost.....the U.S. Merchant Marine. We could have used more ships and should have had more qualified personnel available to move the cargo. Every single analyst states the case, every post-war critique concludes the same.

I am proud that we here at MMA did our job well. We sent forth countless Academy graduate mates, engineers, masters and even unlicensed crew members to the Middle East. Additionally, as many as 30 students (still enrolled here and matriculating) volunteered to man the RRF vessels and other merchantmen that carried the massive supplies to the Gulf region.

A four-year baccalaureate college, Massachusetts Maritime Academy boasts of the best record in the nation as regards licensure and officership in the Merchant Marine. Thousands of our graduates have also served with great distinction in both the U.S. Navy and the Coast Guard. No fewer than 7 Flag admirals now serve in the Navy and that achievement ranks second only to Annapolis regards Flag rank!

This year's Centennial graduating class would be highly honored were you able to join with them along with the entire Academy family to mark the 100th Anniversary of our college at our June commencement.

The heroic accomplishments of the Merchant Marine in all of our historic world conflicts is all too consistently shunted into the background - and yet sealift and its vital importance to national defense is long overdue regards public dialogue. I can think of no better way to provide the issue with a timely forum, than to have you, as Secretary of Defense, be both honored by the Academy and, at the same time, be able to provide notable public dialogue in addressing the defense needs of the future - especially as regards sealift, with your commencement address.

Naturally, the Academy stands ready to accommodate your every need were you able to honor us with your presence in June. Otis AFB is located only 3 miles from the campus for flight convenience. President Bush utilized that facility on his last visit to Mass. Maritime. We are also prepared to arrange for your berthing accommodations here on Cape Cod in the event you care to spend some extended time with us.

In the event you could make such a commitment to be with us on Saturday, June 15, 1991, please respond and, in doing so, send along your cap and gown size and several glossy photos of yourself for publicity purposes.

Hoping such arrangements can be favorably met, I remain

Very sincerely yours,

Dear Andy:

I met with Steve this past Friday and had a preliminary discussion. I found him easy to get along with and believe he will be easy to work with.

As you realize, Steve is running against the overwhelmingly Democratic registration and a liberal-learning constituency because of educational institutions like Williams, Smith, Amherst, Mt. Holyoke, and the University of Massachusetts, etc.

I don't have to tell you that strategy is the basic component of a winning campaign. I have a few suggestions for you to consider in formulating the overall strategy.

The most important thing is that he has to emphasize his close connections to the president, whose popularity has broken the sound barrier. Even seventy-six percent of the Democrats give the president an approval rating. That is why the theme and slogan of the campaign should be something like "Steven Pierce - Working with the President for Western Massachusetts".

The all-purpose speech should deal with Steve's working with the President in response to two major challenges - reinvigorating the economy of western Massachusetts and the country and defining a new role for the country in a changing world. The main reason for the latter emphasis is to show that Steve is more than an insular candidate, that he has some substance. It is also a dorsal attack on the Democrats who are perceived to be weak on foreign affairs and defense. (He should wear the yellow ribbon button as a subliminal message that the Democrats did not support the President.)

Steve should start organizing throughout the district, giving top priority to obtaining permission from Democratic homeowners to display his lawn signs. These signs should just say "Pierce for Congress" without any party designation. I realize signs don't win elections, but it gives Steve a talking point. When he goes into a community, which is ninety percent Democratic, he can point out that he is grateful for the support not only of Republicans and Independents but of Democrats as well.

There is really no movement until the last two weeks of the campaign. That's when Steve should play his winning cards - which are the endorsements of the President and Mrs. Conte. These endorsements should come three or four days apart.

AC HAS SEEN

To Ron K.
FY2
Andy

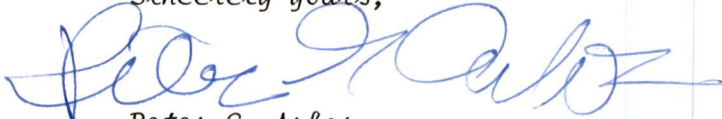

I suggest a three week media campaign - radio and TV, back-to-back. The first week these spots should introduce Steve to the district giving his background and achievements. The last two weeks the spots should contain the endorsements of Mrs. Conte and the President.

The final step to insure victory would be to have the President send a letter on White House stationery to all registered Independents and Republicans in the last week on behalf of Steve. Needless to say, the letter should be short and no literature of any kind should be included. //

I thought you might like to know that I have taken action to put a local interest referendum which deals with an issue to lower property taxes on the ballot on the same day as the Congressional election so that the voter turnout of people more inclined to vote for Steve will be increased.

Whatever my opinion is worth, I would be glad to give you an analysis of the results of the polls being taken if you wish to have such an analysis.

Sincerely yours,

Pierce tells supporters he's running

By Mary-Jane Tichenor
Berkshire Eagle Staff

LENOX — During an informal meeting with supporters yesterday, Steven D. Pierce confirmed that he will be a candidate for the 1st Congressional District seat left vacant by the death of U.S. Rep. Silvio O. Conte.

Speaking at the Lenox House, the prominent Westfield Republican said he will soon send a short letter of resignation as secretary of communities and development to Gov. William F. Weld. After he resigns the $85,000-a-year cabinet post, he will declare his candidacy formally and launch his campaign, he said.

He could face opposition in the Republican primary.

Donald A. Thurston of Clarksburg, president of Berkshire Broadcasting Co., said he took out nomination papers for circulation yesterday. And Pittsfield lawyer Janelyn Patashnick also is considering seeking the Republican nomination.

The campaign will be a short one — primaries are scheduled for April 30, and the general election will be June 4.

The 41-year-old Pierce said he didn't ask the governor for a leave of absence. "That was not an option. The most appropriate thing to do was to resign."

The governor has been very encouraging, he said. He said he has also had extensive discussions with national and state Republican committee members who were "favorable and very encouraging" about his campaign.

The big issue

His big issue will be jobs and economic development, said Pierce, who served 12 years as a Republican state representative.

"When this state was booming in the '80s, it wasn't booming out here," he said in reference to Western Massachusetts. This area, he said, has never benefited from the infusion of high technology in Massachusetts.

Asked about his debt from the gubernatorial campaign, Pierce said that it is approximately $50,000 — "larger than I would like it, but small enough to be manageable."

In reply to a question implying that he was too conservative in his economic views, he replied that he had predicted fiscal disaster for the state when others denied that it was coming.

He mentioned his support for clean air and clean water during his gubernatorial campaign and spoke with pride of Conte's endorsement of his candidacy.

Pierce said he would have supported the resolution supporting the gulf war, had he been in Congress at that time. He said that President Bush is right on target with his "new world order" framework for peace and that diplomacy is the most important instrument for peace.

He said that he would be talking shortly with Corinne Conte, who had considered a run for her husband's seat but decided against it.

Pierce was accompanied by David Chivers of Pittsfield, Republican state committeeman; David Kiley of Pittsfield, chairman of the Berkshire County Republican Association, and Edward McDonald of Adams, county coordinator for Pierce's campaign. Others at the meeting were Marion R. Hollingsworth of Lenox, and John J. Martin, Louis A. Costi and Robert K. George, all of Pittsfield.

City Hall meeting

Pierce met with Pittsfield Mayor Anne E. Wojtkowski and Peter Arlos, city councilor at large, at City Hall before returning to Westfield, where he lives with his wife, Mary Jane, a registered nurse, and their son, Jeffrey, 10.

Before his election to the state house in 1978, he practiced law in Hartford, Conn., and in Westfield.

He is a graduate of Union College, Schenectady, N.Y., where he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and was class co-valedictorian in 1971. He received his law degree with honors from Duke University School of Law in 1974.

The Democratic field has 10 candidates for the April 30 primary.

They are five-term Democratic state Sen. Linda Melconian, who has rented a home in West Springfield; state Sen. John Olver of Amherst; state Rep. Christopher Hodgkins of Lee; former state Reps. James Collins of Amherst and Sherwood Guernsey of Williamstown; Hampden County Commissioner Leonard Colamore of Springfield; Easthampton attorney John Arden; Amherst peace activist Lisa Baskin; Smith College professor Donald Robinson of Ashfield, and Adams real estate broker John T. Zelazo.

Special election, special circumstances

27 congressional hopefuls sprinting toward April 30 primary

By Raymond J. Lamont
Berkshire Eagle Staff

The Feb. 8 death of U.S. Rep. Silvio O. Conte, combined with the Feb. 28 announcement by Corinne Conte that she would not seek the seat her husband held for 32 years, opened doors that a torrent of Western Massachusetts political figures are hoping to rush through.

To date, the race to fill Conte's Washington post has attracted the candidacies of two state senators: West Springfield's Linda J. Melconian and Amherst's John W. Oliver. It has drawn the interest of savvy political veterans such as state Rep. Christopher J. Hodgkins, D-Lee; and former state Reps. Steven D. Pierce, R-Westfield, gubernatorial candidate last fall; James G. Collins, D-Amherst; and Sherwood Guernsey, D-Williamstown.

The list of candidates also includes the likes of Amherst psychologist Stephen Bloomfield, Pittsfield attorney Janelyn Patashnick, Westfield lawyer Patrick R. Boland and Adams real estate salesman John T. Zelazo.

In all, 27 individuals have taken out nomination papers in pursuit of the congressional seat. Many of them have neither held nor sought political office in the past, and most concede they are fighting an uphill battle. But most also believe that, in this special election, the peak may be reachable.

"This is not a lark," said Boland, who is not related to retired U.S. Rep. Edward P. Boland of Springfield. "This special election involves a unique set of circumstances."

The most conspicuous of those is an April 30 primary date that essentially

ELECTION, continued on B4

Many newcomers join race for Conte's seat

■ ELECTION, from B1

makes the race a sprint. The general election is set for June 4.

"If this were a case in which a congressman simply announced he would not run again in 1992, that would give the political machines time to gear up and do what they always do," said Boland. "But it's not — and I don't think they can."

Meanwhile, a ballot-access referendum question passed by Massachusetts voters last year cut the required number of nomination signatures from some 2,100 to 967. And the demographics of the sprawling district show that while Pittsfield, Holyoke and West Springfield all have populations of more than 40,000, there is no central metropolitan and political center that could spawn a dominant candidate.

Most observers believe that there is indeed no clear front-runner yet, particularly on the Democratic side of the ballot.

'Very special' election

"We're not just talking about a normal special election," said Democratic candidate Bloomfield. "We're talking about an election that is very special."

He and a number of human service associates who have encouraged him to run have researched data on past voter turnouts. The Bloomfield camp projects that 10,000 votes could win the Democratic primary.

"We're looking to mobilizing teachers, hospital employees and other health service workers to fight layoffs, school closings, tuition hikes and budget cuts," said Bloomfield. "We really do think we might be able to muster enough support to win. I don't think it's out of the realm of possibility."

Several candidates from outside the political spectrum said they believe that voter disenchantment with politicians and the political process may actually give them some advantages.

"People are looking for new approaches and ideas," said Patashnick, undaunted by the presence of Pierce on the Republican ballot. "I believe I can bring that to the people of the 1st District."

"Too often, voters become disenchanted with the political process because they feel politics is controlled by a small group of insiders and that we, the people, do not really count. Well, I think one person can really make a difference."

Outside of realm

Bloomfield noted that Massachusetts voters last fall elected to venture outside the normal political realm for both candidates in the gubernatorial race. Victorious Gov. William F. Weld is a former in the Boston area and served the Reagan administration in the Justice Department. Democratic candidate John R. Silber ran while on a leave of absence from his post as Boston University president.

"All one has to do is look at that situation and realize that political experience, at this point in time, is not necessarily an advantage in the minds of the voters," Bloomfield said.

Zelazo — the perpetual maverick candidate who tried to mount a presidential campaign in 1988, ran against Guernsey in the state Senate primary last fall and has vowed to make another presidential run in 1992 — said any and all candidates could have a chance.

"Sometimes I do wonder if I delve a little too far from reality," he said. "But if people can talk about Silber as being a potential presidential candidate, who's to say I can't be a serious candidate for Congress? A few weeks ago, we were ready to hand this to Corinne Conte, and when you really look at it, what qualifications does she have? She's a [real estate] broker like me."

Several candidates had said they would not run for the congressional seat if Conte entered the race.

One thing that may keep non-political candidates at bay is the specter of campaign financing.

Zelazo said he has thus far spent $20 a week on the campaign trail, primarily to put gas in his car. Hodgkins, meanwhile, is already working with more than $100,000 in campaign funds and pledges.

Projected estimates for mounting a winning campaign have ranged upward from $200,000 — roughly $20 per vote for the eventual winner.

"That's one problem we have," said Bloomfield, "not just from a financial standpoint, but from a moral one as well. Should we be raising $300,000 to try to win this campaign, or should we take the money we do raise and put it toward performing some social service on our own? Maybe we should give it to Weld to try to balance the [state] budget and ward off some of these cuts in human services and education."

He added, "I wonder, though, whether campaign money will make the big difference. I think the voters are disenchanted with the cost of politics, too. I don't see this as a voting auction, and I don't think the voters do, either."

"We're looking at a lot of unknowns, and I don't just mean in terms of the candidates," Boland said.

"It's exciting just to be involved and to be a part of the dialogue

Dear Mr. Card,

Thank you for your previous concerns regarding minority rights in general and the seven million Christians in Egypt in particular.

We urge you to place this subject on the Middle East agenda of peace. Minority rights in the Islamic world are just as important as Palestinian rights in Israel.

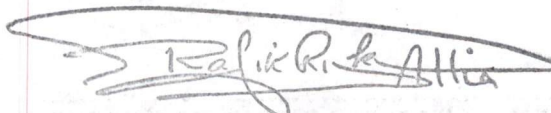

The Christian Egyptians suffer state discrimination and their religious freedom suppressed. Christians cannot build new churches or repair old ones without nothing less than a Presidential permission. Christian youth are deprived of employment and those employed are deprived of promotion to leadership positions. Private entities including the American Embassy are recently and tacitly pressured to hire people with an eye on their Islamic faith.

Individuals who convert to Christianity are detained and tortured by the Government according to the State Dept. report 1990.

Peace and stability in the Middle East is not solely dependant on the Palestinian Israeli problem but would only be achieved by Secularization and Democratization of the area. This process must start with the respect to the human rights of the indigent population.

We pray for your continued success and hope that this sensitive topic be addressed with the Egyptian Government at every conceivable opportunity in the coming months.

With our best wishes and support

PRESS RELEASE

January 24, 1991

IMPRISONED CONVERTS SUBJECTED TO TORTURE IN EGYPT

As Western governments tenaciously attempt to hold together the delicate Arab coalition connected with the Persian Gulf war, Islamic extremists are taking advantage of the opportunity by employing hard-handed tactics against non-Muslim minorities.

Western human rights organizations are reporting increased attacks, including violent murder, imprisonment, and torture against Christians and other minority groups. In countries such as Egypt, Turkey, Sudan, and Pakistan, Islamic fundamentalists have been violently lashing out against Muslim converts to Christianity. One such example occurred in Egypt against three converts.

Christian Solidarity International (CSI), headquartered in Zurich, Switzerland, with offices in Washington, D.C., reports that three recent Christian converts in Egypt are suffering from various forms of torture and drug injections. A reliable source who visited two of the young men in prison claims that they showed signs of suffering from hunger and the effects of torture, including electric shocks and drug injections.

The two Egyptians, Mustafa Mohammed Said Al-Shirkawi (27) and Muhammad Hussein Sallam (25), are being detained at Abu Zaabal Prison. A third man, Hassan Muhammad Isma'eel Muhammad (21) was also arrested. On November 24, a court hearing determined that there was no substantial evidence of their having conducted "actions against a heavenly religion (Islam)." However, the prosecutor appealed the court's decision and the three remained in prison while awaiting a second trial. If convicted, they could be sentenced to up to 8 years in prison under Articles 95 and 98 of the Egyptian Penal Code. On December 16 they were once again declared innocent by the court, but still remain in prison. Concern has been raised for the fate of the third young man, Hassan Muhammad, who has not been heard from since his last arrest.

A recent visit to the prison revealed that Saik al-Sharkawi and Sallam have since undergone new forms of torture, including suspension in the air with their wrists shackled, starvation, solitary confinement in dark cells, and incessant verbal harassment. The men appeared to be in poor physical condition and mentally disoriented as a result of forced drug injections. At an inquest, Sallam, who before imprisonment was strong and athletic, was seen doubled over in pain, complaining to the judge that he was too weak to continue and that he hadn't eaten in three days.

Under the emergency act of 1978, the Egyptian security forces can legally detain a person for 30 days before charges are brought against them. As is the case of the three Christians, one could be arrested and released on a continuing basis without ever being charged for a crime.

At the request of CSI, Senator Arlen Specter (PA) asked that the State Department to act on behalf of the three men. The reply from the State Department was simply: "We will try to attend the proceedings, if their cases ever come to court."

Sympathizers for Christian minorities living under Islamic repression feel that the fate of the three young Egyptian converts, as well as for countless others throughout the Muslim world, are seriously being jeopardized, while the concern for human rights by our government is abandoned in exchange for Arab "cooperation" with US efforts to defend their Islamic homeland. Dear Andy:

I wanted to briefly renew my request for a meeting at the earliest possible date to discuss with you a number of current initiatives here at the National Center for Housing Management (NCHM).

One of our primary efforts at this juncture pertains to drug and alcohol abuse in government assisted housing. The Realistic Approaches to Drug and Alcohol Reduction (RADAR) program will impact millions of low and moderate income households in the United States.

Unfortunately, one of the things we have discovered is with so many organizations (both governmental and non-governmental) involved, each having concerns as to turf and focus, it is difficult to obtain effective coordination -- and this, in turn, is dependent upon understanding and mutual concern.

Our initiative will be launched shortly, and we feel what we have learned would be of substantial interest to you and to the President. We are anxious to share this information with you.

I hope you will take a few moments to contact me regarding our request, and look forward to hearing from you.

Dear John:

Thank you for your words of encouragement regarding my request to help the Administration in some capacity. I have talked to Jose Martinez and have been encouraged by his response.

You and Nancy are very special people. I'm privileged to have friends like you and I very much appreciate your support.

Sincerely,

John S. Autry

Dear Andy:

I thought you would be interested in knowing my opinion, for what it's worth, that Steve Pierce would be the strongest candidate in the forthcoming special election to fill the 1st Congressional seat.

I can assure you the same Democratic resources if not more will be marshalled behind Steve's campaign as were used in Jane Swift's successful Senate race in which I personally put up 300 lawn signs on Democratic household lawns and used my TV program as an invaluable campaign tool on her behalf.

Steve is your strongest candidate.

Sincerely yours,

Watch Arlos' TV show

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

Recently I watched the TV show "Inside Government," which is hosted by County Treasurer and City Councilor Peter Arlos. I thought the show was not only informative, but entertaining as well.

Unlike many talk shows, it lets the viewers air their ideas and opinions either over the telephone or by writing letters to the program, which is heard on Century Cable, Channel 11. Peter Arlos listens to their views and discusses the various political and social issues without being judgmental or insulting a person's intelligence.

At a time when respect for our political servants in local, state and the federal government has eroded, Peter Arlos has a program that is a refreshing change. He tells it like it is concerning what local and county government does and doesn't do.

Peter Arlos has always cared about people, especially those that society, and unfortunately some of our political servants, have ignored or forgotten: neglected children, seniors, the homeless, the slow learner and other physically and emotionally disadvantaged, many of them non-voters. I urge everyone to watch this program. Look for it in the television section of The Eagle. The public will benefit.

Arlos Increasing Public Awareness

To the Editor:

Now that "Inside Government with Peter Arlos," the call-in show featuring County Treasurer Peter Arlos as its sole personality, is shown on television throughout the county, I have the opportunity to observe what is truly a unique experience.

Very few public figures repeatedly expose themselves to the questions and criticisms of their constituents and take the unscreened calls of the public, answering its questions with such honesty and grace. Politicians usually expose themselves to the public in TV and radio spots, in news releases written by their public relations people, or in set talks written by their speech writers.

Even in campaign debates the public gets only a few glimpses of their candidates, who have imposed limiting ground rules for the debate and have been coached and prepared by their staffs.

For 60-minutes, County Treasurer Arlos was able to maintain my interest and give me facts about local and state government that I did not know, even though I read a great deal and, as a former law clerk, law professor and assistant in the office of the United States attorney, try to keep on top of public affairs.

How many people knew that the state spent $7 million sending state employees, their spouses and their children to public colleges and universities? Who knew that state legislators from Berkshire County don't have to pay federal income taxes on the first $42,000 of their income? Now, thanks to Peter Arlos, county citizens know these things and are learning about what goes on in government.

Whether you agree with his opinions or not, Peter Arlos in his new found role as a television personality is bound to increase public awareness and thereby improve the democratic process. He is playing an important part by creating an informed electorate.

VOICES

Political Empowerment Of The Asian Pacific American Community

By Melinda C. Yee

The Democratic Party of the United States, organized by Thomas Jefferson in 1792, is the oldest continuing national political party in the world. Throughout its existence, the Democratic Party has been the "party of the common man," representing a broad base of diverse communities. All major civil rights laws and other social improvement laws, such as the Social Security Act, the Equal Pay Act, the Older Americans Act and the Voting Rights Act have been initiated by the Democratic Party.

Similarly, all major legislation positively impacting the civil rights of Asian Pacific Americans, such as universal voter registration, hate crimes, Japanese American redress, immigration, small business development and employment discrimination have been initiated by members of the Democratic Party.

Recognizing that the Asian Pacific American community has rapidly become an important political power in key states throughout the country, the Democratic Party has sought to include the community in its long term plans for winning in electoral politics. Democratic National Committee (DNC) chairman Ronald H. Brown has approved a plan for the development of a political outreach program that will involve Asian Pacific Americans nationwide in state and national elections as part of its coordinated campaign effort. This plan is divided into three sections: political, finance and services to constituents.

The DNC believes that it is critical that Asian Pacific Americans take an active role in the development of political strategies for the Democratic Party. Thus, four regional advisory councils to the DNC will be formulated and implemented in the next several months. The councils will be established in the East, South, Midwest and West. These councils will provide networking links for outreach, voter participation, campaigns and fundraising. A kick-off summit in which council members will meet with chairman Brown and Democratic Congressional leadership is proposed for the spring of 1991. This summit will involve high-level discussions on crucial concerns to the community and plans for continuing political involvement in the 1992 presidential election and beyond.

The DNC has established various political fundraising programs and events. Recently, Asian Pacific Americans have become major players in financially contributing to campaigns and political candidates. The DNC will enlist the aid of active Asian Pacific American Democrats who can deliver votes, people and dollars to coordinated campaigns nationwide. In addition, the DNC will continue to incorporate Asian Pacific Americans into various programs and events throughout the country. Political fundraising events for the DNC, honoring long-time Asian Pacific American Democrats, occurred this October, in California.

Asian Pacific Americans can greatly benefit from working closely with the DNC on political empowerment and fundraising. The DNC can provide Asian Pacific American constituents access to members of Congress and other key Democrats in Washington and nationwide.

When appropriate, the DNC will work with elected officials on relevant policy issues such as civil rights, university admissions policies, immigration, hate crimes, redistricting and reapportionment after the 1990 Census, equal opportunity and bilingual education as they develop through the legislative and administrative process.

In addition, as the Democratic Party platform is being developed prior to the presidential election, Asian Pacific American constituents can work with the DNC to incorporate language addressing specific concerns to the community.

The campaign training division and the Office of Voter Participation will continue to develop multilingual material and disseminate pertinent information to constituents and ethnic and non-ethnic press on a regular basis.

Through the campaign training division and the DNC, Asian Pacific Americans will be tapped for campaign and candidate training programs. Campaign training programs will cultivate skills for campaign managers and other positions in campaign operations. Candidate training programs will seek to identify and assist potential candidates in winning elective office.

And, finally, the DNC will assist in the development of recommendations to states for Asian Pacific American delegates to the 1992 National Convention.

Asian Pacific Americans can and will continue to gain empowerment in the Democratic Party through the Democratic National Committee's political outreach program. Active involvement by the Asian Pacific American community nationwide is crucial to make such a program truly successful. On behalf of chairman Ron Brown, I am hopeful that you will participate closely with us and activate your communities to work together with the DNC and the Democratic Party into the 1990s.

Dear Mr. Card:

Please accept the enclosed paperweight in commemoration of America's and Kuwait's recent joint struggle. America's vigorous support of the President's decision to help liberate Kuwait and the continued concern for the stability of our region is held in high regard by the people of Kuwait.

As I reflect upon the unprecedented events of this past year, I am overwhelmed that such brutality and devastation could be inflicted on one country by another. Today, in Kuwait, we are engaged in the arduous task of ridding ourselves of all the reminders of the brutal aggressor, as we are determined to restore the dignity of our people who have suffered so profoundly.

Though perplexing and trying times, we shall never forget the sacrifices made by the valiant men and women of Operation Desert Storm who voluntarily risked their lives to liberate Kuwait. No words can fully express the appreciation the people of Kuwait have for America. You will forever have our heartfelt appreciation for your commitment to the principles of freedom and human dignity.

In closing, may I add that I look forward to a long and mutually enriching friendship between our two countries.

Sincerely,

Saud Nasir Al-Sabah
