Dear Mr. Taylor:

Thank you for sending me your letters to the President. One dealt with immigration laws and enforcement and the other dealt with the economy, unemployment, tax revenue and the balance of trade deficit.

Please know that both letters have been forwarded to appropriate people for review and consideration.

Best wishes for 1992!

Sincerely,

Mr President,

We are all worried about the economy - unemployment, lost tax revenue and balance of trade deficit.

Yet the Internal Revenue Code has been modified to discourage domestic oil and gas exploration. That plus extreme environmental regulations and controls of natural gas usage have driven a gigantic industry out of the U.S.

The latest rig count shows a 30% decrease from last year. Last year's count of 1100+ was equal to count in Texas alone eight to ten years ago. Our oil companies have transferred their E&P budgets overseas.

yet, I am not aware of any effort by you and/or Republicans to correct this horrible mistake.

Mr President,

If all illegal aliens - of all races - were deported and our borders under control we would solve a lot of problems.

Why are you not enforcing the immigration laws? Come to Katy or Houston and I'll show you the illegals on the streets.

I asked Bill Archer the same question and his answer was that the immigration laws need to be changed. That may be true, but the current law or laws against illegal entry into the U.S. are not being enforced.

Dear Andy,

Just getting around to some long overdue correspondence. I hope this note finds you and your family happy and healthy.

1991 was a tremendous roller-coaster year for me. As you well know, the beginning of the year started slow for me with job opportunities being extremely scarce. However, the year has progressed in a very positive way. In June, I was hired by the NRCC to work with Incumbents in the early stages of their campaigns. This responsibility has taken on a life of its own in this "anti-incumbency" climate. I look forward to an exciting and challenging new year.

It appears that Andy Card will also have some new or enhanced avenues to explore in the New Year. So many rumors are flying about -- Good Luck in whatever opportunity you choose to accept.

The very best of happiness to the entire Card family.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. President:

At dinner last night with Sam Skinner we discussed a number of positive public opportunities for you in the near future.

In light of that discussion, I would like to suggest that you take the signing of the Surface Transportation Assistance Act outside of Washington, DC to a state such as California, that is experiencing high unemployment. The presence of union officials, contractors, and mass transit officials at a signing ceremony would send a positive jobs creation message.

Similarly, a state facing economic hardship, possibly in the Northeast, could be chosen as a site for the signing of the Unemployment Compensation legislation.

I appreciate your consideration of these suggestions.

Warm regards,

Dear Andy:

Enclosed are two inscribed copies of a fascinating novel by one of Newbury's faculty members.

Hope you have a chance to read yours, and perhaps you would be kind enough to deliver the other to President Bush in appreciation for his inspirational letter to our 1991 graduates.

The next time you are in the Boston area and have a free moment, we would love to show you the new and exciting developments here at the college.

Best wishes,

To the Graduating Class of 1991,
Newbury College:

I am delighted to join with your families and friends in congratulating you on your graduation.

Our Nation's future looks bright because we can rely on a tremendous resource: the knowledge, the enthusiasm, and the promise of people like you. Each of you can look ahead with confidence, knowing that higher education has provided you with the tools to help you attain your goals. Although this may be the end of formal schooling for many of you, it should not be the end of your lifelong pursuit of knowledge.

Regardless of the path that you choose now, it is the manner in which you live that will ultimately define your success. I have found that success is not measured by the sum of one's possessions; rather, it is measured by how a person takes care to ensure the well-being of others. I urge you to make service to your fellowman central to your life. By so doing, you not only will help to make this a better world but also will reap untold personal rewards.

Barbara joins me in sending you our best wishes.

Dear Andy,

I have just written a note of thanks to Senator Paul Harold, and I felt I should do the same for you.

It was great meeting with this man. The two of you have similar personalities, and the gift of making a person feel at ease.

I don't know how I got the courage to write to you, but it must have been because of the desperate situation I am in, with no place to turn. I know in your high position you might think it presumtuious, but I think of you as a friend. I am not the type that looks for favors, but when your life is on the line, you reach to someone you believe in.

Meeting with Paul Harold was great, he put little short stories into our conversation about you and him. Doing this he made me think back a few years when you were back here in Holbrook. I am not just saying this, I speak the truth, both Democrats and Republicans alike speak so highly of you.

If ever you do return here to run for any office and I can assist you in any way, please do not hesitate to call me. I know I have no high position in life, but it is all the small people that make a campaign work, as I am sure you know better than anyone how true this is.

I also wanted you to know I heard from Mike Sullivan, I still think of your children as youngsters, time does gooby. I have eight grandchildren and I must brag a little, my oldest granddaughter goes to Wellesley, and hopefully the younger one will follow, she is now at Braintree High. I am such a believer in doing for the young as they will be the backbone of this great nation we live in.

Thanks Andy for your effort now and in the future.

My best to you and your family.

Andy
I am ma!

Dear Mrs. Bush:

Advocates, Inc. requests the honor of having you speak at a Testimonial Dinner this coming Spring.

Advocates is a private non-profit human service organization that has for sixteen years been dedicated to providing education and support services to people with disabilities. Through our efforts, many of these individuals are now able to live independently in the community. Our services include group homes, respite beds and psychiatric emergency services in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Our testimonial dinner will be both a fundraiser and an opportunity to honor individuals who have made a significant contribution to our community. This year we will be honoring Representative Barbara Gray of Framingham, who has been a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives since 1973. Her major legislative interests focus on the disabled, women's and children's issues, abuse, domestic violence and divorce reform, and the elderly. Through her work in the legislature and her involvement with local non-profit agencies, Representative Gray has dramatically impacted the quality of services to the disadvantaged in our state. Her commitment is truly worthy of commendation. We have included additional biographical information about Representative Gray.

The tone and tenor of these times demand that we effectively communicate the nature and efficacy of our work, and that we recognize in a meaningful way the support that our work is given. If you were to be our to be our keynote speaker, awareness of the plight of people with disabilities would be heightened in our community. We believe that, with the presence of the two Barbaras - Barbara Bush and Barbara Gray - we will have the ingredients we need to make our dinner a success. The event will include entertainment at the Sheraton Tara Hotel in Framingham, beginning at 7:30 p.m. We anticipate a keynote address at 9:00. To accommodate your schedule, we could hold the dinner on any date between March 1 and June 30, 1992 with the exception of a few days in late April and early May.

You are the first choice of everyone. We would be highly honored were you to accept our invitation. We have enclosed more information about Advocates, but should you have any questions, please call us. Thank you for considering our request.

DEFINITIONS

On this Airbill, we, our and us refer to Federal Express Corporation, its employees and agents. You and your refer to the sender, its employees and agents.

AGREEMENT TO TERMS

By giving us your package to deliver, you agree to all the terms on this Airbill and in our current Service Guide, which is available on request. If there is a conflict between the current Service Guide and this Airbill, the Service Guide will control. No one is authorized to alter or modify the terms of our Agreement.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR PACKAGING AND COMPLETING AIRBILL

You are responsible for adequately packaging your goods and for properly filling out this Airbill. Omission of the number of packages and weight per package from this Airbill will result in a billing based on our best estimate of the number of packages received from you and an estimated "default" weight per package, as determined and periodically adjusted by us.

AIR TRANSPORTATION TAX INCLUDED

Our basic rate includes a federal tax required by Internal Revenue Code Section 4271 on the air transportation portion of this shipment.

LIMITATIONS ON OUR LIABILITY AND LIABILITIES NOT ASSUMED

Our liability for loss or damage to your package is limited to your actual damages or $100, whichever is less, unless you pay for and declare a higher authorized value. We do not provide cargo liability insurance, but you may pay an additional charge for each additional $100 of declared value. If you declare a higher value and pay the additional charge, our liability will be the lesser of your declared value or the actual value of your package.

In any event we will not be liable for any damages, whether direct, incidental, special or consequential in excess of the declared value of a shipment, whether or not Federal Express had knowledge that such damages might be incurred including, but not limited to, loss of income or profits.

We won't be liable for your acts or omissions, including but not limited to improper or insufficient packing, securing, marking or addressing, or for the acts or omissions of the recipient or anyone else with an interest in the package. Also, we won't be liable if you or the recipient violates any of the terms of our agreement. We won't be liable for loss of or damage to shipments of prohibited items.

We won't be liable for loss, damage or delay caused by events we cannot control, including but not limited to acts of God, perils of the air, weather conditions, acts of public enemies, war, strikes, civil commotions, or acts or omissions of public authorities (including customs and quarantine officials) with actual or apparent authority.

DECLARED VALUE LIMITS

The highest declared value we allow for FedEx Letter and FedEx Pak shipments is $100. For other shipments, the highest declared value we allow is $25,000 unless your package contains items of "extraordinary value," in which case the highest declared value we allow is $500. Items of "extraordinary value" include artwork, jewelry, furs, precious metals, negotiable instruments, and other items listed in our current Service Guide.

If you send more than one package on this Airbill, you may fill in the total declared value for all packages, not to exceed the $100, $500 or $25,000 per package limit described above. (Example: 5 packages can have a total declared value of up to $125,000.)

If more than one package is shipped on this airbill, our liability for loss or damage will be limited to the actual value of the package(s) lost or damaged (not to exceed the lesser of the total declared value or the per package limits described above). You have the responsibility of proving the actual loss or damage.

FILING A CLAIM

ALL CLAIMS MUST BE MADE BY YOU IN WRITING: You must notify us of your claim within strict time limits. See current Service Guide.

We'll consider your claim filed if you call and notify our Customer Service Department at 800-238-5355 and notify us in writing as soon as possible.

Within 90 days after you notify us of your claim, you must send us all relevant information about it. We are not obligated to act on any claim until you have paid all transportation charges, and you may not deduct the amount of your claim from those charges.

Dear Mr. Card,

In The Washingtonian this month you are a projected member of President Bush's "A-Team". I am writing to express my desire to work as an assistant to "Mr. T".

My experience includes two internships with Senator Rudy Boschwitz, an internship at The White House, and a staff assistant position at The Desert Storm Homecoming Foundation. I am a lifetime member of the Inner Circle and, as is evident on my resume, have been involved in Republican activities all my life. You must know that any Republican from a state that would elect Paul Wellstone must be a die hard. I believe Roman Pompaduik, Director of Foreign Press and John Undeland, Senior Writer in Media Relations, can "vouch" for me as well.

I have enclosed a current resume for your perusal and will contact you later this week; I realize that you are very busy. Thank you in advance for any help or suggestions you may have.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Card:

On December 26, 1989 I wrote to you to offer encouragement and support that you seek the office of Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. On January 26, 1990 you wrote back to inform me that you had made a decision to remain on The White House staff.

I now write to you again to offer the same support if you reach a decision to seek the the U. S. Senate seat now held by Ted Kennedy. I would be willing to assist you in your fund raising efforts in the Fall River area and would be willing to visit you in Washington to discuss those plans with you if you make that decision.

I most recently assembled a prominent group of business and professional friends to host a $500.00 per per person fund raiser for Governor Bill Weld and presented him with the proceeds that exceeded $35,000.00. This was the first and only fund raiser that was held in the heavily Democratic Fall River that indeed impressed Peter Berlandi.

In addition I would like to participate in the re-election campaign of President Bush and ask that my name be placed on a list when a major fund raiser is held either in Boston or Washington in order to receive an invitation.

In conclusion, I wonder if it might be possible to obtain another photograph of President Bush and another set of Presidential cuff links and tie bar. What you were kind enough to arrange for me to receive in January 1990 was destroyed when the restaurant that is owned by my wife and I was destroyed by fire (see attached news clipping).

Dear Mr. Card:

I write this letter for three reasons. First to express my support of the President's most recent decision to take firm action in Panama and demonstration of his strength and will during the recent historic meeting in Malta. As a life-long Republican I am proud that he is our President. As a matter of fact I am anxious to work for his re-election in the area of fund raising even though I have been inactive in recent years.

The second reason I write is to tell you that I attempted to reach you by telephone during the election in 1988 to offer my encouragement and support to you to seek the office of Governor of Massachusetts. Having served as Appointments Secretary to Governor John A. Volpe it was my opinion then and now that you are the only Republican who can win in 1990. My opinions are further based on on informal surveys in Fall River and at SMU that we have a great opportunity to win the Governor's race but the candidates who are most active at this time lack the image, warmth and down to earth attitude to win. I know it is most difficult for you to give up the important and prestigious position that you hold to now come back to Massachusetts. I do hope that you keep your options open.

The third reason that I write to you is to request your assistance to obtain a color photograph autographed by the President and a set of cuff links and tie bar with the Presidential Seal that I can proudly display in my office with those of President's Nixon, Ford and Reagan. Staff of the former President's were kind enough to honor my request.

In closing I would like to mention that I have met you on at least three occasions, the last being when you visited SMU with Walter McCarthy.

Thanking you in advance,

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Tache:

Thanks for your recent letter in which you express your support for the President's actions in Panama. He is doing a fantastic job, and I am lucky to be a part of this Administration.

I also appreciate your interest in my activities. As you know, I made the decision not to run for Governor of the Commonwealth at this time, and I am comfortable with that decision.

As requested, I have enclosed an autographed photograph of the President. In addition, I will send you, under separate cover, the mementos you wanted.

Fire damages Westport restaurant

By Maureen Boyle
Standard-Times staff writer

WESTPORT — Fire raced through a waterfront restaurant early today, causing more than $300,000 worth of damage.

The blaze at Moby Dick, a seasonal restaurant near Horseneck Beach, apparently raged for more than an hour before residents at an adjacent marina spotted the flames at 1:45 a.m.

"The fire spread all through the restaurant," said Westport Fire Lt. William Baraby. "It looks like it had a good hour head start."

Close to 40 firefighters from Westport and Dartmouth rushed to the scene to try to save the popular restaurant as flames engulfed the interior.

"The way the roof is made, we had trouble ventilating it. It was real hot in there," Lt. Baraby said.

— Lt. William Baraby,

Department

Fire investigators believe the blaze was sparked by the improper use of an electrical cord, he said.

"It started in the kitchen and spread through the dining room," he said.

The fire was under control within 45 minutes and no injuries were reported. Fire Chief William Tripp credited the swift action by firefighters in helping to save as much of the restaurant as possible.

Firefighters from Little Compton, R.I., and Fall River covered Westport fire stations during the blaze.

The restaurant, located at 1 Bridge St. and owned by Nancy and Roger Tache, will need extensive renovations to reopen, Lt. Baraby said.

"All the timber inside, that's all got to be scrapped. All the wiring is exposed. The dining room was all open and the fire just spread through there."

SUBJECT: Business Referral Advisors

Dear Andy,

You may recall our brief but concise meeting, on June. 1990 on my interest to ascertain names and or agencies in the Government who could provide specialized Business advice in the Petroleum Industry. At the conclusion of our meeting, you suggested some preliminary procedures and other possible alternatives. I have been working towards them, and ready to present them to you. ?

If this is possible, I would like to determine if you would be available to meet before or after the upcoming November. 15th. 91, Republican Campaign Conference in Falmouth, MA or Saturday, or Sunday November November 23rd and 24th., 91 in Washington. DC If this is agreeable and or if you can suggest any other day and time, please confirm. //

Thank you for your time and interest.

Dear Andy:

For nearly three years, I have had the privilege to serve as Special Assistant to the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Legislation at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, and as Special Assistant to the Director as well as Director of Intergovernmental Affairs for the Peace Corps of the United States of America. These experiences have taught me much about federal, state and local government. It has been an honor to serve in the Bush Administration, and this has been an opportunity I shall long remember.

As you know, a few weeks ago, Peace Corps Director Paul D. Coverdell announced his resignation from the office. President Bush appointed him to over two years ago. Later this month, I will return to my adopted state of Georgia to join in the efforts to elect a Republican to the United States Senate in 1992.

Next year, the Georgia GOP has a terrific opportunity to regain the U.S. Senate seat we lost in 1986. Many of our sister states around the South have Republican representation in the Senate, and I believe that with the right candidate, our efforts will be realized.

As always, please know that your advice and counsel is welcome over the next year of my newest challenge. I look forward to hearing from you soon, and I know you will be rooting for our team on November 3, 1992.

Sincerely,

Dear Andy:

Hello! Its been much too long since we've been in touch and I hope that this letter finds you well. Things must be very busy for you in Washington, as they are here in Massachusetts.

I continue my work at the Weymouth Welfare Office, coordinating our managed health care options for medicaid recipients. Along those lines, there are some major changes forth coming with this program and that is my main reason for contacting you.

My present position is being phased out and I am being transferred to a different unit. Unfortunately my health lately has not been that great and I am not getting any younger. I believe with all the changes and this transfer to a much higher pressure position, my health will only deteriorate further and prevent me from enjoying my retirement.

I have given the Commonwealth of Mass. 12 years of service, however, due to not receiving the upgrades that others in the same position as myself have received, I am unable to afford taking the early retirement the state has offered its employees.

I remember several years ago when I received a letter from you, you mentioned that if there was anything you could do for me to let you know. I hope that you know, I would never ask anyone for a favor unless it was really important to me, and I feel this is. Therefore, I was wondering if you would be willing to take a minute to phone anyone you might know in the Weld Administration here in Boston who might be able to assist in providing me with a more equitable and attractive retirement package.

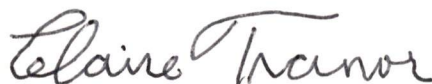

I truly feel that with my health and age, if I do not retire soon, I will be unable to enjoy any retirement I might get. Unfortunately under present fiscal conditions, I can not afford the early retirement package the state is presently offering and hope to enlist your assistance in reversing that.

I would not be honest if I did not admit I feel extremely awkward asking for your help, considering how I feel about political cronyism, however it has become very unsettling both mentally and emotionally around here which is now affecting me physically and I truly feel now is the time to leave.

Whatever you can do, if anything, to help would be greatly appreciated. Please feel free to call so we can talk further and catch up. Thanks for listening.

Sincerely,

Dear Denis - (Tordo)

Thank you for your letter informing me of your interest in the Massachusetts Republican State Committee. I have enjoyed serving on the Committee as a representative with Kathy Roberts from Avon, Braintree, Holbrook and Quincy since 1976.

Recently I decided that my duties at The White House have made it such that I cannot devote appropriate time to the specific Party responsibilities in the Norfolk District. I will not be running for re-election in 1992.

Please keep me up to date on your plans.

My best wishes to all GOP activist.

Dear Andy:

Thanks so much for seeing Bob Perkins and me this week so we could make the case for the President participating in the $1 billion Chrysler technology center, the $1 billion new Jefferson plant in downtown Detroit, and the $100 million industry-DOE-DOT battery research facility. Enclosed is a press kit on the Jefferson plant which we didn't have when we saw you.

The health of the auto industry is critical to the American economy - steel, plastics, rubber, composites, leather, electronics, etc. Therefore, the President's association with one or all these events demonstrates his interest in domestic affairs. I hope it can be worked out.

Best wishes.

Sincerely,

Bill

ENVIRONMENT A TOP PRIORITY AT CHRYSLER'S NEW JEFFERSON NORTH PLANT

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. -- From the landscaped berms surrounding the plant to recycled solvents, Chrysler Corporation has made the environment a top priority in building it's Jefferson North (Detroit) Assembly Plant.

"We've made a strong commitment, as a corporation, to raise the bar when it comes to the environment," said Tom Breneiser, Jefferson Plant Manager.

"Recycling is the buzzword today and in a way, you might say that's exactly what we did with the plant site. We reclaimed 270 acres in the heart of Detroit, land that would have had very limited use for anyone else, and we put it to good use.

"This is Chrysler's first new plant in 26 years and it's fitting that we become a pioneer in using new environmental technologies."

For example, the Jefferson plant will eliminate more than 30,000 tons of scrap each year by using returnable containers and dunnage instead of cardboard and wooden pallets.

Likewise, all the totes and drums which are used to transport liquids will be recyclable. Traditionally, 55-gallon drums and other metal containers were thrown away after one use, sold to another company or returned to the supplier.

Plans call for above-ground storage tanks for gasoline, oil and solvents to prevent contamination of any underground water supplies. These tanks will be located inside containment barriers for added protection.

An on-site waste water treatment facility has a capacity to treat 500,000 gallons of plant process water per day, ensuring that water discharged to municipal sewers meets or exceeds all government requirements.

A drain tile 30 feet underground will also prevent contamination of local ground water.

Reducing air pollution was another important element in the planning of the nearly $1 billion Jefferson plant. An innovative, volatile organic compound (VOC) removal system will greatly reduce any air pollution from the paint spray booths.

Air from the plant's three paint booths will be exhausted into a freestanding VOC building. Paint particles will be removed through a series of polyester filters and solvent-laden air will pass through carbon beds and rotors to remove VOCs. Even the polyester filters will be burned as fuel in 2,200 degree Fahrenheit kilns used by cement manufacturers.

In another move to eliminate VOCs, a dry powder will replace solvent-based materials used to protect vehicles from stone chips. In addition, all cleaners used in the plant will be water-based or made with low VOC-material content.

The solvents used to clean paint lines and equipment will be recycled and reused in the plant.

Production at the 1.7 million square foot facility will begin in early 1992. The Jefferson plant will build a new Jeep® sport utility vehicle code-named "ZJ."

CHRYSLER RECYCLES PAINT SLUDGE

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. -- Wet paint sludge is being recycled instead of taking up valuable landfill space, thanks to an innovation at Chrysler Corporation's Dodge City/Warren (Mich.) Truck Assembly Plant.

In a joint development with Haden Environmental Corporation of Troy, Mich., Chrysler's paint overspray is converted to a non-hazardous powder. That powder, in turn, is being used as a filler for pavement cracks by a local chemical company and as underbody paint on Dodge trucks.

The test project is working so well, Chrysler plans to install a similar process at its Jefferson North Assembly Plant, scheduled to open in early 1992.

"This is a real environmental breakthrough," said Chrysler's Yogen Rahangdale, Manager, Paint and Anti-Corrosion. "We've discovered a way to ease the burden on area landfills and found a useful home for what was once an unwanted by-product."

Paint sludge is the by-product of spray painting automobiles. In most automotive assembly plants, as much as 40 percent of the paint ends up as waste. Treated water captures that waste to make handling easier. The paint sludge is typically hauled to landfills for disposal.

Haden's DryPure™ process dries the paint sludge and processes the fumes. The paint sludge's volume and weight is reduced by approximately 90 percent. The system, which began operating at the Dodge City complex in November, 1988, is the first of its kind in the world.

The Warren-based plant typically produces about 11,000 pounds of paint sludge, or 1,100 pounds of powder, a day. In a little more than two years, Chrysler has converted 5.2 million pounds of sludge into 616,000 pounds of powder.

"Companies are paying millions of dollars to clean up waste sites they used years ago and they may have to spend millions more in the future to clean up what they're legally disposing today," Rahangdale said. "This should reduce our potential future liability."

According to Arthur Gieger, Haden's President and Chief Executive Officer, fumes created in the sludge drying process -- called volatile organic compounds -- are captured and eliminated in a thermal oxidizer, and the heat from this process is used to heat the drier.

"By using Haden's DryPure system, Chrysler's Warren Truck Assembly Plant is helping to make a dent in the country's air pollution and landfill problems," Gieger said.

Weicker ... who after being elected made the establishment of an income tax the centerpiece of his first year in office." Weicker at the signing ceremony: "When I sign this budget, [CT] will be closing the book on its past and it'll be facing toward the future." But "some legislators contended that the Weicker [admin.] had simply pressured or bought out opponents with promises of local tax disbursements and pledges to consider pet projects. ... Weicker denied that the budget was the result of any improperly applied pressure tactics." The passage of the income tax leaves only 9 states without an income tax: AK, FL, NV, NH, SD, TN, TX, WA, WY. The CT law raises taxes and fees by $1B, but cuts CT's 8% sales tax to 6% (Kirk Johnson, N.Y. TIMES, 8/23). N.Y. TIMES editorial: "It's a measure of his courage, and the tenacity of the [Dem and GOP] legislators who refused to face up to the problem, that it took three ... budget vetoes before good sense prevailed" (8/23).

*9 ILLINOIS: AG PLAYS PARTY POOPER

Ex-AG Neil Hartigan (D) "'postponed' a reunion" of his '90 gov. campaign staff. The reason: Reports that AG Roland Burris' (D) "political operatives told employees they could lose their jobs if they attended." Hartigan: "I didn't want to jeopardize their livelihoods" (O'Malley/Collin, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, 8/21).

*10 MASSACHUSETTS: WH AIDE PONDER'S '94 KENNEDY CHALLENGE

Andy Card (R), chief deputy to WH CoS John Sununu, acknowledged 8/22 that he is considering a '94 bid against Dem Sen. Ted Kennedy (John Mashek, BOSTON GLOBE). Card "said some GOP officials had talked to him recently after a poll showed Kennedy's negative rating to be high among state voters" (see HOTLINE 8/2). GOPers, "who for the most part have fielded only token candidates to challenge Kennedy in the past, suddenly see the possibility of defeating a Kennedy in [MA], once an unthinkable prospect." WH political dir. Ron Kaufman -- Card's brother-in-law -- "is among those urging Card to consider the race." LG Paul Cellucci (R) said Card would be an "excellent candidate," and brushed aside suggestions that he or [Gov. Bill] Weld would also be interested in seeking the Senate seat." Other possible GOPers: State Treasurer/'88 Kennedy opponent Joe Malone and US Atty Wayne Budd (8/23).

WELD SAYS, THANKS BUT NO TANKS: "It appears that the image of Michael Dukakis' goofy headgear, worn during that ill-fated presidential campaign tank ride, will never fade." A Cape Cod resident "whose husband piloted the helicopter in which" Gov. Weld rode "to survey damage from Hurricane Bob wanted a picture of her husband in the craft with Weld. She was too shy to approach the governor herself, so a reporter obliged, using the woman's 35mm camera to get close-ups of the gov and pilot. When Weld spotted the camera, he offered to don the large, sound-muffling headset he was required to wear while the helicopter was under way. But assistant press secretary Virginia Buckingham, visions of Dukakis' smiling visage apparently dancing in her head, was horrified and intervened immediately. 'No, no -- please, don't,' she pleaded with Weld, who appeared nonplussed.

knew little about that network until details became public several months later," 11/86. Barger also reported that, at the same time, the CIA was given a 17-page specific inventory of the North supply effort: "It is unknown if Gates saw a copy of the inventory. The document also recommended the CIA take over the network's aircraft and other assets for about $4 million. But the CIA turned down the offer. Officials said Gates did not want the agency tainted by association of several key players assisting Oliver North." Sen. Dennis DeConcini (D-AZ): "He's got a problem. ... I don't want to charge him with perjury or not telling the whole committee until he gets a chance to tell us." Barger closed, referring to the 7/9 guilty plea of ex-CIA official Alan Fiers. He also noted Gates is a "subject" of the grand jury probe: "There are no indications that he faces criminal charges, although his activities fall within the scope of the investigation." Also, special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh will seek indictments in the next few weeks of "at least three current and former CIA officials" on cover-up charges (8/22).

*7 ABORTION: WICHITA'S WAR OF WILLS WON'T WANE

ABC's Jennings reported Judge Kelley's threat that pro-life demonstrators may have their financial assets seized if they continue their protests: "The protests have been going on for five weeks now, and there is no sign of them letting up." ABC's Chris Bury: "The get-tough policy of a federal judge has escalated into a war of wills." Operation Rescue's Rev. Pat Mahoney, announced he would go on a hunger strike. Mahoney, on tape, over a still photo of him being led away by authorities: "I cannot eat food while I am being held as a political prisoner in America." Bury: "National leaders of mainstream organizations opposed to abortion have been reluctant to support or criticize Operation Rescue. Many welcome any new attention to the abortion issue, but also worry about the tactics in Wichita. ... The continued use of children to block abortion clinic gates has alienated Catholic clergy who had first publicly supported the group's efforts." Bury, over shots of police dragging demonstrators and breaking up screaming altercations: "The repeated rushes to block cars of clinic patients, the harassment and confrontation have made more moderate opponents of abortion uneasy." ABC immediately moved to a clip of Bush on the golf course from 8/17: "When you hurt somebody else's rights, that's what I disapprove of." Bury's close: "National organizers had planned to leave town this weekend. But now that Operation Rescue leaders are in jail, the group vows to stay. And many here believe the tension will only worsen" (8/22). The big Operation Rescue rally, scheduled for Sunday 8/25, will now be led by Kansans, rather than national Operation Rescue figures (WICHITA EAGLE, 8/23).

Dear Andy,

On behalf of the entire Newbury College community, I want to extend our sincere appreciation for your responsiveness in initiating the letter to our graduates from the President. When I read it to the 5000 strong who attended commencement, everyone was noticeably touched.

The flag which accompanied the letter flew proudly overhead at the ceremony. It served as a dramatic reminder of the heroic campaign of our forces of Desert Storm.

I must tell you that in all the 29 Newbury graduation ceremonies in which I have participated, this is the only one at which virtually everyone in attendance joined in to sing the national anthem. Clearly, the crowd was feeling a strong sense of pride in America.

Once again, thank you and your staff (especially Linda Casey) for helping make Newbury College's 1991 commencement a most memorable occasion.

Hope we can have the opportunity to get together one day soon.

To the Graduating Class of 1991,
Newbury College:

I am delighted to join with your families and friends in congratulating you on your graduation.

Our Nation's future looks bright because we can rely on a tremendous resource: the knowledge, the enthusiasm, and the promise of people like you. Each of you can look ahead with confidence, knowing that higher education has provided you with the tools to help you attain your goals. Although this may be the end of formal schooling for many of you, it should not be the end of your lifelong pursuit of knowledge.

Regardless of the path that you choose now, it is the manner in which you live that will ultimately define your success. I have found that success is not measured by the sum of one's possessions; rather, it is measured by how a person takes care to ensure the well-being of others. I urge you to make service to your fellowman central to your life. By so doing, you not only will help to make this a better world but also will reap untold personal rewards.

Barbara joins me in sending you our best wishes.

U.S. socialism: Is it curable?

Among the articles of faith of modern conservatism is that the 1980s proved the superiority of capitalism over socialism. Few there are who will still deny that victory.

Indeed, in our time, there have been three great experiments in socialism; all are transparent failures.

The first, of course, is the Marxist socialist experiment of Lenin and Stalin, of Mao Tse-tung and Pol Pot, of Ho Chi Minh and Fidel. What did it produce? Tens of millions of corpses, hundreds of millions of blasted lives lived out in terror, suffering and misery.

The second is the authoritarian/democratic socialism of the Third World — from India to Africa to Latin America. Sustained by $1.2 trillion in western aid, loans and credits, this incarnation of socialism has likewise proven a ghastly failure.

A third great socialist enterprise was American liberalism's Great Society. As Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Jack Kemp notes, in the past quarter century, $2 trillion in tax dollars has been poured into programs to uplift America's poor.

And what do we have to show for it? Are American cities the "Model Cities" of LBJ's promise? Did poverty and crime disappear? Are American students better educated than their peers in foreign lands, or even their parents? Are the urban poor better off than they were 25 years ago?

No one even argues it. For one in every four young black males in the inner city is now in prison, or on probation or parole. Half the births of black women are out of wedlock. Half the graduating seniors from our high schools cannot do eighth-grade math. What is the percentage, one wonders, for the inner city: 90 percent? 95 percent?

With this record of unrelied failure, one would think that to sweep aside the remnants of a discredited socialism would be the easiest of all tasks — especially for a democratic society.

If we believe that, however, we underestimate the difficulty. On last month's trip to Poland and the Baltic republics, it was clear that while socialism was a dirty word, millions are addicted to the security blanket the socialist state provides. The young may look to the excitement of free enterprise, but many of the middle-aged and old view with apprehension the insecurity freedom brings.

We underestimate, too, the hold socialist ideology has on the collective mind of the western intelligentsia.

For many western intellectuals, this is not simply an idea to be accepted or rejected on pragmatic grounds.

To ask the modern socialist to surrender his belief in the perfectibility of man through the instrument of the state is akin to asking a Polish peasant to give up his Catholic faith because his religion did not save his country from Hitler or Stalin.

A third reason the welfare state may be with us forever is that its beneficiaries are now truly legion.

Not only are there tens of millions on welfare and food stamps, rent subsidies and Medicaid, there are millions more whose jobs depend on the permanence and growth of the welfare state. They are in government by the millions, but also in universities, civil rights groups, think tanks, foundations, private social agencies, schools, churches. They don't want the War on Poverty to end because, unlike the troops of Desert Storm, they never want to be mustered out.

To reduce the size, scope and power of the welfare state is to threaten their careers, income, social status. Organized, unionized and powerful, they will not give up what they have without a fight.

A fourth reason the task here at home may prove impossible is that America's conservative party, the Republican Party, has made a separate peace with the welfare state. Whatever disposition there was in the Reagan era to roll back Great Society socialism, it has dissipated if not disappeared.

Where, then, does hope lie? With the taxpayers alone.

If an enraged electorate can force Washington to cut back and one day cut off foreign aid and guaranteed loans to foreign regimes, socialism in the East Bloc and Third World will collapse in a heap. These regimes have bled their own countries so that only a steady, constant infusion of Western capital can prop them up.

If here at home the American people will likewise fight every tax increase — at the local, state and federal level — we, too, can starve socialism slowly to death. Clearly, the spirit is there. We see it in the resistance to taxes from Orange County to New York City, from Trenton to Albany, from Bridgeport to Philadelphia. The permanent tax revolt is capitalism's last best hope.

Like some cases of alcoholism, socialism is an addiction that requires a change of heart to cure. Like some cases of alcoholism, it is a disease that either eventually kills its victim, or forces a man, homeless, penniless, face down in the gutter, to change his way of thinking, to seek out a cure. We are not there yet; but we may be getting there.

ANATOMY OF A START-UP REVISITED

Another One Bites the Dust On March 15, 1991, Blackstone Bank & Trust Co. met the fate of five other Anatomy of a Start-up subjects: it folded.

The Boston bank, which was first profiled here in October 1988 ("The Money Game"), was founded on some innovative ideas. Founders Daniel Dart and Ann Hartman, both of whom had big-bank experience, set up operations in a single facility. By keeping overhead costs low, they offered high interest rates to depositors, enticing even out-of-staters to bank by mail. They lent the money to commercial projects in communities that were generally overlooked by established lenders.

What went wrong? "The high rate of interest and the poor rate of return on their loans croaked them, basically," said the Massachusetts banking commissioner, according to an article in The Boston Globe the day after the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. packed up Blackstone's records. Dan Dart, who resigned as Blackstone's president last fall, adds that the bank received a fatal blow when the FDIC refused to allow it to raise additional capital through a form of subordinated debt securities back in the spring of 1989, then turned around and demanded it do so a year later. By then New England's banking situation had deteriorated so much that Blackstone hadn't a prayer of finding $2 million in new equity.

Blackstone's deposits were bought by BayBank Boston for the nominal sum of $1,000, and the FDIC assumed its loans.

Dear Andy,

It has been a while since our last correspondence. Since you have always been interested in what the average guy-on-the-street thinks, I'll run some ideas by you concerning the 1992 elections. Basically, I don't know how much longer the American taxpayer will tolerate a federal budget deficit. This deficit is comprised of the savings & loan bailout, overspending in military programs, and over regulated social programs.

As far as the savings and loan bailout, let's call a spade a spade. The president, the congress and the regulators do not know what to do about this problem because it is getting worse, not better. My solution is let the marketplace handle the problem. Simply, let some of the banks fail. Pick a few small banks in a regional pattern, one in the northeast, one in the northwest, etc. then them fall flat on their faces. Don't bail them out. By regionalizing the damage few people will get hurt, however as soon as this happens, the other failing banks in that region will either go out of business or find a white knight to bail them out. The current federal involvement is actually preventing the marketplace from using internal pressures to close or assimilate the failing institutions. Let the marketplace and the experts solve the problem. Yes, some of the rich will get richer, but that's business. I am sure the democrats will have a field day with this idea, but it will work better than the current plan. The bottom line is if the feds continue in this venture of bailing out the S&L industry, the administration will sink deeper into this pit of quicksand.

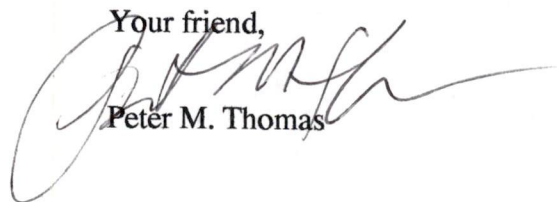

Second, the military needs to trim more money from its budget. In today's world, America does not need to be "the arsenal of democracy" any longer. Our strategic stockpile is a waste of resources that our grandchildren will be paying for well into the 21st century. We need to reduce the number of aircraft carriers that we have in the active fleet. We need to reduce the nuclear submarine fleet by about 30-45%. Now this seems like a steep cut in our most secure nuclear deterrent, but that deterrent philosophy is old hat. Besides, no one has to tell the Soviets that we are reducing our submarine fleet. It will just confuse them. We also need to remove the remaining troops in Germany and Korea. Eventually, the rest of the Pacific Rim should be abandoned. The present containment strategy is also old hat. It is also a waste of money and resources. It is very hard to make sense of a policy that closes Fort Devens while leaving Clark AFB open. We should be spending our money at home on domestic issues not abroad. The B-52 fleet needs to be finally retired, without replacement. In this age of electronic warfare, missiles, lasers and the like, these B-52s are mere relics of an era gone by. The B-52 fleet is past its prime and costs a lot of money to maintain. Also the C-5 fleet should be transferred to the Air National Guard. The C-5s cost plenty to maintain and have some structural problems that will eventually come back and haunt the military in regard to public opinion. What about the battleships, they are also relics with little strategic naval value, but presidents have been using them since 1906 when Teddy Roosevelt used them in Portsmouth, NH to put pressure on the Russians and the Japanese to end their war. They look good in the water, but that is about it. Granted, it will be hard to convince the old hard liners that this is the way to go, but it is the only way to lower the cost of spending on the federal level. The admirals and generals need to be told that the taxpayers don't want to pay for their little toys anymore. Those who disagree need to be replaced. I think the following statement will underscore everything I've said concerning national defense: If we are to fight a war in the 21st century, we need to fight it not only to win but for the right reasons, and not with the weapons of the 20th century.

Finally, we come to my pet peeve. I could go on and on about how much money is wasted on social programs. The S&L bailout is a mere drop in the bucket compared to general relief, welfare, food stamps, etc. We spend too much money on the down and out with little results. It isn't so much the money, it is the social turmoil that is caused by our very sincere resolve to help the helpless. Since 1960, the liberal agenda in this country has failed to solve poverty, but these do-gooders have institutionalized the poor. We began this country with the Puritan work ethic. Now, we pay people to be poor and uneducated. The president needs to admit total and complete failure of these programs and change the way we support the poor. Instead of billions for general relief and welfare, let's spend billions on job training, early childhood education, and drug enforcement. The president needs to commit to a plan to eliminate general relief and welfare by 1996. Let him challenge the nation to pull every one, regardless of color, creed or religion, out of the gutter of poverty and homelessness. We need to show "tough love" on those who are dependent on a system that robs them of their dignity.

Andy, I sincerely believe the president will be re-elected in 1992. However, in the greater scheme of things, it doesn't matter who the president is in 1992. It does matter in terms of what legacy is he going to leave behind him in 1996. We need a strong country. We need a lean, mean country ready to do battle with the new European Economic Community, with Japan, with the rest of the Pacific Rim. America will fail in those challenges if we are still committed to big national defense outlays and big social spending at the expense of the middle class taxpayer. Enclosed are a few articles of interest.

Dear Ms. Toomey:

Thank you for your recent letter. Your points on the war on drugs are well taken, and President Bush agrees with you that we must do all we can to rid our country of the scourge of drugs. That is why, at the beginning of his Administration, the President established the Office of National Drug Control Policy (ONDCP). The ONDCP is now headed up by Bob Martinez, former Governor of Florida, and has made significant progress on the war against drugs.

Much more needs to be done, however, and concerned citizens like yourself can help to make the difference. We appreciate your input, and I assure you that President Bush will continue to do all he can to win the war on drugs.

Thank you again for writing. Please give my regards to all my friends in Braintree.

Dear Mr. Card:

I am writing from your old district in Braintree. I am also writing as a former teacher, and as one who is extremely pleased at the leadership that President Bush demonstrated in the conduct of the war in the Persian Gulf.

I have ~~that~~ observed that many teenagers are displaying flags on their cars and are otherwise proud of what President Bush has accomplished. With this in mind I would like to see the President capitalize on this popularity to win the war on drugs. That could be the theme- Now help me win the war on drugs! It would take a personal appeal from the President to the teenagers. I always found that they liked special attention, and also a positive approach. They are also altruistic, and the fact that the President was asking them to wage a war on drugs to set this country free of them just might work. He could call on General Swartzkopf, General Neal and other popular figures to help him to wage this war also. It certainly is needed more than anything else to make this country internally strong. "Create a Strong America" is another slogan. After all we were able to win in the Gulf because we were able to put strong men and women on the field. Also the invention of the Patriot missile came about because its inventor was mentally strong and able to invent it.

For my part, I believe that one reason this country has not been able to conquer its drug problem is that the present educational system does not provide a sequential science program. At least I personally have never seen one. Everything is fragmented. Therefore very few students have the proper background in biology to actually know what alcohol and drugs will do to them. Also their curriculum does not require any out-of-school work in local hospitals to teach them the need to care for their health. I believe an entirely new concept of education is needed in this country. Neither money nor individual programs can do it. New concepts are needed. To my knowledge no group of people is working on this.

Just this past week in Braintree the lives of two wonderful police officers ended just because teenagers who, from what I read, were on drugs and alcohol, ran them off the road. This is so sad and unnecessary. But under present conditions there will be more such tragedies.

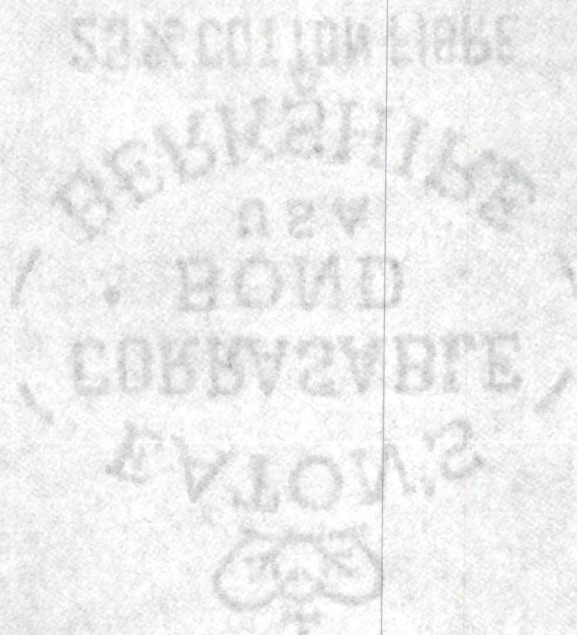

Please do encourage President Bush to use his present popularity to begin a war against drugs. It is he personally who must do it. And at the same time encourage the person in charge of education to begin a study to provide an entire new concept to American education, particularly in the area of science, including biology and health. The President is obviously a man who has taken care of his health as is proved by his stamina. All of this must be a part of the war on drugs.

It will take a concerted effort and a many-pronged approach. Also it must be plotted and planned in the same manner as the team approach to the war in the Gulf. That would not have succeeded but for careful planning on the parts of many people. But they were working together and not separately, and that is why the strategy worked so well.

I do hope that you will give these ideas serious thought because I believe drugs are the number one threat to this country. Also I would be happy to meet with you whenever you are at home if you would like to have me expand on any of these ideas, particularly the new concepts for education.

Sincerely,

Mary F. Toomey

2 Braintree officers die in chase

BRAINTREE — A police cruiser on a high-speed chase slammed into a tree on Middle Street Friday night, killing a police sergeant and the department's senior lieutenant.

Lt. Gregory Principe, 43, and Sgt. Ernest J. DeCross, 40, both of Braintree, were killed when their cruiser slammed into the tree in a residential neighborhood while chasing three youths who witnesses said had beer in their car.

Police took a 16-year-old male and two other teens into custody after chasing them on foot when the three abandoned their car.

Principe died of massive head injuries at Quincy Hospital at 7:20 p.m., Elizabeth Collins, a nursing supervisor said. DeCross was pronounced dead at 7:34 p.m. on arrival at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

Principe, a former deputy police chief, joined the Braintree force in 1976 after five years with the Metropolitan Police. He was the youngest yet most experienced lieutenant on the force, an emotional Police Chief Edward Flynn said Friday night.

Principe has a wife and four children. Flynn described him as "very intelligent, very dedicated."

DeCross joined the force in 1978 and was promoted to sergeant in June 1990. He had a wife and two children.

DeCross' father, who is a special police officer in Braintree, was one of the first officers on the scene and had to be pulled away, witnesses said.

Flynn described DeCross as "dedicated to duty, certainly one who was one to extend himself. It was his dedication that brought him to the scene."

The chief added: "They were both capable officers, they'll both be missed."

Police said the two were together in the cruiser as part of a "routine ride around town," Flynn said.

The chief said the deaths were the first on-duty in the department since the Sacco and Venzetti case in the 1920.

According to Flynn, another police cruiser had spotted a maroon Oldsmobile speeding on Middle Street, but it was travelling too fast for the cruiser to catch.

Principe, who was driving in the area with DeCross in the cruiser, radioed that they were expecting the vehicle to come their way, police said. Seconds later, the maroon car slammed into the rear of the cruiser, spinning it around.

Police said the cruiser started to chase the Oldsmobile and caught up to it within a half-mile, only to be struck again by the car.

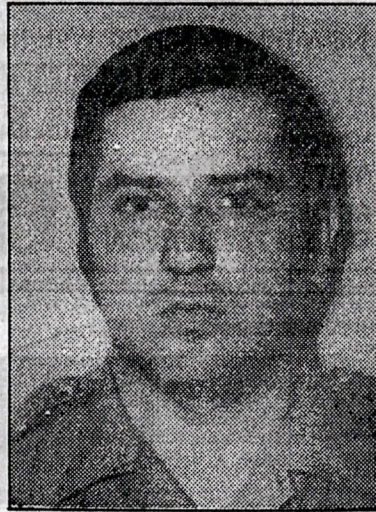

Principe lost control of his cruiser and it slammed into a tree at a bend where Arnold Street splits from Middle Street, across from the John Scott House nursing home.

The front-left section of the cruiser was crushed against the trunk of the tree, which is more than 3-feet thick.

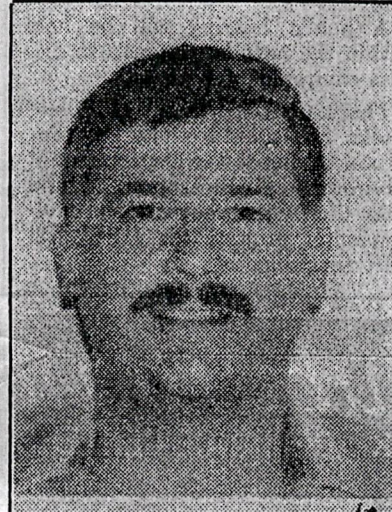

The entire chase lasted less than five minutes and spanned less than a half-mile.

Police said they caught two teenage passengers of the vehicle almost immediately, and the youths gave police information that led to the arrest of the driver 90 minutes later in Quincy.

The 16-year-old driver was

Lt. Gregory Principe

Sgt. Ernest DeCross

charged with manslaughter, two counts of operating under the influence of alcohol, driving under influence of drugs, driving to endanger, two counts of motor vehicle homicide, two counts of drunken driving to endanger, two counts of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon — a car, leaving the scene of a personal injury accident, and being a minor transporting alcohol.

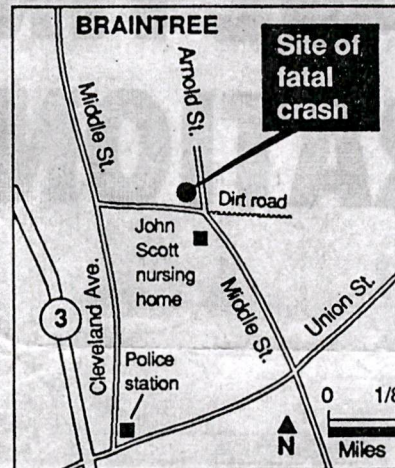

Police said the vehicle the youth was driving was not registered or insured. No charges were filed against the other two youths.

Chief Flynn, in discussing the accident, repeatedly stopped and cleared his throat. Staring into television camera lights, he struggled to maintain his composure.

Witnesses said emergency crews took from 10 to 15 minutes to free the officers from the cruiser. Following the crash, nurses ran from the nursing home to help.

"I heard the screech but didn't pay attention until I heard that thud," Rita Garish, a nurses aide at the nursing home, said. "I don't think I'll ever forget that noise."

Jeff Cronin and Derek Blake, both 15 and of Braintree, said they were walking down Arnold Street when a maroon car sped past them, with two teens throwing beer cans out the car window.

Stephen A. Ide/The Patriot Ledger

"They stopped when the car got as far into the bushes as it could on the dead end part of the street and they got out and ran," said Blake. "The other cruisers were right behind the one that crashed. We saw the cruisers, but didn't hear any sirens."

Meredith Anderson, and her daughter, Wendy, own the house at 242 Middle St. where the cruiser hit the tree.

"I thought the Junior High School had exploded," said Meredith Anderson, who heard no screech of brakes. "I never saw so much help come so quickly. The police were here in 30 seconds. We were walking out the door just as they showed up."

In the minutes following the crash, John Scott nursing supervisor Debbie McCaughlin reached a stethoscope into the cruiser to monitor the weak vital signs on the officers as rescuers awaited the Jaws of Life rescue tools.

Eric Arnold of Middle Street heard the crash clearly while cooking dinner in his kitchen about 75 yards away.

"They were swarming all over the car with two sets of Jaws of Life, but they couldn't get to them for a while," Arnold said as he watched police cordoned off the area with yellow hazard tape. "They rushed them straight out to the ambulance without trying to treat them."

According to Lt. Russell Jenkins, police only pursue fleeing vehicles when a felony is in progress or a vehicle is being operated in such a manner that it would endanger the public.

Jenkins said that, in his view, "had it been a full-blown pursuit, the officers would have been justified because of the manner in which the kid was operating the motor vehicle."

In 1986, Principe became the first police officer with a Norfolk County department to state openly that he had been offered — and refused — a chance to take part in a scheme to sell civil service police exams.

Ten police officers from other communities were indicted in 1986 for participating in the distribution of police exams, in what became known as the "examscam" trial.

At the time the offer was made to Principe in 1978, he was 31 with a family to support. He was about to become a sergeant after 150 hours of studying helped him top a civil service promotion exam with a score of 86.

But he later said he was incapable of accepting: "I couldn't have lived with myself if I had said yes," Principe told The Patriot Ledger in 1986.

A Republican Who's Unafraid To Experiment

It's spring in Wisconsin so two things are running: walleyed pike on the Wolf River and GOP Gov. Tommy Thompson in Madison. Democrats know they'll have better luck catching fish.

Wisconsin was the founding place of Progressivism in 1900 (Fighting Bob La Follette), but the irony of 1991 is that the state's leading progressive now is a conservative. Mr. Thompson, a 49-year-old life-long veteran of government, is succeeding politically with a "reform" agenda. In a state that voted for Michael Dukakis in 1988, Mr. Thompson won a second four-year term in 1990 with 58% of the vote. He's the first Republican to carry Milwaukee County since 1946.

It's a cliché to say that states are "laboratories," but with Washington stuck in intellectual gridlock states have also become the main outlet for political daring. Tommy Thompson is a disarmingly down-to-earth rabble-rouser who symbolizes the conservative opportunity to rethink government.

"Most Republicans are too timid to go out and try something," says Gov. Thompson, a native of Elroy, Wis. (pop. 1,500), who looks and talks like a friendly, rum-

Potomac Watch

By Paul A. Gigot

pled uncle. "They should think of it as a chance to reform the system." That system is the barnacled, rusting state created by interest-group liberalism. Mr. Thompson says he sat in the legislative minority for 16 years, watching Democrats "have only one answer: Spend more money. But nothing changed. I thought, 'There has to be a better way.'"

He began by paring back the income tax, phasing out inheritance taxes and preserving a 60% capital-gains exclusion. Other governors spent their mid-1980s' surpluses into today's huge deficits. Mr. Thompson passed it back in tax cuts, which stimulated growth and helped keep his budget in balance. He also fought Democratic legislative majorities on spending, using his line-item veto 683(!) times. He's failed to pass much property-tax relief, though he's trying again this year.

Mr. Thompson's most intriguing moves have come on social-policy ground—welfare and education—rarely trod by Republicans. Evan Zeppos, a Milwaukee Democrat, credits Mr. Thompson with understanding that, "There's a policy void out there, to be polite about it." Many liberal Democrats had stopped thinking.

On education, he's led the nation in promoting "choice," even for private schools. His now-famous alliance with Polly Williams, the black Milwaukee Democrat, helped push a pilot plan through the legislature (though unions have since tied it up in court). Now he wants to break up the hidebound Milwaukee school district into four smaller, more reformable units.

Mr. Thompson has been even bolder in welfare reform. His Learnfare program required that teen-agers attend school or parents could lose their benefits. This year he wants to extend Learnfare to children ages 6-12. He also wants to refuse to increase benefits to parents who have a second child while on welfare, and to let teen-age parents marry without losing welfare (as they do now), among other reforms.

"We're trying to reinforce behavior that leads to success—school, work, families," says Scott Jensen, the governor's chief of staff. Results are a long way from in, but Wisconsin was the only state whose welfare caseload actually fell last year.

Some liberals deride all of this as "bride-fare," but the proposals build on two political insights. One is that the public thinks welfare requires some personal responsibility. The other is that conservatives can gain by changing the debate about government from inputs (spending) to outcomes (how many families leave welfare, or school dropout rates).

Part of Mr. Thompson's success so far has come from forging unusual alliances, such as with black Democrats. He won early good will by intervening to settle a Milwaukee school-desegregation dispute. His latest welfare reform is the creation of a black political appointee, Eloise Anderson. In last year's election, such outreach paid off as Tommy Thompson he won an astonishing 20% of the black vote, up from only 6% in 1986.

Mr. Thompson's popularity leads to questions about other ambitions, such as a 1994 challenge to grocery-store magnate and liberal Democrat, Sen. Herb Kohl. But the governor claims not to have Potomac fever. "Why would I want to give up being a governor, where you can be an executive and actually accomplish something," he says, "to go to Disneyland East over there to be one of 100, where you don't do anything?" Good question.

Dear Andy:

In September of 1989, the Department of Justice celebrated the 200th anniversary of the Office of the Attorney General, created by the Judiciary Act of 1789.

The enclosed publication sets forth the history of this office and recounts the event which was attended by President Bush and several distinguished former Attorneys General.

I hope you will find this book as handsome and informative as I have, and through the book will share in our celebration.

Sincerely,

Dear Andy:

What a world turmoil and what a comfort to know that the Bush Team is in charge!

I think of you often and the pressure, responsibility and privilege of service you are experiencing. I'm sure that Cathy, like Barbara, is a solid source of solace and support.

It seems as though it was just a few months ago we were gathered in the small meeting room in the city building in Groveland, Mass.- a certain Mrs. Bush and fewer than 18 people-listening to the reasons why George Bush would be a fine President. It was, in fact, the '78-'79 winter. I found the photo that appeared in the area newspapers of the group of seven with her in the middle of us.

Now that I'm settled in this part of the country, I'd like to be of further service to our President.

I hope the U.S. will continue to grow in its support, respect, appreciation and admiration of GHWB. He's tough, disciplined and resolute while maintaining a sensitivity to ultimate human values.

Do I sound proud and a bit biased?

Thank God he isn't a populist. We've needed a leader who understands tradition - the continuity of values and their applications - while being pragmatic and a realist with imagination.

"Keep up the good work," we say when not able to itemize merits. You have a grateful citizenry even if they don't know your personal responsibilities. I would like to be counted in the front line of that group.

RE: Possible inclusion in the President's State

DATE: January 4, 1991

As you hopefully now know as the result of a phone call from Sharon Miller, Chief of Staff of Governor R. McKernan, Passamaquoddy Technology, L.P. is a small Maine firm created by a small Indian tribe that is the owner of an exciting new technology which simultaneously scrubs flue gas emissions and recycles solid and liquid wastes. Developed as the direct result of funding from the Department of Energy's Clean Coal Technology Program in the early days of the Bush Administration, it is the first of the technologies to actually go on line. Reviewed just last month by senior staffers from the DOE and the Congress, they have proclaimed it the most successful example of how government can assist the private sector to clean the environment without the establishment of a complex regulatory structure.

We are proposing that President Bush mention the Scrubber as part of his State of the Union Address. It is the primary example of the success of his Administration on the number one environmental issue facing the nation in the 1990s. The Scrubber is located in the home state of the Majority Leader who was also the primary sponsor of the 1990 Amendments to the Clean Air Act. Finally, the governors of the Passamaquoddy Tribe, Bobby Newell and Melvin Francis, would very much like to be in the House Gallery for a "visual" that Jock described to me as "too good to miss."

Passamaquoddy Technology Recovery Scrubber Fact Sheet

The Recovery Scrubber is a patented technology which uses waste materials to scrub acid gasses and simultaneously recycles these wastes. By avoiding the cost of purchased scrubbing agents, eliminating the expense of disposing of the waste products, and generating income from sale of by-products, the system is expected to turn air pollution control into a source of profit in many installations. Unlike conventional acid gas scrubbers which add additional CO₂ to the atmosphere in the course of scrubbing SO₂ and NO_x, the Recovery Scrubber consumes CO₂ and produces no new waste.

While the Recovery Scrubber is applicable to all fossil fuel burning plants, commercialization efforts are being focused first on industries where the necessary waste reagent is generated on site and can be used to scrub emissions without transportation. These industries include cement (where the waste reagent is cement kiln dust), pulp and paper (where the reagent is wood ash) and waste to energy (where the reagent is incinerator ash). In each case the reagent is converted into potassium fertilizer, cement kiln feed, and distilled water. There is thought to be sufficient waste reagent to eliminate about one third of the SO₂ targeted in the 1990 amendments to the Clean Air Act.

The Department of Energy provided $6 million under Round II of the Innovative Clean Coal Technology Program for the $11 million full scale demonstration of the Recovery Scrubber at the Dragon Products Cement plant in Thomaston, Maine which came on line this week. The Recovery Scrubber has moved the most rapidly of any of the 16 demonstrations funded in Round II.

The Recovery Scrubber was invented by Dr. Garrett Morrison, a geochemist, while he was employed by the Passamaquoddy Tribe at the Dragon Products Company cement plant in Thomaston, Maine. The Tribe had purchased Dragon in 1983 with $2 million of the $40 million which it was awarded by the federal government in the Maine Indian Claims Settlement Act of 1980 (the remaining $23 million was borrowed). The Tribe turned its $2 million investment into $60 million during the five years that it owned the plant.

The Tribe retained the rights to the Recovery Scrubber when it sold Dragon in 1988, and Dr. Morrison is now the President and CEO of Passamaquoddy Technology, Inc., the managing general partner of the limited partnership which the Tribe set up to commercialize the technology. Thomas N. Tureen, the Tribe's attorney in the land claim and its financial advisor in the purchase and sale of Dragon, is Chairman of Passamaquoddy Technology. The board of directors includes the two Passamaquoddy governors, Lloyd Cutler of Wilmer, Cutler and Pickering, Robert Hellendale, former Chairman and CEO of Great Northern Nekoosa, and Prof. Howard Stevenson of the Harvard Business School.

Mark Trahan has written a story on the Recovery Scrubber for the Economist; Mat Wald is writing a story for the New York Times which is scheduled to appear in the business section on January 9 or January 16; and Gary McWilliams is writing a story for Business Week which is scheduled to run in late January or early February.

The Recovery Scrubber

a system that uses
SO₂ and CO₂ emissions

from

Passamaquoddy
Technology

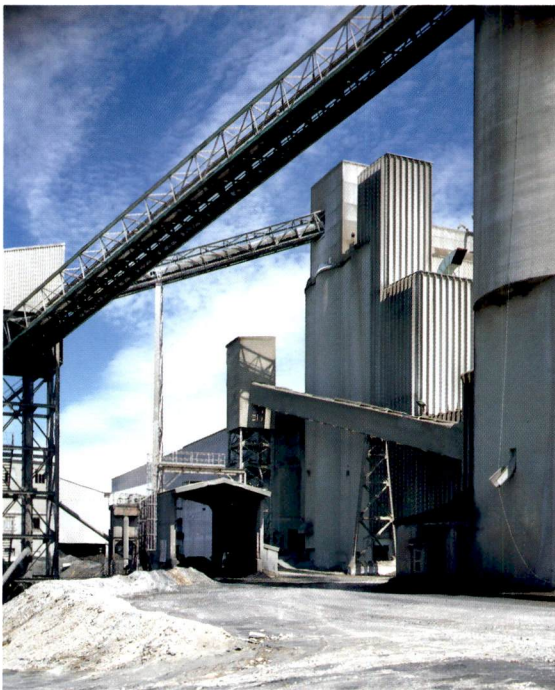

Recovery Scrubber

Passamaquoddy Technology's Recovery Scrubber uses waste emissions (CO_2 and SO_2) and waste heat to reclaim waste cement kiln dust (CKD). In the course of doing so the Recovery Scrubber is expected to:

- ◆ Convert CKD to kiln feed
- ◆ Eliminate CKD disposal costs
- ◆ Produce saleable potassium
- ◆ Reduce SO_2 emissions by over 90%
- ◆ Make it easier to burn hazardous waste or high sulfur fuel
- ◆ Extend quarry and plant life
- ◆ Generate net income

The Recovery Scrubber should also yield positive public relations. Unlike other scrubbers which produce sludge that adds to landfills and CO_2 that contributes to the greenhouse effect, the Recovery Scrubber consumes CO_2 and produces no liquid or solid waste other than distilled water. An operator should thus be able to gain credit from regulatory agencies and the public not only for reducing airborne, liquid and solid pollution, but for doing so in a manner which does not create new environmental problems.

Dragon demonstration

CDN-USA, the Spanish cement consortium which is building the first full-scale Recovery Scrubber at its Dragon Products Company cement plant in Thomaston, Maine, commissioned studies by Krupp Koppers AG, the Instituto Espanol Del Cemento y Sus Aplicaciones (the Spanish Cement Institute, IECA), and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology before committing $4.8 million for this project. The U.S. Department of Energy subjected the Scrubber to exhaustive independent review before agreeing to provide the balance of the financing for the Dragon installation under its Innovative Clean Coal Technology Program. The Recovery Scrubber was one of sixteen projects nationwide selected for such funding and the only one specifically designed for the cement industry.

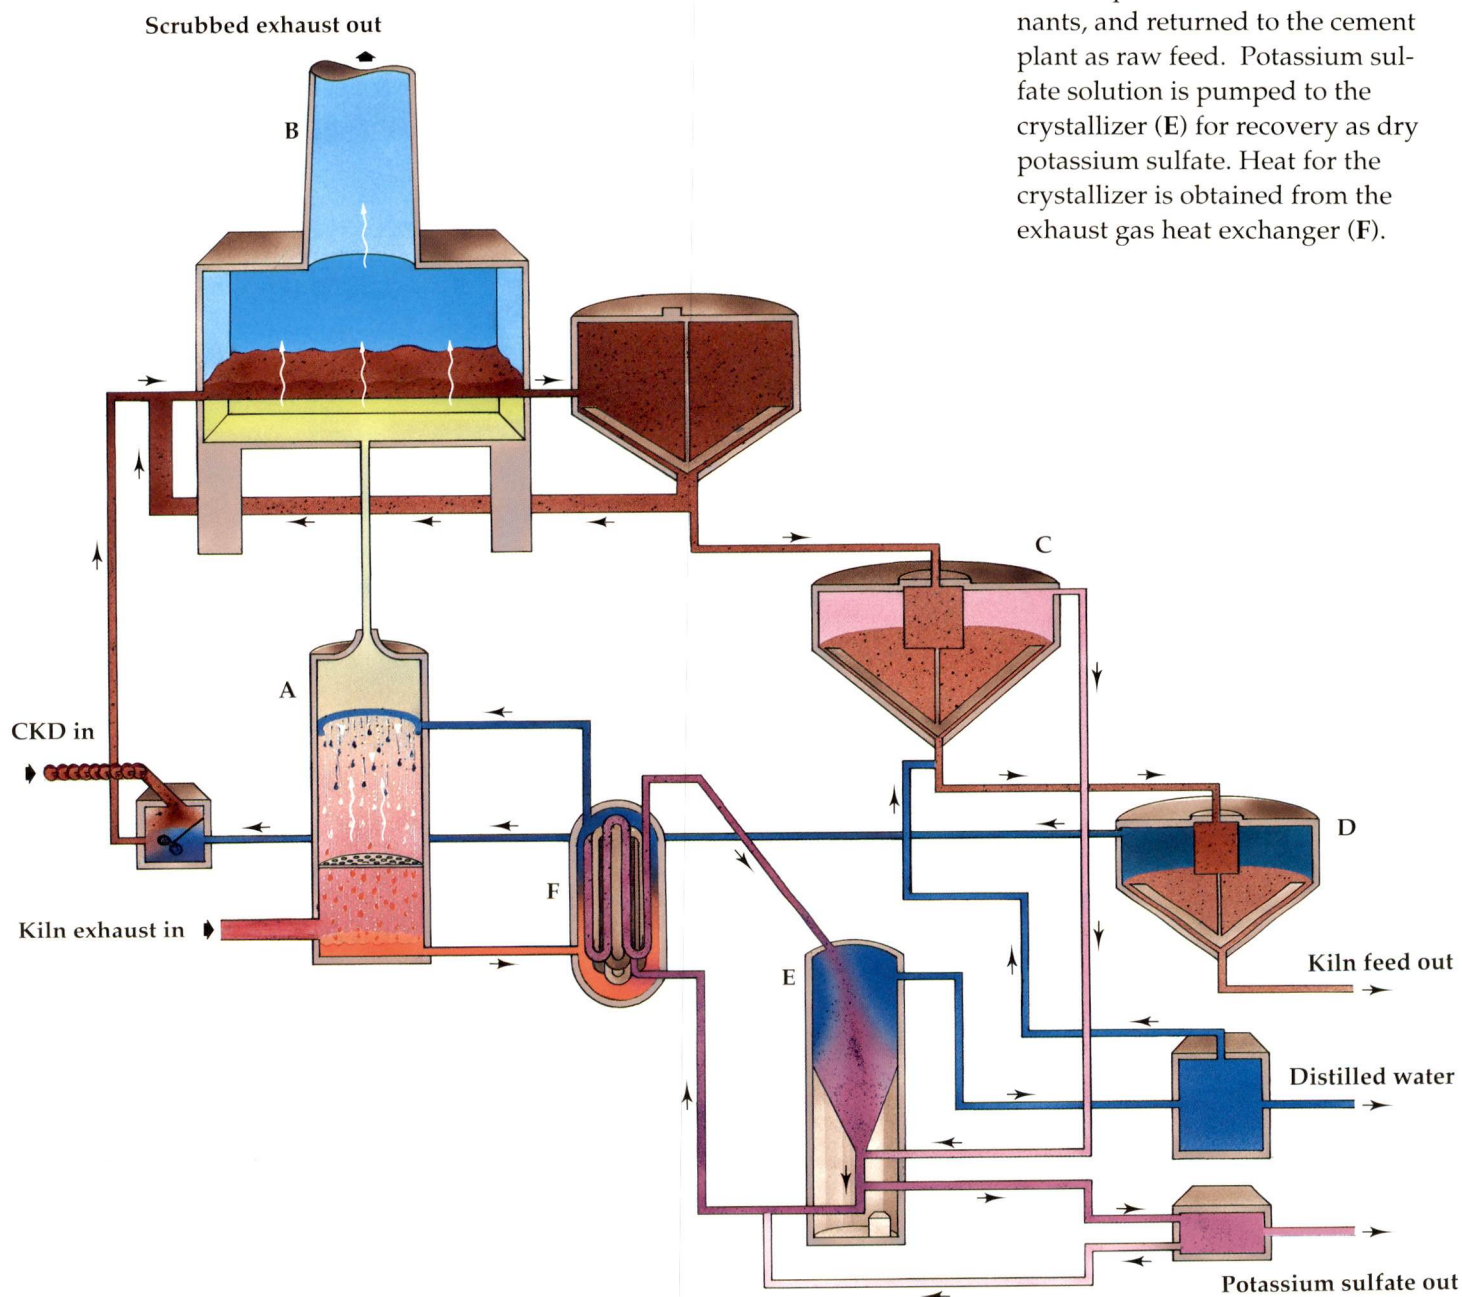

The Dragon installation is expected to be operational by the fall of 1990 and performance data will be available shortly thereafter. Interested parties are invited to visit the construction site, contact the U.S. and foreign experts who have reviewed the system, and discuss with Passamaquoddy Technology staff how the Recovery Scrubber can be applied to their operations.

How the Scrubber works

The Recovery Scrubber* was invented by Dr. Garrett Morrison, a geochemist, who realized that potassium contaminants can be reacted out of CKD without risk of setting if the dust is first reconverted to limestone.

Conversion is accomplished in the Recovery Scrubber by reintroducing into CKD the CO_2 that was released during calcining. Exhaust gas from the kiln is cooled in a heat exchanger (A) and bubbled through a reaction tank (B) containing a slurry of CKD and water. CO_2 in the gas reacts with CKD in the slurry to reclaim CKD for kiln feed, while SO_2 reacts with potassium in the CKD to form potassium sulfate in solution. Reclaimed CKD is separated in a settling tank (C), rinsed in a secondary settling tank (D) to remove potassium sulfate remnants, and returned to the cement plant as raw feed. Potassium sulfate solution is pumped to the crystallizer (E) for recovery as dry potassium sulfate. Heat for the crystallizer is obtained from the exhaust gas heat exchanger (F).

*This technology is covered by one or more patents:
U.S. Patent Nos. 4,708,855, RE.33,031 and 4,915,914.

Passamaquoddy Technology

Passamaquoddy Technology is dedicated to developing cost-effective solutions to complex environmental problems that confront heavy industry.

In addition to addressing cement kiln dust and SO₂ problems in the cement industry, Passamaquoddy Technology offers pollution control systems for the waste-to-energy, paper, power and chemical process industries. Applications in these industries are designed to scrub atmospheric pollutants, eliminate the toxicity of waste ash, and produce saleable by-products without generating new wastes.

As you can see from the enclosed letter, the Defense Department is forwarding my poem to the American Forces Information Service.

Footsteps cut by our soulmates in sand are windswept reminders of America's gentle hand.
Years hence these faraway sands will reclaim all that we give and maybe give it no name.

America transmits a world circling sunrise whose glow now guides us thru empty night skies.
Our Shield of Peace is steeled in parchment, strong as our Declaration to be forever independent.

This desert holds in its' palm America's finest whose loved ones suffer long nights without rest.
Like Armstrong's brave moonsteps of grace
we, too, landed in peace to flag our "Tranquility Base."

Sadly, if we must turn our Shield into sword then know we came NOT to kill and count how we scored, for though we are sand-soaked in desert disguise
those of goodwill see peace shines in our eyes.

This desert mission was never ordained for we'd rather be home on our fruited plain, not crawling in sandy fields of the insane risking life and drilling deep inner pain.

We come in peace and pray our leaving is that way and know the awful price of granting Evil its' day.
Only our footsteps can these desert winds claim and never never America's honored name.

Dear Mr. Tanger:

Thank you for your letter of December 13, 1990, to Secretary Cheney regarding your poem, "In Honor of Desert Shield."

Although I cannot guarantee that Secretary Cheney will be able to use or refer to your poem in his public statements, you may be certain that he greatly appreciates your kind words of support and the sentiments which moved you to poetry. As he has noted, the decision to put young men and women at risk has always been one of the most difficult our Nation can make. In the end, our armed forces belong to the American people. When our servicemembers and their families hear messages such as yours, they know their contributions to America are not being ignored or forgotten, and that can make their burdens a little easier to bear.

I have taken the liberty of forwarding copies of your poem to my colleagues at the American Forces Information Service, which distributes a variety of information to our servicemembers, and to the Secretary's speechwriting staff.

THE WHITE HOUSE

January 5, 1991

Dear Carlton -

Happy New Year! I haven't forgotten your continued interest in the President's activities. Please send me a current resume.

Dr. Mark Gold should have made the "list."

Keep in touch. Sincerely,

Andy Card

to Chief of Staff
The White House

Dear Andy:

I guess congratulations are in order. We certainly faired a lot better than I thought possible. Bradley had his problems in New Jersey: from a political standpoint, I think he will have a rough time gaining support for a presidential campaign.

I was delighted to see Bill Weld win as Governor of Massachussetts. I wish it had been you.

Judging from the press, you guys have been under a lot of pressure. Now that the elections are over, relax, enjoy your family, and return to governing the nation.

Andy, my vow to not get involved with the Administration in Washington for two years is coming to and end. If there is any way I can be of help, please feel free to call: after the first of the year.

Marty is doing great in Chicago. For your convenience, I have enclosed his address in the event you do not have it.

By the way, would you add Dr. Mark Gold to the Christmas card list. Mark worked very hard in the drug area for the President, and was told he would be on the list. He and I spoke the other day. He is very unhappy. I would appreciate help on this.

Dear Mr. Card:

I recently received the enclosed letter from Dick Quinlan regarding his daughter, Colleen.

I have known Dick and his family for some time and want you to know that they are outstanding members of the community. Any assistance you or your staff could provide to Colleen will be much appreciated.

Thank you and if I can offer further information regarding Colleen Quinlan, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely,

Dear Andy:

It was a great pleasure meeting you at Richard Tisei's get-together at The Ship recently.

I'm personally committed to making sure that Richard is our new Republican State Senator.

I would like to ask a small favor. My daughter, Colleen (resume enclosed), a recent graduate of Dickinson College, Carlisle, PA., is now living in the Washington, D.C. area and is looking for an entry level job in Government, possibly in a position where she can use her language skills (she is fluent in Spanish) and learn more about the political process in Washington.

Both she and I would be most appreciative of any time you could give her and/or referral that might lead to some kind of job opportunity.

If you can help, please call (or perhaps a member of your staff) me at 617-979-3341 at your convenience and I'll coordinate things with Colleen.

With warm regards,

Richard S. Quinlan
President
