Memorandum for Andy Card

From: Bobbie Kilberg ^{BK}

I would like you to fax to New Hampshire the memorandum I wrote to John on the public liaison office. I am attaching another copy of the memo as well as a copy of my resume which I also would like you to fax to John.

I think the memorandum makes a cogent case for the position of Deputy Assistant. However, if it does not convince John, I would like you and John to consider two other possibilities for me: (1) that you revert to the original concept of a single Deputy Assistant in public liaison with two or three Special Assistants below her; or (2) that you place me in the Deputy Assistant for Policy Implementation slot under Ede Holiday. I am well qualified for the implementation position and performed a similar function as a White House Fellow in the Nixon White House and as Associate Counsel to President Ford. I get along well with both Ede and Dick Breeden and would enjoy working with them. Dick and I approach problems in a similar manner and have compatible work styles. I think that would be important to the success of both Dick's operation and the implementation program.

Andy, I would like to get this resolved by the end of the week. Thanks for your help.

Memorandum for John Sununu

From: Bobbie Kilberg ^{BK}

Re: Office of Public Liaison

I have given considerable thought to the responsibilities and structure of the public liaison office, as you have outlined them, and I look forward to working effectively within this framework. When we talked over the phone before Christmas, it was my understanding that the three public liaison principals would be Deputy Assistants to the President. However, the organizational chart lists the three as Special Assistants to the President and this is of major concern to me because it seriously hampers their effectiveness.

I do not have a large ego, John, but I am a realist about the "enabling tools" which are necessary to accomplish our primary goal of building effective coalitions for George Bush's programs when he assumes the Presidency. I am in agreement with the President-Elect's desire to reduce the numbers and senior levels on the White House Staff. However, I am concerned when a specific reduction will hamper our effectiveness. I know you have agreed with the arguments that Dick Breeden's and Dave Demarest's positions should be Assistants to the President rather than Deputy Assistants to the President. I think my arguments are equally compelling and I summarize them below.

First: It is very important that we attract high caliber individuals to the public liaison office. The position of Deputy Assistant to the President will make that recruitment possible and is an important incentive given the reduction in the level of White House salaries.

Second: It is appropriate to reduce the number of slots in the Communications Office. However, that reduction will make it imperative that every slot is filled with the best possible person.

Third: Success of the President's programs will depend on a four-prong effort in which private sector participation and support should be of equal importance with congressional, political, and inter-governmental support. The public liaison principals should be on an equal staff level with those individuals heading the House and Senate sides of our congressional relations office and with the heads of the political and inter-governmental offices.

Fourth: In order to work effectively with the Deputy and Under Secretaries of the Cabinet Departments and with the various interest groups, the principals in the public liaison office should be at the Deputy Assistant level. Special assistants to the President are not viewed by policy makers in Washington as senior level staff and that view has been clearly conveyed to the field as well. Dave Parker spoke to me today about the importance in the business and trade association world of dealing with White House Staff members who have "access" in the minds of association executives. His call was prompted by newspaper accounts that leave the impression that the public liaison function is being downgraded. If that belief takes hold, the interest groups will not deal with public liaison. They will gravitate elsewhere within the White House structure and the public liaison office will be reduced to a "show-and-tell" operation rather than to performing the functions of policy input and coalition building that integration into the Communications Office is designed to facilitate.

Fifth: Deputy Assistants are senior staff. Special Assistants are not. Although you are putting together a White House Staff that is congenial and supportive of one another, the reality of all White Houses to date is that, over time, people are defined in a hierarchical fashion by their titles. That will effect, over time, attendance at meetings, access to events and speaking engagements, and the ability to cajole interest groups to be supportive through White House lunches, tours etc.

Sixth: The Assistant to the President for Communications is the only Assistant to the President without Deputy Assistants reporting to him. Within the structure of the White House, that may send the wrong signal.

We are all here to support George Bush. It is the only reason to be on the White House Staff. I very much look forward to joining you.

RE: SOLICITOR GENERAL APPOINTMENT

At Andy's suggestion, let me reiterate my great interest in appointment to the office of Solicitor General of the United States. My experience and qualifications for the position are set forth in the resume and materials that I previously submitted to you.

While I think highly of others who have been mentioned for the job (including some who have mentioned themselves), I note that I think it would be a mistake to appoint any alumnus of the Meese Justice Department and that the various judges mentioned have little private sector experience, little advocacy background (conservative or otherwise) and little Bush background.

At your convenience, I would like to speak with you further about soliciting your support and endorsement. I believe that I have a distinct ability to develop and advocate credibly various positions that are of importance to the incoming Administration (e.g., relating to criminal justice, federalism and state-based solutions, antitrust, civil rights and procurement reform) and which will be reflected in major cases before the Supreme Court. I also have a record of success in each of these areas.

Andy,

I've given a copy of this memo to Ed, and I would appreciate it very much if you would give it serious consideration as well.

I want to stay on Gov. Sununu's team as Research Asst. / Correspondent in the hope that I could perform some of the tasks I've outlined in the memo. In addition, I would be happy to help you deal with Puerto Rican politicians, officials & Issues.

Re: Staff Support Position

As Gov. Sununu's top staff people you will face many more demands on your time and attention than you will be able to handle efficiently and effectively without staff support earmarked for your exclusive use.

Moreover, the unrelenting press of your daily activities will very quickly push you into a reactive mode of thought and action, and pull you away from strategic ways of thinking and acting.

Given this prospect, and the need to formulate and implement George Bush's long-range agenda, and evaluate its progress, I offer my services to enable you to devote more time and attention to strategic matters. I can help give you this flexibility by performing the tasks associated with a Research Assistant/Correspondent. And I hope that some of those duties would include:

1. Gathering information and organizing it in the form of memoranda, talking points, or otherwise, either as finished products or rough drafts for your review and modification.
2. Helping prepare weekly, bi-weekly, or monthly briefing books that review current and upcoming cabinet, national security, congressional, or media matters for the Chief of Staff and, or the President.
3. Conducting special projects such as: writing thought-pieces on individual issues or sets of issues; pulling together various strands of an issue (e.g., substantive, budgetary, and political in terms of bureaucratic and domestic politics); drawing out the interrelationship between issues that cut across policy and organizational boundaries; or otherwise.
4. Summarizing policy memoranda from other offices. Insuring that relevant individuals and, or organizations have made inputs into the decision making process or at least have had the opportunity to make inputs.

5. Doing the staff work necessary for you to convene, preside over, and follow-up on meetings such as the legislative strategy group, or the long range scheduling group, by helping to: organize the agenda, notify participants, prepare briefing books for the participants, take minutes of the meetings for your records, summarize the minutes for dissemination to the participants, and staff-out action items.
6. Other duties as you deem necessary.

To these tasks I would bring to bear:

1. A good analytical mind
2. Excellent writing skills
3. Hard work

Finally, and perhaps most importantly, I would offer you:

1. Loyalty
2. Discretion
3. Honesty
4. Integrity

BIOGRAPHY OF
RICHARD C. BREEDEN

Combining a background in government, law and scholarship in the field of financial markets, Mr. Breeden is a partner of Baker & Botts, one of the nation's largest law firms, and head of its Finance Department in Washington, D.C. He spearheaded a major review of the nation's financial institutions and banking system during his tenure in the Reagan Administration. He is a frequent writer and lecturer on national and international financial issues.

Mr. Breeden's legal practice involves financial transactions and regulatory matters of all types. In addition to representing some of the country's leading financial institutions, he has also worked with major regulatory agencies in Washington.

Mr. Breeden's government experience includes serving as Deputy Counsel to Vice President George Bush from 1982-1985. As a senior staff member of the Presidential Task Force on Regulatory Relief chaired by the Vice President, he was charged with reviewing regulations issued by agencies throughout the Federal Government.

In addition to other White House duties, Mr. Breeden was appointed Staff Director of the President's Task Group on Regulation of Financial Services, a cabinet level group established to review all federal financial regulatory programs and to recommend improvements. Mr. Breeden worked closely with Task Group members -- including the Secretary of the Treasury and the heads of all federal financial regulatory agencies, and the Task Group unanimously adopted 50 specific recommendations to improve financial regulation. Blueprint for Reform, the Task Group's final report authored by Mr. Breeden, was issued in November, 1984.

Prior to government service, Mr. Breeden practiced law in New York City for five years, where he handled major domestic and international business transactions. This followed completion of an appointment on the faculty of the University of Miami School of Law, where he taught constitutional law and federal jurisdiction.

Educated at Stanford University (B.A. with honors in international relations, 1972) and Harvard Law School (1975), Mr. Breeden is also the author of law review articles as well as analytical articles for legal and financial publications. Representing the United States, he has lectured in New Zealand, Indonesia, Hong Kong and Japan. He has also served as a delegate to international conferences on financial institutions and regulation.

In addition to service on committees for local and national Bar Associations, Mr. Breeden served as Chairman of the Legal Issues Committee of the Federal Savings and Loan Advisory Council in 1988. Residing in Virginia with his wife, Holly, and three boys, the family is active in local church and civic affairs.

Summary of Qualifications of

Paul Niskanen

For Consideration As Ambassador to Finland

1. A long record of success doing business in international environments. Includes creating and building major new markets in Europe and Japan for personal company specializing in outdoor recreation industry and building, staffing and operating a manufacturing facility in Mexico for large U.S. corporation. Studied overseas at university level.
2. Proven ability to lead and to work with others to conceptualize, institute and manage projects to ultimate success in international and domestic settings. Comfortable with press and good public speaker. Adaptable to diverse organizational structures.
3. Nearly a decade of service as Finland's honorary Consul for Oregon. In addition, to a Finnish heritage, understand Finland's history and geo-political climate and acquainted with many Finnish political leaders, business people and members of Finland's arts community. A recognized leader in Scandinavian-American affairs.

Experience representing Finland in America may be successfully employed "in reverse". Namely, the understanding of Finland and the mentality of the Finns facilitates the communication of the American point of view to them.

4. Wife, Christine, is intelligent, striking and personable. Well-versed in protocol and at ease with entertaining and public speaking. Valuable partner meeting with overseas clients, Finnish officials or community leaders. Together would be effective and engaging representatives of the United States.

Paul M. Niskanen

Experience — International Business

1. Built own business specializing in outdoor recreation services into industry leader by creating demand for company's product in international markets. In each target country, identified major buyers, obtained introductions and developed long-term relationships with top decision makers.

Success in international environment result of sensitivity to cultural distinctions, understanding market needs, personal determination and patience. In specific, achieved major sales success in Germany, France, Switzerland, Italy and the Benelux countries and development efforts underway in other countries. Company's market position in European travel industry is virtually without competitive challenge and company name is widely known.

Cultivated, organized and operated numerous "missions" to the U.S. for groups of influential travel industry buyers. Speaking German, promoted company at U.S. travel seminars in cities throughout Germany and in Austria. Company's international achievements were characterized by a Department of Commerce Under Secretary as "one of our great success stories".

2. Planned, built and operated manufacturing facility in northern Mexico for Kimberly-Clark Corporation (1969-1970) and conducted extensive market "prospecting" in Japan (1975-1979, 1983).

Close Ties With Finland

1. Appointed by Finland's Foreign Minister as Finland's Consul for Oregon in June, 1980. In addition to expected consular duties, created trade contacts in Oregon for Finnish businessmen, assisted in resolution of tax and legal disputes and brought conflicting ethnic groups together. Frequent speaker to civic groups on Finnish history, geo-political strategy, economy, commerce, arts and literature.

2. Activist in Finnish-American affairs on local and national level. Tireless leader of Oregon's Scandinavian-American community. Five year's successful effort to preserve university-level Scandinavian studies program in Oregon which required fund-raising, lobbying and negotiating. Founding board member of the Scandinavian Heritage foundation and general chairman of Portland's Scandinavian Festival (1986).

3. As Consul developed contacts with Finnish officials including Finland's President, three former Ambassadors and leaders of Finland's official, business and arts communities. Organized several intensive working visits to Oregon for Finland's ambassador, consuls general, trade commissioners and the consul general of Sweden. Participated in two consular missions to Finland (plus more than a dozen personal visits).

4. Trustee for eight years of America's only Finnish-oriented college, located in upper Michigan. Extensive promotion of college and current chairman of board's committee for instruction, the first "non-academic" trustee for at least a decade appointed to this position.

Experience — International Press

To promote business in international markets, developed extensive contacts with European travel press. Result is a series of in-depth articles about company appearing in, to name a few, Finland's Seura, France's Le Monde and L'Express, Germany's Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung and Italy's Gente Viaggi.

In coordination with the U.S. Department of Commerce, sought out, nurtured and organized month-long visit to U.S. by noted German film team to produce documentary on company's service and nearby national parks. The resulting film was shown repeatedly on Germany's national television network in prime viewing time and has been sold to television networks in other German-speaking countries.

Public Service

1. Elected Secretary, Vice-Dean and Dean of Oregon's Consular Corps. As Dean, negotiated with top state officials over policies concerning consuls, organized and presided at State Dinner for Governor and spoke often to civic groups. Lectures given on consular responsibilities at Portland State University. Developed the international trade workshop for the Oregon Department of Economic Development. Characterized by Oregon's longest-serving consul as "Our best Dean in thirty years".

2. Called on by Oregon's last three Governor's for advice in travel promotion. Appointed by Democratic governor to governor's advisory council for six years. First chairman of Oregon Hospitality and Visitor's Association (1976-77) and Chairman of the Board of the Pacific Northwest Travel Association (1978). Member of additional national boards.

Recently brought influential group of German travel industry leaders to Oregon to examine business opportunities in State and arranged travel industry contacts abroad for Oregon's present governor.

3. Activist and financial patron in Oregon's arts community. By building interest and cooperation from four western U.S. opera companies, recently created unique outreach concert for opera on the Colorado River in Canyonlands National Park which may soon be shown on national television.

Broad Management Experience

Managed organizations ranging in size from 60 to 150 people. Ability to absorb information quickly, find solutions and lead others to objectives. Dear Andy:

As I hope you know, I am not one who liberally sends out letters of recommendation or nomination. Thus, I trust that you will respect a carefully considered nomination for the new Administration. While Oregon is far from the power centers of the beltway, we have some extraordinarily talented individuals who have a desire for public service.

With this letter, I am enclosing a resume of Paul Niskanen. Paul is a superb candidate for two potential positions with the Administration: Ambassador to Finland or Under Secretary of Commerce for Travel and Tourism. Paul is separately qualified for each of these positions. Even a brief glance at his resume will show an extraordinary lifetime of achievement and a wide variety of professional and personal interests.

Paul enjoys an unsullied reputation. He is congenial, hard working and personally dedicated to the President-Elect and his objectives.

As you know, I was extremely active in the Bush campaign efforts during the election season. Paul was evident at virtually every function I attended, and he gave both active personal and financial support to the campaign.

I am pleased to add my endorsement without reservation for Paul's consideration. I would be pleased to confer with you by telephone concerning the great benefit you could reap from Paul's talent and commitment. Please feel free to call me, either at work (503-378-6002) or at home (503-686-7803).

Best personal regards.

Dear Mr. Card,

I am writing to you to request your assistance in giving reconsideration to my application , for a position with the Bush administration. I believe that Mr.Untermeyer's assessment of my ability to be effective in the field of diplomacy in regards to Viet Nam was flawed or too hasty. Please read this letter and give my application reconsideration, I am fairly sure that President Elect Bush would have a different view, from Mr. Untermeyer's, if he were to read this letter.

I was also told by Col. Terry Mattke that he did indeed know of 27 live M.I.A.s in Viet Nam but that they were all Black Marketeers. He has confirmed what the Viet Nameese told me, that there are LIVE M.I.A.s in Viet Nam. The M.I.A. talks set for Jan. 2-3 in Laos seem to indicate the groundwork for a release on or about Inauguration Day but at this point, who knows? That was the time that the Viet Nameese told me they wanted to scheduel the release. Since the State Department has now announced, in advance, that it will recognize Viet Nam when thay withdraw from Cambodia, the way seems clear to return the M.I.A.s.

I received a letter from Mr. Chase Untermeyer, chief of personnel, stating that there was no position that my qualifications lent themselves to but that they would keep my records on the active file.

Could you inquire as to just what does it take to get a position in the government to work on the M.I.A. issue. I have carried messages to the Viet Nameese at the U.N. for the State Department, been commended by Mr. Larry Kerr of the State Department for the inteligence data I brought back from Viet Nam, I have been commended by Nguyen Can, Head of the M.I.A. Office, when he wrote, "You have paved the way for removing the obstacles in the way of better understanding between our countries" and Foreign Minister and Vice Premier Nguyen Co Thach said in his letter to me, "I welcome and highly appreciate your desire for reconciliation between the Vietnamese and American peoples and YOUR ACTIVITIES which contribute for better understanding between the two nations."

December 28, 1988

In just over a year, I have formulated the ideas, initiated the communication, traveled to meet the necessary people and present my ideas and implemented the proposal that I drafted. This was done without any help or information from our government, except for the approval of my proposal and trip to Hanoi by the Joint Committee. I have submitted all data and copies of correspondence to the government, even though I have received no written confirmation of my work, other than the letter from the National Security Council and Mr. Richard Childress. That letter confirmed the receipt of the reports and data submitted to the White House, the State Department and the D.I.A. and their analysis by the D.O.D. (D.I.A.-Mr. Bob Dastat).

I have received these commendations and been involved with the present solution to the M.I.A. issue that appears to be in progress. As Col. Terry Mattke said in our 1 1/2 hour telephone conversation with him at The White House "You have just paralleled our every move, for the past year." Since I have either paralleled our State Department's policy, in advance, or been the originator of some of these initiatives, then I must be at least as good as the people in the State Department and The White House Staff. Either way, I hope that you feel that I have earned a place within our government from which I can use my talents to help our nation, in what seems to be a natural talent that I seem to have, that of negotiation. I am asking for your help in obtaining a position in the government that directly involves dealing with Viet Nam and the M.I.A issue.

Mr. Card, I know that this is asking a great deal of you, and that blowing my own horn is not humble but I do want to make a difference in this world, as Mr. Bush and you have.

Thank you again for your kindness and consideration.

Dear Andy:

Thanks for taking the time to visit with me when I was in town last week. I realize that it was incredibly hectic that day so I value the opportunity we had to talk.

As I mentioned to you that afternoon, my primary interest is in the position of Assistant Attorney General for the Land and Natural Resources Division. The next day, however, I also met with Frank Keating, Associate Attorney General, who suggested that I might also consider his former job -- Assistant Secretary of Treasury for Enforcement. I therefore called your office to tell Boots to let you know that I have a secondary interest in that position, as well as that of Customs Commissioner. Frank Keating suggested that both would be very appropriate for someone with my background as a state attorney general.

As you know, I am keenly interested in joining the Administration. I will look to your guidance for landing an appropriate position that would both utilize my talents and keep alive the possibility of returning to elective politics.

I will be in touch with you shortly. Again, thanks for your help.

Dear Mr. Card:

A mutual friend, Richard Feldman, suggested that I contact you directly regarding potential opportunities on the White House staff.

My experience as a legislative lobbyist for the National Rifle Association and as a political campaign manager for George Young and Associates in California have given me an in-depth understanding of the political/legislative process.

As most who know me would attest, my personal strength is as a political strategist. This ability has enabled me to successfully pass over twenty pieces of legislation over the past four years; as well as develop the grassroots plan which resulted in the almost unprecedented discharge of the Firearm Owners Protection Act from Peter Rodino's House Judiciary Committee in 1986.

I look forward to meeting with you personally to further discuss opportunities with the White House in the Political Affairs or Intergovernmental Relations offices.

Thank you for your interest and consideration.

Sincerely,

Panel moves to increase minimum gun terms

By DONNA LEUSNER

The mandatory minimum jail term for certain serious crimes involving gun possession would be increased from three years to five or seven years under a bill released by a Senate committee yesterday.

Sponsored by Sen. Frank Graves (D-Passaic), the amendment to the so-called 1981 Graves Act also contains an escape clause if a county prosecutor files a motion with an assignment judge asking for a reduction of sentence because the "interests of justice" would not be served in imposing the mandatory minimum.

Graves said the gun law "is working" and the increase in mandatory minimums would strengthen the law, yet allow an escape hatch on the other end for minor crimes such as the use of a pellet gun.

The Senate Law, Public Safety and Defense Committee voted 5-0 to release the bill.

The increase in mandatory minimum jail terms was introduced in 1986 during the last Legislative session. The escape clause was taken out, but the bill was never voted on by the full Senate. The bill was reintroduced this session and the escape clause was added as an amendment yesterday.

Under the bill (S-827), the mandatory minimum prison term for conviction in a first-degree crime such as armed robbery would increase from three to seven years.

The mandatory minimum for a second-degree offense, such as armed burglary, would increase from three to five years.

A third-degree offense would remain the same and a fourth-degree

National Rifle Association legislative liaison Richard Manning talks about an amendment to the Graves Act during a meeting of the Senate Law, Public Safety and Defense Committee crime, such as pointing an unloaded firearm, would be reduced from three years to 18 months.

Aggravated assault could be considered a second-, third- or fourth-degree crime, depending on circumstances and injury to the victim.

The bill would also mandate a minimum 10-year term for repeat offenders.

Richard Manning, legislative liaison for the National Rifle Association, supported the mandatory increases, citing statistics which indicate a 29 percent decrease in the state's homicide rate since 1982.

Manning did cite concerns about so-called "stand alone" crimes such as the case of a Scotch Plains man who had no prior convictions and was not participating in another crime when he used a gun.

A spokeswoman for the New Jersey Association on Correction supported the escape hatch, but opposed the increase in mandatory minimum jail terms.

In discussing the need for an escape hatch in the mandatory prison term for crimes committed with a gun the committee heard of special circumstances.

As an example, the committee members heard the case of the 19-year-old Scotch Plains man serving a three-year mandatory jail term for firing a BB gun at a sign from a moving car. The shot missed and hit a pedestrian in the arm. The victim did not require hospitalization.

Under current law, Gov. Thomas Kean could grant the man a pardon, but by the time it is granted, the man could have served most of his three years, hearing participants said.

The amendment also would allow a trial judge to refer such a case to the assignment judge for review. The amendment would apply to those pending sentence and those already in jail, who could request a sentence reduction to one year or probation.

Camouflage Won't Hide Mike Dukakis

by Wayne LaPierre
Executive Director,
NRA Institute for Legislative Action

A chameleon, according to the American Heritage Dictionary, is a lizard capable of changing colors. Chameleons pull off this masterful biological trick for one simple reason: survival. By quickly changing skin colors to match a changing environment, the chameleon is able to blend in, remain inconspicuous, and therefore stay alive another day.

Yet underneath this highly-changeable skin, a chameleon is still a chameleon. The lizard doesn't alter its ways, only its colors. Such momentary adaptability can be found not only among foraging lizards, but, unfortunately, in the realm of national politics as well.

It seems that Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis must have taken a lesson from a chameleon when he chose Texas Senator Lloyd Bentsen as his running mate for the battle against George Bush. Bentsen is an able and honorable man, a longtime advocate of constitutional rights, an NRA member since 1978, and a friend of firearm owners across America. We at the NRA have worked with Lloyd Bentsen and we respect him. He is an American in every sense of the word.

Mike Dukakis, on the other hand, has an anti-gun record that even the ample shadow of Senator Bentsen simply won't hide. Many Democrats throughout the nation have hoped in their hearts that Bentsen's selection meant a new direction for the Democrats. It hasn't.

Dukakis is simply flashing a new color to match the nation's political environment. He'll shed this temporary skin—and the Bentsen philosophy—after November. It's the way the man operates. Take it from those who know him well.

Mike Dukakis is a clear enemy of lawful gun ownership, the NRA, and all that we represent. These are the colors that the Democratic presidential nominee will show following the election, if we are fooled into allowing him the presidency.

We wish the Lloyd Bentsen philosophy were more than just camouflage for Dukakis. But it isn't. As the Massachusetts governor said during the Democratic National Convention, "There can only be one quarterback." And Dukakis has been calling anti-gun plays throughout his political career.

Maybe someday the National Democratic Party will realize that what millions of forgotten party members want is a presidential nominee who respects the constitutional right of American citizens to own firearms. Dukakis would have us believe that Lloyd Bentsen as a running mate gives him that dimension. It does not. The truth lies much deeper than that. And for those of us who treasure the Constitution and believe strongly in our Second Amendment rights, the truth about Michael Dukakis is very frightening, indeed.

JUST LOOK AT THE DUKAKIS RECORD

QUOTE: "I support the handgun [ban] referendum and will vote for it."
Michael Dukakis, November 7, 1976, Manchester Union Leader.

FACTS: In 1976, Massachusetts' voters considered referendum Question 5, which would have banned the private possession of handguns. If Michael Dukakis had his way, Massachusetts' citizens would no longer be able to own handguns. Massachusetts' voters were not fooled and rejected Question 5 by an overwhelming 69% to 31% margin.

QUOTE: "I don't believe in people owning guns, only the police and military. And I am going to do everything I can to disarm this state."
Michael Dukakis, July 4, 1986, Gun Week magazine.

FACTS: Mike Dukakis met with Roy Innis, Chairman of the Congress on Racial Equality and Mike Yacino, Executive Director of the Gun Owners' Action League, to discuss problems in the implementation of Massachusetts' restrictive firearm laws. Dukakis certainly set the record straight on his position regarding private ownership of firearms.

QUOTE: "I want to do for America what I've done for Massachusetts."
Dukakis Presidential Campaign, 1988

FACTS: Mike Dukakis has a lifelong record in opposition to the rights of the law-abiding gun owner. Yet, he is not nearly so harsh on the violent criminals who prey on the weak and defenseless. Dukakis' criminal furlough program represents the worst aspects of the revolving door criminal justice system which only respects criminal rights at the expense of the victim. Law-abiding citizens cannot afford for Michael Dukakis to do to America what he's done to Massachusetts.

Dear Andy:

I am enclosing a copy of Steve Kelmar's resume. As I mentioned, he is a highly qualified individual to serve in the Congressional Affairs Office, logically on the House side. Steve was an early supporter of the Vice President and did a superb job as campaign manager in New York state, despite virtually a zero budget.

He is very deserving of this position. I hope you can call attention to him with John Sununu. I can vouch for the fact that he would be endorsed by the entire New York delegation.

On a more troubling note, I'm enclosing correspondence from Jill Fallon. We need to be sure she is paid. Please think about this and I'll call you Tuesday to discuss the situation.

Thanks ever so much and happy new year.

Dear Pete,

I'm sorry I missed you when I was in Washington last week.
Maybe the next time when I come down.

But I'm writing today to ask you to help me out. When I learned that the Bush Quayle committee was ending up with a substantial surplus, I decided to try again to get paid for completing Jack's contract last January and February. I've sent invoices, copies of some are enclosed. I've invoked your name, so you should be aware of what I've been saying. When I've called the Treasurer's office at the Bush campaign, I can't get anyone to call me back. I've decided to try a new tack through Bush fundraisers to find out exactly whom I should contact. If someone from the campaign calls about me will you either confirm what I wrote or tell me I'm out of line. Sometimes, it feels as if there is just a big black hole down there.

Happy holidays,

Dear Andy,

I'm enclosing copies of my expenses and receipts submitted to the Republican National Committee through Candace Strother. I'm also adding my September expenses in the amount of $231.87. The total amount of expenses submitted for which I have not been reimbursed is $931.11.

I'm also enclosing copies of an invoice and letter I wrote to Jennifer Redman in August. The letter explains all that I've been through in trying to get paid under that contract. I'm really counted on that money and not getting it is beginning to hurt. Please do what you can or tell me what more I can do.

Thanks for your help.

Dear Jennifer,

I enclose a bill for services rendered to the Bush for President Campaign from January 1, 1988 - March 8, 1988.

My late husband, Jack Flannery, was under contract with the Bush campaign for the period from November 1, 1987 through March 8, 1988 to provide media consulting and advice. He reported directly to Pete Teeley and, it is my understanding, that the total amount of his contract $8500 was budgeted for in the national, not the Mass state budget.

Jack died very suddenly on December 23, 1987. The Vice President called me to express his condolences and issued a very moving tribute to Jack. I spoke to Pete Teeley that day and several days later. I asked him if I could continue and complete Jack's work for Bush through the Mass primary. He agreed. I then worked as the Massachusetts media advisor, writing press releases, setting up press conferences, arranging for Governor Sargent's endorsement, and in general working with the media.

When I did not receive the monthly check, I was told to be patient, there was a little snafu. Still later, I learned that I would have to sign a contract. Later still, I was told that since my name was not on the original contract, something would have to be worked out. Finally I was told to resubmit my bill after the convention, so here it is. Ron knows all about the details, so if there are any questions, you can either call me or ask him. Kaufman

Dear Mr. Vice-President Bush,

I seem to have found the forgotten man whose accomplishments and achievements have--although highly acclaimed--been neglected by his own country, the United States of America. Although he has not received one, his worthy discoveries warrant for him a Presidential Medal of Freedom.

His name is Doctor Glen Theodore Seaborg; and, born in 1912, he is still alive to participate in this high honor, long overdue. He is the discoverer, or codiscoverer, of nine of the heavy radioactive transuranium elements, 94 through 102 (Plutonium, Americium, Curium, Berkelium, Californium, Einsteinium, Fermium, Mendelevium, Nobelium). Quite a feat!

He is the only American who has discovered so many atoms, and therefore deserves an important place, and niche, in the history of the discovery of the atomic elements. He was the first to isolate fissionable Plutonium used to end the second World War. He also had an unprecedented term of 10 years as Director of the Atomic Energy Commission from 1961 to 1971.

His life is worthy of the Medal of Freedom given by the President to honor very worthy citizens. My fervent hope is that you will soon award it, because life is not everlasting, and Glen Seaborg should be able to participate in his own glory and shining moment.

Hoping you can help this man to his crowning hour of full honor and prestige---With Good Luck to you in the time ahead, and with good wishes for kind and gentle weather ahead,

I am, Sincerely yours,

Beverly Hebert

RE: Alleged Extortion by Massachusetts State Senate President
William Bulger.

Dear Ms. Park:

As I had expected, Massachusetts State Attorney General James Shannon has thoroughly failed to follow through with any sort of decent investigation on this matter.

As I mentioned to you in my December 12th correspondence, Mr. Shannon and his men have far too many political debts to be able to impartially conduct an investigation of Mr. Bulger.

Please do something. This circus now taking place in Boston is totally reprehensible.

Shannon defends stance against Globe

BOSTON (AP) — Attorney General James Shannon yesterday defended his decision not to investigate charges of extortion in connection with a downtown Boston real estate development, saying federal authorities have already searched the same ground.

Shannon also shot back at The Boston Globe, which said in an editorial that the state's top law enforcement officer should examine whether any state laws were violated in the affair, which is the centerpiece of a civil suit pitting landlord Harold Brown against attorney Thomas Finnerty.

In a recent Spotlight report, the Globe reported that Senate President William Bulger appeared to benefit from the deal by withdrawing funds from a trust he shares with Finnerty, his former law partner. Brown alleges that those funds were extorted from him by Finnerty during development of the $268 million 75 State St. project.

"There is a presumption that has been made that something that should be investigated has not been investigated. That is not true," Shannon told reporters in his office. "I don't know what the goals of The Boston Globe are in this matter. But they're not going to use me or this office to achieve them."

Questions arise about Boston lawyer's holdings

BOSTON (AP) — Thomas E. Finnerty, already embroiled in a controversial $1.8 million interest he claims to have in a Boston office tower, has also secured an interest in the Harbor Point project for apparently little or no work or cash investment, according to a published report.

In 1983, Finnerty, a Boston lawyer, and former state Attorney General Edward J. McCormack reportedly secured the second largest share of the $182 million Columbia Point rehabilitation project, now called Harbor Point.

The two lawyers secured the 11.2 percent share during the waning days of the administration of Mayor Kevin White, The Boston Globe reported yesterday. They emerged as owners after Mayor White helped arrange a compromise development team to end a yearlong standoff between the Boston Housing Authority and the Boston Redevelopment Authority.

The team included architects, managers and contractors, but the Globe said Finnerty and McCormack appear to have had no concrete function in the partnership. Members of the BRA staff were unaware that McCormack and Finnerty were partners until a year later.

"We had two new people out of the blue. It took everyone by surprise. There had been no real presence of either at that point. Certainly nothing in the planning stage . . . We were all quite amazed," one unnamed lawyer familiar with the project told the Globe.

William D. Connings, a former official at the National Housing Partnership who was involved with the Columbia Point project, said he recalled seeing the two lawyers at a few meetings, but said he did not know what their role was.

Asked what the pair contributed to the project, Connings said, "I couldn't tell you."

Finnerty, a law associate and friend of state Senate President

William M. Bulger, is also the target of a lawsuit filed by real estate magnate Harold Brown in connection with development of the 75 State Street office building.

On Monday, lawyers for Brown seeking access to Bulger's personal financial records, filed an affidavit suggesting Bulger lied to conceal a $240,000 loan from Finnerty they allege was "an aborted payoff" in connection with the project.

Brown has accused Finnerty of extorting $500,000 from him in an influence peddling scheme, and Brown's attorneys say they suspect Finnerty gave Bulger a portion of the alleged payoff.

William P. Homans Jr., Bulger's lawyer, denied the allegation. "There is no question but that Senator Bulger has told the truth in his affidavit and will continue to tell the truth in these proceedings," Homans said.
