Andy:

Here is a copy of the letter I sent Marlin. If I get shut-out in Press, then maybe Media Relations or something along those lines.

Obviously, I have a strong interest in ~~working for you~~. If you can ever work it out, I'd like to say hi to the Governor someday. I spent many years growing up in New Hampshire.

Also, maybe you can tell some of those snobs in OVP I've been waiting two years for a photo/op.

Merry Christmas to you and your family. I may not get home because of the Book.

Dear Mr. Fitzwater:

It would be a high honor to be considered for the position of Assistant Press Secretary in the coming Administration of President Bush.

I worked at the Bush campaign for almost two years, doing every kind of writing imaginable. From speeches and op/ed's, to position papers and inserts. Andy Card and Ed Rogers are very familiar with my work and may be able to answer any questions you may have.

During my year or so here at the White House, I have written almost 600 Special Messages for the President. While it was a job I very much enjoyed, I would like to move away from the writting aspect for awhile. I have my first book coming out in April of 1989, and between that, ten years of writting, and my time at the White House, I could use a break from the written word.

I have worked as a Journalist, and feel I have a fairly good understanding of the working press. It is my hope that you will give me the chance to prove that true.

Thank you very much for your time and consideration in this matter. Best wishes for a happy and healthy holiday season.

Sincerely Yours,

Doug MacKinnon

Chief of Staff-Designate Transition Headquarters
10th Floor
1825 Connecticut Ave., N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20270

Dear Governor:

After the time that we have spent working together on child care and the platform, I feel as if you already know me and my capabilities. However, I have enclosed a copy of my resume for your consideration. Aside from having the good sense to marry a New Hampshire girl, I believe that I have a background of both business and Washington experience that could prove extremely helpful to you as you embark on your enormous new responsibilities. I also believe that I would be of great assistance to our new President.

After graduating from Stanford and Harvard Law School, I began my legal career in a Wall Street practice. This practice included bank lending, securities transactions and negotiation of business acquisitions and other transactions in the U.S., Europe, South America and Asia. In 1977, I worked on my first multi-billion dollar transaction at the age of 28. Since 1985, I have been a partner with one of the largest and most prestigious law firms, where I handle complex negotiated transactions and other matters.

From 1981-1985, I served in the Reagan Administration, principally as Deputy Counsel to the Vice President. In my three years in the White House, and one year in the Labor Department, I had an opportunity to see first hand how the Executive Branch operates, particularly the interactions of the Presidency with Congress and the bureaucracy. Because our office handled the legal work of the Task Force on Regulatory Relief, I worked with Boyden and OMB in reviewing regulations on domestic policy subjects ranging from affirmative action to environmental law to energy, transportation and finance.

Beginning in 1982, the Vice President chaired a cabinet-level Task Group reviewing the financial regulatory system. As staff director, I was responsible for trying to work out a consensus among principals such as Don Regan and Paul Volcker, who held strongly divergent views. At the same time, I coordinated a staff effort that included numerous personnel from 12 different agencies. After literally dozens of meetings with principals and numerous proposals, I was able to develop 50 specific proposals that were unanimously adopted, and a report that Fed Chairman Volcker later called the most comprehensive and balanced ever produced on the financial regulatory system. I was especially proud that we were able to complete the Task Group's work without spending one dollar beyond existing appropriations. Perhaps most importantly, I believe that all of the principals and their staffs felt that the process we followed was fair, open and produced a credible and balanced result.

Having observed both Jim Baker and Don Regan as Chief of Staff, I believe that you will be a great success in what is truly a critical position. In so doing, you will help George Bush become the great President that he is capable of being. Of course the "pussycat" may not resemble the gentle Garfield variety once the battles with Congress start in earnest. Nonetheless, I believe that I could help you significantly as your Deputy, or alternatively as head of Policy Development.

My work on the platform, more than a year of opposition research and serving as a surrogate opponent in the primary debates have left me well-versed in the range of our policy positions. As I believe you know from the child care discussions, I am a fighter when it comes to matters of principle. I also understand how to develop successful policies in a political environment, and how to work with others to achieve a successful result.

I am sure that you are besieged with office seekers. I am seriously interested in working in one of these capacities, and I believe that I am superbly qualified to help the President achieve great results. However, I also have a strong interest in one or two positions in the agencies. As these will be hotly contested positions, I need to move quickly to be selected if you are not interested in the human sacrifice I have proposed.

Irrespective of what you decide, I appreciate your consideration, and I remain delighted with the President-elect's wise choice. I want you to know that I will be delighted to help you in any way I can no matter who

MEMORANDUM

TO: Governor Sununu
FROM: Richard Breedon RB
RE: Transition Assistance

As you suggested in our telephone conversations, I have considered how I could be of greatest assistance to you during the transition. My suggestion is that I begin immediately on a full-time, unpaid volunteer basis. I would help monitor emerging issues under review by the transition. My assignment would be to review developments and report to you, through Andy, on those issues that appear to need your review or consideration. I would prepare summaries or one-page digests of key issues for your review and updating.

In short, I can help sort wheat from chaff, and to help prioritize issues that you either need to be aware of, or to get involved in. This would allow you, Andy and Ed to focus on personnel questions and meetings while at the same time beginning to review systematically issues priorities as time is available. I would not in any manner seek to influence the development of policies or proposals, but rather to review and coordinate the policy/issues that need your attention. Along the way I would then be there to brief you on the savings and loan problem as you have time, and to help out on economic and financial problems generally.

As I told you earlier, I am happy to do this on a "no strings, no commitment" basis. There would not be any commitment that this will lead to any other position, and I will go back to practicing law at any time you want.

Boyden has cleared me from an "ethics" perspective. I need a pass so that I can get into the building, someplace to sit, and a few minutes with Andy to determine how to plug into the paper flow or issues questions.

I do not care whether or not I have a "title". I would propose to characterize myself as a "Senior Advisor for Policy " to the Chief of Staff-designate. Senior Advisor for Economic and Financial Affairs would also be fine, or simply Assistant to the Chief of Staff.

Dear John:

Congratulations on your well-earned selection as Chief of Staff! President-elect Bush is fortunate to have your help with the challenges of the next few years.

When we talked about Science Advisor some time ago, I did not foresee the occasion when I would be writing! However, I decided this fall to re-enter the job market, and that decision leads me quite naturally to see if there is an opportunity to serve in the Bush administration.

Since I was in Presidential Personnel previously, perhaps my experience and availability could be useful at this time.

Although it is not mentioned in my resume, in the last seven years of activity in the community, I have had involvement with the Chevy Chase Women's Republican Club, as Treasurer, Awards Chairman, and in some fund-raising activities. My campaign activities were somewhat limited due to other commitments, but I was able to help the effort somewhat through the Bethesda campaign office.

It would be a privilege to be a part of your new team, as I'm sure you will build a team respected for its professionalism and dedication. Whether I am part of that team or observing, I wish you the very best!

Yours truly,

Barbara Ash

The Honorable John Sununu
Office of the President-Elect
1825 Connecticut Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20270

Dear John:

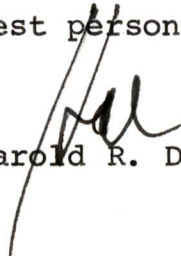

My hardest congratulations to you on being designated Chief of the White House Staff in the new administration. I am particularly pleased with your selection because I know you bring an outstanding record of executive leadership, a solid conservative political philosophy, and a fresh "outside-the-beltway" viewpoint, all of which are qualities that I think will help tremendously in implementing the mandate which George Bush's election established.

As you have probably surmised from our previous discussions, I would be interested in being involved in the transition operation and also in getting a position with the Bush Administration. As a result of my involvement with the platform group and the research team there at national headquarters, I think I could be of material service to the transition in developing plans and selecting personnel relating to the areas of law and justice, the War on Drugs, the AIDS crisis and problems relating to financial institutions, particularly the savings and loan associations.

My six months sabbatical leave from my law firm expired on election day, and that is the reason I am back here in Houston. While I do not have quite the same degree of flexibility in making myself available for the transition effort as I did during my sabbatical leave, I think the necessary arrangements could be worked out, and I would certainly appreciate the opportunity to explore those possibilities.

Congratulations again on your appointment.

Best personal regards,

Harold R. DeMoss, Jr.

Enclosed is the resume of George Van Cleve who is interested in serving in the Bush Administration.

I have known George for twelve years, and he has worked directly for me for eight out of the last ten years.

He has served as my Counsel on the House Interior Committee, as Counsel for the House Republican Conference, and you may remember him as the Chief Minority Counsel on the Iran-Contra Committee.

He is an extremely able young man, and I am happy to recommend him to you for your consideration.

Dear Mr. Rogers:

I am writing to you at the suggestion of Haley Barbour. I spoke with Haley yesterday, and we discussed the various opportunities that might be available in the White House for a person with my qualifications. While Haley was able to provide some very helpful insights, he explained that each administration is structured differently and that you would be the person best able to discuss the eventual structure of the Bush administration.

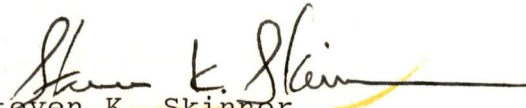

I will be graduating from the University of Chicago Law School in June, and I have decided to pursue a career in public service. I have some experience in both government and politics. I worked as an intern in Vice President Bush's press office for a semester while I was a student, and I later worked on the advance staff for several of the Vice President's trips to the Midwest.

Recently, I have been active in the Illinois Bush campaign. One of my campaign responsibilities was to plan two of George W. Bush's trips into Illinois and to travel with him around the state. I did the same for Marvin Bush for his recent visit to Illinois. I believe that these experiences, combined with my liberal arts and legal training, give me a solid foundation upon which to build.

I would like to be considered for any White House positions that become available. I realize that you you will be extremely busy during the transition, but I would appreciate any information or guidance that you might be able to provide.

Thank you very much for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Steven K. Skinner

MEMORANDUM FOR GOVERNOR SUNUNU
ANDY CARD

FROM:

ED ROGERS Ed

In a conversation with Chase Untermeyer, Congressman Bob Michel passed on the following two candidates he would like to see considered for congressional liaison at the White House:

- (1) Ed Hamberger - Assistant Secretary of Transportation for Government Affairs
- (2) Jerry McKiernan - Former Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Congressional Affairs; currently handling the House side of Congress at the White House

I have drafted the attached letter in response to Michel's suggestions.

Dear Bob:

Chase Untermeyer has passed along to me your suggestions for the congressional liaison position at the White House. I will make sure both candidates are carefully reviewed and considered.

We are working hard to make sure the President-elect has the very best list of candidates that can be developed. Your input is very helpful to our search.

On a personal note, Bob, I look forward to working with you during the 101st Congress. I have long admired your sense of fairness and candor in dealing with the issues and cutting through the endless bureaucracy. Your advice and counsel will mean a great deal to the success of the transition and the administration. Please call on me with your ideas and suggestions.

Best wishes to you and your family this holiday season. I hope we can meet soon after the New Year.

The Honorable Frederick M. Bush
Bush-Quayle Transition Office
1825 Connecticut Avenue, NW
Washington, D.C. 20270

Dear Fred:

Many thanks for the opportunity to present my qualifications to you for a potential position in the Bush Administration. Attached are my resume and the Personnel Data form.

As you know, I've been a loyal supporter and a big George Bush fan since 1979 when you recruited me to work on his 1980 primary campaign for President. Quite frankly, working in any capacity for President-elect Bush would be an honor as I believe in him and want to be as helpful as I can. However, as I am sure a great number of people are saying the same thing, I will take your advice and be specific as to which positions I am most interested in and feel I would best be qualified.

LEGISLATIVE

Having worked for four years as Legislative Assistant for Appropriations for Senator Arlen Specter (R-PA), I understand the legislative process and the intricate "workings" of the Hill. Since the budget deficit will be such an important issue, my knowledge of the Appropriations Committee and many of its key players would be an advantage. On my resume I noted that I was the Senator's LA responsible for the inclusion of the Health Care Coverage for the Unemployed bill in the FY84 Budget Resolution. Through my experience with this legislation, I not only worked closely with Sheila Burke, Minority Leader Dole's current Chief of Staff, but several Democrat Senators and staffs as well. In addition, I have raised funds for several U.S. Senate candidates and appreciate the political process with which they must deal.

It is my feeling that the combination of being a long-term, loyal supporter of President-elect Bush and having the experience of negotiating as well as the willingness to work with the members of Congress will be important qualifications for the individuals who assist President Bush in succeeding with his legislative agenda. Specifically, I am interested in the position of Deputy Assistant to the President for Legislative Affairs (Senate).

Page Two

Because of my legislative background and the recognition of how crucial the budget process is going to be, I would also be interested in working in the Legislative Affairs office of the Office of Management and Budget.

ADMINISTRATION/PERSONNEL MANAGEMENT

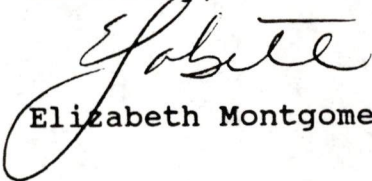

My second choice (after White House Legislative Affairs) would be to pursue working in White House Personnel with Chase Untermeyer. Most of my jobs have entailed personnel management. More importantly in this situation, I would like to help identify longtime and loyal supporters of George Bush as well as competent candidates with "fresh new ideas".

Finally, I would also be interested in the position of Director of the President's Commission on White House Fellowships.

Fred, I greatly appreciate your consideration of my interest in working for the Bush Administration and my qualifications. Please let me know if you need any additional information.

My best.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Montgomery

Dear John:

As you put together your team at the White House, it is especially important that you assemble philosophically sound men and women, yet those who can work with practical imagination to realize the new president's agenda.

In this context, I want to recommend Dinesh D'Souza. You probably know of him in a Dartmouth context. During his last three years in Washington, Dinesh has demonstrated an impressive ability to translate new ideas and good ideas into policy. As the enclosed item suggests, he is able to persuade centrists and even usual opponents to take his ideas seriously, sometimes to adopt them.

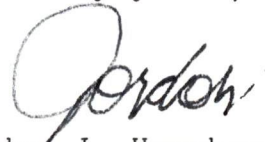

Dinesh is also a first-rate communications person, with wide editing and writing experience, not just in the conservative press, but also in mainstream publications such as the Washington Post, Wall Street Journal, Harper's and Vanity Fair. Although young, he was considered for the job of director of public affairs in the Reagan Administration.

I believe that Dinesh would be a tremendous asset for you in the White House. I know that he would be competent, a team player, and loyal to you and the Bush philosophy. I hope you can secure for him a post in domestic policy or communications that would put his talents to use for the public good.

Dinesh is currently a research fellow at the American Enterprise Institute. The think tank gobbled him right after the campaign. Let's get him back into public service.

With warmest regards, I am

Sincerely yours,

Gordon J. Humphrey, USS

A 'Moral Consensus' On Abortion

The trouble with the abortion debate is that it pits two irreconcilable ideas against each other. Abortion is either the killing of children or it isn't. Since no compromise is possible, each side presses for total victory.

But suppose that instead of beginning with the irreconcilable, we could start with broad consensus. Wouldn't that civilize the debate and improve the prospects for political cease-fire?

Gary Bauer, President Reagan's assistant for policy development, is convinced that it would. He thinks, moreover, that there may be an intellectual basis for doing it.

Put the issue in its usual form—should it be legal for a woman to choose not to take a pregnancy to term?—and you have philosophical war. But try it this way:

"There is widespread agreement on the moral undesirability of abortion. Everyone believes that abortion is not a good thing. . . . Instead of making the divisive issue of legality the starting point for federal policy toward abortion, why not begin with the consensus on the moral undesirability of abortion?"

That, in summary, is the proposal Dinesh D'Souza, a top aide to Bauer, makes in a recent memorandum.

The proposal raises two questions. First, where, in politically useful terms, could one expect to go from such a starting point? Second, will the proposal be viewed by pro-choice advocates as a useful compromise or primarily as a ploy to gain advantage for the anti-abortion partisans?

Bauer himself seems ambivalent.

On the one hand, he seems genuinely dismayed that the debate has degenerated into a winner-take-all war impinging on policy questions ranging from civil-rights enforcement to the nomination of a Supreme Court justice—particularly since hardly anyone can be fairly described as "pro-abortion."

The D'Souza memo concedes that the pro-choice side has, for now, won the legal battle. But, it argues, "if one looks at other areas of policy, one finds that there are a number of activities which are legal which the government nevertheless acts to discourage because most people believe that they are morally undesirable. Perhaps the best example is smoking. Smoking is legal. One can even talk about a right to smoke. But that is by no means inconsistent with government efforts to discourage people from smoking."

On the other hand, the proposal is a bit like Iran's calling for a cease-fire in the Persian Gulf (where continued attacks on shipping threaten its own interests) while continuing to prosecute the land war (where Iraq is at the disadvantage).

For instance, the memo suggests a number of actions the president could take to discourage abortion, actions ranging from education on the hazards of (and alternatives to) abortion to such heavy-handed tactics as disallowing tax exemptions for abortion-related medical expenses and vetoing bills that provide funding for abortions in the District of Columbia.

The document concedes that the attack on funding would be controversial, but insists that it stands the test of reason. "People have a right to drive, but the government does not provide them with automobiles. . . . One may have an unrestricted right [under the First Amendment] to produce lascivious literature without being able to demand that taxpayers pay for it."

As for the argument that to deny funding for abortion is, for poor women, the same as denying the right to abortion, the memo answers: "It is wrong and perhaps even cruel to induce poor women to have abortions and deprive them of their right to have children by making abortions

*"Hardly anyone can be fairly described as
'pro-abortion.'"*

cheaper and birth relatively more expensive."

Bauer believes that the proposal might appeal to both sides in the abortion debate, in that it takes no position on attempts to overturn Roe v. Wade.

"What we are saying is that people can continue to disagree on the human life bill, the Hatch amendment—the jurisprudence. These are separate issues. What we are proposing is that we operate from an existing social consensus, in the short term, to take steps to reduce the number of abortions. That ought to appeal to the pro-life people."

"But it should also appeal to those—possibly the majority of Americans—who say 'I'm personally opposed to it, but I think abortion should be legal.'"

"On a scale of 1 to 10, there is an agreement between the pro-life and the pro-choice groups from Point 1 to Point 5. The cleavage opens after that. But social policy is paralyzed at Point 1 right now."

"Where has it gotten us? The abortion rate has not gone down. The legal issues aside, it would be real progress—for both sides—if we could convince fewer women to have abortions."

Now, if Bauer and D'Souza could persuade the administration to do what it can to reduce the number of unwanted pregnancies . . .

Mr. Charles Untermeyer
Office of the President-Elect
1825 Connecticut Ave. N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20270

Dear Mr. Untermeyer:

Jim Colvard called me last week to say that you had discussed my interest in joining the Bush Administration. He relayed your suggestion that I write you and indicate specific positions I would be interested in filling, if asked. This follows your letter to me dated October 17, and my reply of October 24.

I believe my excellent background and keen intellect could best be utilized in a senior staff position in the White House, either on the National Security Council or in the Office of Policy Development. Specifically, I am interested in the current position on the NSC Staff designated as Counsellor. My understanding is that this position involves the analysis of longer-range policy in the foreign affairs and national security areas and assists the National Security Adviser to articulate the objectives and goals of Administration policy, both in written and oral communication. Through my extensive writing on U.S. foreign and national security policy over the past thirty years, plus my career in both the State and Defense Departments, I am uniquely qualified to provide the staff support needed to help the Administration formulate longer-term national security policy. The current Executive Director of the NSC, Mr. Paul Stevens, agrees that I am highly qualified to fill this post.

Although I am not as well acquainted with the functions of the Office of Policy Development in the White House, my training as a political scientist with a strong economics interest would certainly be useful in a position wherein priorities among various proposals need to be established.

I am the author of a well-known methodology for establishing priorities in the foreign policy/national security areas, and this model for balancing ends and means can as well be adapted to the domestic and the international economic policy formulation. My strength lies in the analytical and policy articulation fields, and these attributes are easily transferable to domestic policy development from national security considerations.

A third position of major interest is the Director of the Policy Planning Staff in the State Department. This position, of course, will be shaped by the desires of James Baker, the Secretary of State Designate. My understanding is that this position is one principal adviser to the Secretary and the Under Secretary on the broad range of foreign policy issues that will face the United States in the next four years. As with the NSC Counsellor position, the Director of State's Policy Planning Staff prepares many of the papers and studies which go beyond the day-to-day decision-making in foreign policy and helps the Secretary look at the longer range trends in the world and the alternative ways of dealing with them. I would be highly qualified by experience, writing ability and intellectual creativity to provide that kind of staff support to the Secretary of State. If the position of Director is filled by a more qualified person than I, then a senior position on the Policy Planning Staff might be acceptable and I would consider it.

Finally, I would be willing to return to the Pentagon, in the Office of the Secretary, to a senior position in the Office of the Under Secretary for Policy, perhaps as the Deputy Under Secretary of Defense for Policy. By experience and interest, I am highly qualified to look at the national security implications of U.S. base structure and force deployments overseas and have written extensively on this subject. I am tough enough intellectually to make hard decisions in a period where difficult choices will be required.

Please let me know when it would be useful to come to Washington to talk with appropriate officials. I am available anytime and would be happy to work with the Transition Team if that would be helpful to you.

Respectfully yours,

Klaus F. Fuchs

Bush Passes Test As Health Becomes Issue In Campaigns

Now that George Bush has been elected our 41st president, an important consideration for the next four years is his physical and emotional strength in carrying out the awesome tasks of this office.

In the closing days of the campaign, Bush showed signs of fatigue and told interviewers he could not wait for the ordeal to end. For a man of 64, his schedule during the last six months — first the primaries and then the election campaign — was nothing short of a marathon. Michael Dukakis also had an endurance test.

The only real benefit of the grueling year-long campaigning by both candidates is that it prepares them for the rigorous task of running the U.S. government and defending the country in a dangerous world. Both Bush and Dukakis showed they have the stamina to hold the office of president.

The presidency has been called a "killer job" because it embodies two roles that in the British parliamentary system are held by two people: chief of state and chief of government.

Not only does the U.S. president have to run the executive departments and agencies as the chief executive, he also represents the United States in the ceremonial role as chief of state and as chief diplomatic representative of this country. He is also commander-in-chief of the Armed Forces — an awesome and time-consuming job in the nuclear age.

Is George Bush physically fit to cope with the presidency during four, and possibly eight, years?

The New York Times recently ran lengthy articles on the physical condition of the candidates and reported that both were physically fit for the job. Four of Bush's doctors said that he is in excellent physical condition and spelled this out with details of his medical history. The Times said that it now makes a practice of questioning the presidential candidates about medical problems because presidential fitness has become a public issue.

"Disclosure of medical data has become standard," the Times said, "because of the serious illness recent presidents have suffered while in the White House, and the discovery after the deaths of other leaders that they and their aides misled the public about their health."

It is now known, for example, that Franklin Roosevelt was incapacitated on numerous occasions while in the White House and that he was dying after his election to a fourth term in 1944. Dwight Eisenhower was more seriously ill after his heart attack than his doctors revealed, and John Kennedy suffered from a debilitating illness that his staff hid from public view.

Dr. Kenneth Crispell, former vice president for health affairs at the University of Virginia, has co-authored with Carlos Gomez a new book titled "Hidden Illness in the White House." In it, these medical men demonstrate the importance of public disclosure of a candidate's physical and emotional health before selection to run for president.

Until Ronald Reagan won the presidency in 1980, some suggested that no one over 65 should seriously seek the job, because he would lack the stamina required to fulfill all the roles of president. Reagan was a few weeks short of his 70th birthday when he entered the White House and has shown more endurance during eight years than most people thought possible.

No one questions George Bush's physical fitness at age 64, and the campaign has emphasized his daily exercise program. Three other postwar presidents were over 60 when they entered the White House: Dwight Eisenhower was 62, Harry Truman was nearly 61 when Franklin Roosevelt died in 1945, and Gerald Ford was 61 when he replaced Richard Nixon in 1974. Age is not, therefore, a current issue.

The question of George Bush's health was raised by Democrats in a different context in the election campaign. They professed to worry about his health because they questioned the qualifications of the Republican vice-presidential nominee, Sen. Dan Quayle. They pointed out that three vice presidents since World War II (Truman, Johnson, Ford) were elevated to the presidency when their chiefs died or resigned. They implied that even though George Bush was in good health, it was too great a risk to have Quayle in line to become president in case Bush should be removed for any reason.

Certainly Vice President-Elect Quayle has much to learn about the presidency before he is ready to move up, but so did George Bush eight years ago and so did Walter Mondale in 1976. Each learned the job while serving as vice president, and there is no reason to doubt that Quayle too will quickly learn the differences between being a United States senator and being the president.

Don Nuechterlein is a political scientist who teaches at the Federal Executive Institute in Charlottesville.

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT-ELECT
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20270

05 December 1988

Dear Nuechterlein:

On behalf of President-Elect Bush, thank you for your willingness to serve in the White House.

I have referred your letter to Governor Sununu's office for his consideration.

With thanks and best wishes.

Sincerely,

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT
OFFICE OF SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY POLICY
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20506

December 6, 1988

07 DEC REC'D

Dear Mr. Untermeyer:

I enthusiastically recommend Dr. D. Allan Bromley to serve as Science Adviser to President Bush.

Dr. Bromley, Henry Ford II Professor of Physics at Yale University and founder and Director of the A.W. Wright Nuclear Structure Laboratory at Yale, has created a world-class center for graduate education in the nuclear sciences. In August 1987, Vice President Bush participated in the dedication ceremony of Dr. Bromley's latest accelerator at the Wright Laboratory at Yale.

During the 1988 Presidential campaign, Dr. Bromley was active in recruiting Scientists and Engineers for Bush. He also organized a public forum at Yale that brought together faculty and students to support Vice President Bush.

A nuclear physicist of international stature, Dr. Bromley is a leader in the national and international scientific communities. He is past president of the 132,000 member American Association for the Advancement of Science, the world's largest scientific society, as well as of the International Union of Pure and Applied Physics, the world coordinating body for physics research. He has been a member or chairman of national advisory committees to many federal agencies and has contributed to national and international panels and commissions.

Dr. Bromley has led four Presidential missions -- three to India and one to Brazil -- to negotiate equitable U.S. science and technology cooperation with those countries. The Indian missions followed the 1982 announcement by President Reagan and Prime Minister Indira Gandhi of a Science and Technology Initiative between the United States and India; Allan Bromley chaired a panel of eminent scientists and engineers charged with developing and implementing the initiative. More recently, I signed a three-year extension of the S&T Initiative on behalf of President Reagan last October in India following eight months of intense negotiations in which Dr. Bromley played a key role.

In 1986, when President Reagan and President Sarney of Brazil established a Presidential Science and Technology Initiative, Dr. Bromley served as the U.S. chairman of the U.S.-Brazil Presidential Panel on Science and Technology Cooperation, which developed jointly a very useful set of recommendations for bilateral cooperation in science.

As a member of the White House Science Council since its inception in 1982, Allan Bromley has helped shape the debate and articulate the science policies of this nation. With David Packard, he chaired the White House Science Council's 1986 Report on the Health of U.S. Colleges and Universities, which influenced the Administration's decision to sustain and strengthen our unparalleled commitment to support for basic research.

President Reagan awarded Dr. Bromley the National Medal of Science in 1988. The President has also nominated him to membership on the National Science Board, which governs the National Science Foundation.

In addition to being a distinguished scholar, Dr. Bromley serves on the board of directors of three major corporations and has a sound understanding of the relationship between science and technology on the one hand and U.S. economic strength and national security on the other. He would bring his formidable intellect, energy, prestige, and eloquence to the position of Science Adviser.

As President Reagan's Science Adviser, I have valued Allan Bromley's counsel, insight, and judgment. Scientist, scholar, teacher, diplomat, corporate director -- Allan Bromley is an indefatigable and highly valued contributor to the formulation and implementation of Administration science policy.

I recommend Allan Bromley to you with unreserved confidence and enthusiasm.

Sincerely,

William R. Graham
Science Adviser to the President and Director,
Office of Science and Technology Policy

Resume and Biographical Data

Mr. Chase Untermeyer
Personnel Director
Office of the President-elect
1825 Connecticut Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20270

cc: L The Honorable John Sununu

D. Allan Bromley is the Henry Ford II Professor of Physics and Director of the A. W. Wright Nuclear Structure Laboratory at Yale University. Born in Westmeath, Ontario, Canada, he received his undergraduate education in the Faculty of Engineering at Queen's University, in Canada, receiving the B.Sc. degree with highest honors in 1948. He received the M.Sc. degree from Queen's University in 1950 and the Ph.D degree from the University of Rochester in 1952, both degrees in nuclear physics. He subsequently has been awarded 10 honorary doctorates from universities in Canada, France, Germany, Italy, South Africa, and the United States.

Remaining on the University of Rochester faculty from 1952-1955, he moved to the Chalk River Laboratories of Atomic Energy of Canada where he was Senior Scientific Officer and Section Head. In 1960 he was appointed to a professorship in physics at Yale; he served as chairman of Yale's physics department from 1970 to 1977, founded the Wright Laboratory in 1963, and has been its Director since that time, and was appointed to the Henry Ford II chair in 1972.

One of the world's leading nuclear physicists, he has carried out pioneering studies on both the structure and dynamics of nuclei and is considered the father of modern heavy ion science, one of the major areas of nuclear science. He has also played major roles in the development of accelerators, of detection systems, and in computer based data acquisition and analysis systems. An outstanding teacher, over the past two decades, his Laboratory at Yale has graduated more Ph.D's in experimental nuclear physics than any other institution, worldwide. He has published over 450 papers in science and technology and edited eighteen books.

Apart from his research and teaching at Yale, he has played an active role in both national and international science and science policy. As chairman of the National Academy's Physics Survey in the early 1970s, he contributed in a central way to charting the future of that science in the subsequent decade. As President of the American Association for the Advancement of Science—the world's largest scientific society—and of the International Union of Pure and Applied Physics—the world coordinating body for that science—he has been one of the leading spokesmen for US science and for international scientific cooperation.

In recent years he has served as chairman of the US side of both the Gandhi-Reagan Indo/US and the Sarney-Reagan Brazil/US Science and Technology Initiatives and is a member of the US/USSR Joint Coordinating Committee for Research on the Fundamental Properties of Matter and of the Council on Foreign Relations.

He is a charter member of the White House Science Council, the senior US advisory group in science and technology policy. In July of 1988 he was awarded the highest US scientific honor — the National Medal of Science — by President Reagan and was nominated for membership in the National Science Board.

He is married to the former Patricia J. Brasseur and they have two children, David John and Karen Lynn.
