My office never spoke with him, and he never called me asking to see the President.

I think maybe the president was being polite in asking him some questions and maybe Mr. Casey expected something more.

Albert Casey, CEO of the Resolution Trust Company, saw the President yesterday. He says the President suggested he call you to set up an appointment for the two of them.

According to Casey, he had seen the President at the Christmas party where they talked about the need for a meeting. The President told him to set it up. Casey says the President yesterday asked him why they haven't seen each other. Casey told him, "They won't let me in."

Casey says the President told him last night to call Sam Skinner, that Sam would make sure Casey got in.

Casey says he wants to tell the President what is going on, what he's doing.

Dear Mr. Casey:

Thank you for your letter of December 20 in which you advised that you would be glad to provide the President with either an oral or written reply to his query at the Christmas party regarding the Resolution Trust Corporation.

I know you will understand that with the tremendous demands on the President's time, it is extremely difficult to schedule personal appointments, even though each one is important. If you desire, you may put your views in writing for the President's perusal.

It was the President's and Mrs. Bush's pleasure to have your daughter, Judy, and you attend the Christmas party. They send their very best wishes for a Happy New Year.

Sincerely,

STATEMENT OF ALBERT V. CASEY

SENATE CONFIRMATION HEARING
NOMINATION OF ALBERT V. CASEY TO BE THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER OF THE
RESOLUTION TRUST CORPORATION

COMMITTEE ON BANKING, HOUSING, AND URBAN AFFAIRS
UNITED STATES SENATE

JANUARY 22, 1992
10:00 A.M.
ROOM 538
DIRKSEN SENATE OFFICE BUILDING

Good morning Mr. Chairman and members of the Committee. My name is Albert V. Casey. I have been with the Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC) since mid-October of last year when the RTC Board of Directors appointed me to the newly created position of President and Chief Executive Officer. Thereafter, the Resolution Trust Corporation Refinancing, Restructuring, and Improvement Act of 1991, enacted in December, created the statutory position of Chief Executive Officer of the RTC. I received a recess appointment to that position from President Bush earlier this month. I feel honored and privileged that the President has asked me to serve in this position.

I am likewise honored to appear before you today, and I wish to thank you for holding these hearings so promptly. The dual imperatives of securing additional funding legislation, which must be passed in the near future, and facilitating ongoing Congressional oversight, demand that the RTC be responsive to this Committee. I want to assure you that I am committed to this. To that end, I have brought with me a number of the senior staff of the RTC so that if you have technical or operational questions you would like to address, we will be able to respond quickly. I know that during my tenure at the RTC you will ask me some tough questions. I shall answer them honestly and forthrightly; it is the only way I know how.

As I come before you today, I would like to share with you some of my thoughts as to how I plan to apply myself in my role as Chief Executive Officer of the RTC.

In the past three months, as I have served in a position created by the RTC Board of Directors, and have met with many of you on this Committee, I have indeed learned that you and your constituents have expressed concerns about various aspects of the operations of the RTC. I want to assure you that I have been listening.

During my time at the RTC, I have been reviewing the RTC's mission, progress, and operations, including its organization and senior management. I still haven't finished my analysis, but I wish to share with the Committee some of my current thinking.

A decade of savings and loan speculation in the 1980's left this country with enormous wreckage and destruction. By 1989, hundreds of thrifts had failed and millions of depositors were at risk. The RTC was created to respond quickly to this crisis of unprecedented proportions. The numbers involved with the RTC are enormous, and I know that voting on necessary funds to protect depositors is one of the toughest vote any Member of Congress will make.

First and foremost, the RTC's primary mission is to protect the insured depositors at failed thrift institutions at the lowest possible cost to the American taxpayer. We must protect these depositors who placed their faith in the integrity of the financial system. One goal of mine during my tenure at the RTC is to purge a phrase from our vocabulary -- or at least replace it with a better one. The S&L "bailout" is a gross misnomer. As Senator Dodd has so aptly stated in the past, the "bailout" really consists of honoring a contract, a contract with depositors.

The RTC is not bailing out savings and loans, savings and loan executives, or savings and loan stockholders. Just look at the recent local example of Perpetual Savings and Loan. Stockholders have been wiped out, management has lost their jobs, and, unfortunately so have hundreds of other employees. The only parties that have been made whole in this situation are depositors, and that is how the Congress has instructed the RTC to act.

While depositor protection is the primary task of the RTC, it must also take account of other goals set forth by Congress such as the promotion of affordable housing, minority and women contracting, and sensitivity to environmental concerns. It must also keep in mind that it is a public trust; all RTC activities, be they institution sales, asset sales, or contracting, must be carried out through fair and open competition.

All of this must be accomplished in as "user friendly" a way as possible. The RTC has developed a corporate culture of check and recheck. Procedures must be streamlined so that the RTC becomes a more responsive and market oriented organization.

The key responsibility of the CEO is, in my view, to set a tone for the operation of the Corporation, establish an appropriate operating environment, and ensure accountability for the Corporation's actions. The mission of the organization must be constantly affirmed and subdivided clearly and responsibly. I plan to write policies, objectives, procedures -- that is, to set direction. Each party responsible for a function will do this with me. I will also establish an accountability structure -- productivity measures, expense control, quality control, and incentive systems.

I want the RTC to be a service-oriented organization which reaches out to customers with timely and helpful assistance. Accordingly, I have asked the assets sales staff to polish their performance and improve their teamwork. I want to put an end to indecision and inaction. I am promoting a philosophy which in effect says: it is far better to make decisions and make some errors, than to refuse to make decisions and fail to move forward at all.

As a first step, I have reorganized the RTC headquarters chain of command. I am focusing on operations, with the Deputy Executive Directors for Asset Management and Resolutions, as well as the General Counsel, reporting directly to me. David Cooke, the RTC's Executive Director, is focusing on communications and support functions including, among other things, budget and planning, contracting, and administrative operations. These headquarters changes should result in a more flexible and responsive chain of command. Other changes in the organizational structure, especially in the field, also will take place.

David Cooke also heads up a team assembled to help management bring about innovation and improvement. He will be assisted by John Garrity, a faculty member at Georgetown University and former director of McKinsey and Company whom I have brought in as a consultant. George Hanc, Deputy Director of the RTC's Office of Research and Statistics, will manage this project full time and will be joined by several other members of the RTC staff.

To date, the team has identified a number of specific areas of RTC operations for review and developed a general methodology for conducting these reviews. Together with the managers responsible for these areas, the team will specify the issues and opportunities to be addressed, assess improvement efforts already underway, establish targets, and report periodically to me on progress achieved.

The projects that are now getting underway are aimed at helping me and the RTC carry out more effectively our demanding mission in the following ways:

1. To set clear-cut goals and priorities consistent with the public policy objectives in our legislation and with the sound management and operating practices of a nationwide organization with $350 billion passing through its care;
2. To adopt the approaches and act on the programs to ensure the orderly and expeditious resolution of institutions, protection of depositors and disposition of the assets entrusted to us at the lowest net cost to the taxpayer within the funding authorized by the Congress;
3. To set up a plan of organization and staffing, starting with headquarters, which will enable us to carry out our programs in a manner that could become the model for all federal asset programs;
4. To develop practices and processes that will help us to make optimum use of the best private sector resources while maintaining effective control of programs and performance;
5. To establish the systems of management, information, budgeting, financial accounting and internal controls needed to direct this large, complex, widespread organization; and

6. To develop the information and attitudes it takes to win high marks from our many clienteles -- depositors, contractors, underwriters, buyers and public bodies.

I should like to conclude by emphasizing how impressed I am with the people at the RTC. They have accomplished a great deal, no matter how you measure it, under very difficult circumstances. The organization was created in 1989 with 15 borrowed employees grappling with 262 failed thrifts with $104 billion in assets.

Since then, the RTC has

- o taken over more than 675 failed thrifts with about $350 billion in assets;
- o closed 585, or over 85 percent, of these thrifts;
- o collected $218 billion through sales and collections of more than 60 percent of the assets held by these thrifts, reducing dollar for dollar the outlay required by the taxpayer.

All this was accomplished under the pressures of intense media scrutiny, public controversy, economic slowdown, accelerating thrift failures, and the sheer tasks of starting up a new agency.

I should also like to ask the Congress to aid me in leading the RTC. In order for the RTC to do its job, it must have adequate funds to close down insolvent thrifts. Additional funds were provided in the legislation passed last November, but these funds will not be available to the RTC after April 1. I urge you to take up RTC funding as soon as possible so that the RTC can continue operations without costly delays. As I said earlier, I realize that this is not a popular vote. It does not even occur to the public that, but for taxpayer funds, insured depositors at failed thrifts would not get back all their money and what monies they did get would take years to recover.

Mr. Chairman, this concludes my opening statement. I thank you and your colleagues, and shall be pleased to answer any questions you may have.

Dear Sam:

Many thanks for our conversation this afternoon. I'm enclosing a copy of the letter I sent to John Sununu last fall, outlining the details of the dinner in Boston next May.

The only change is that we've now decided to hold it on Thursday the 28th instead of Friday the 29th. We plan to go ahead next week to let people know the date and ask our guests to save it, and we'll send out formal invitations at the beginning of May.

I know it's difficult to plan the President's schedule that far ahead. As I mentioned, we would also be glad to arrange an appropriate event at my home in McLean such as the one President and Mrs. Reagan attended in 1985, if that would be more convenient for the President -- perhaps after the primaries and before your Convention.

With respect and warmest regards,

As ever,

The Honorable Sam Skinner
Chief of Staff
The White House
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Mr. Skinner:

In preparation for your briefing today, I prepared the attached report stating the ASC position on the Bush Defense Budget. Simply put, this report strongly emphasizes the vital importance of President Bush's defense budget, and at the same time it outlines the serious drawbacks to the alternative proposals which are now circulating on Capitol Hill.

I've also enclosed a copy of the bi-partisan request from the Co-Chairmen of the National Security Caucus for our Foundation to develop a new strategy for the United States for their consideration.

They have asked us to do this because we originated the Peace Through Strength strategy, and because we have organized a Coalition for International Security to develop and promote a Peace Through Strength Strategy for the 21st Century. See the enclosed brochure.

Cordially,

John M. Fisher

P.S. I've enclosed a photo of an award we hope to present to President Bush for his national security leadership.

American Security Council Strongly Supports Bush Defense Budget

The United States military will have to accept many painful reductions if Congress passes President Bush's FY 93 defense budget. This "downsizing" will affect practically all aspects of our military, but they are reductions the national security community can and will accept.

The Bush budget reflects our new relationship with the Russian Federation, and our Commander-in-Chief definitely needs grassroots support to enact his budget priorities. Not only does the Bush budget face significant opposition, but many prominent lawmakers are advocating programs that would be in complete contrast to the national security interests of the United States.

In general, the lawmakers opposing President Bush and the bi-partisan leadership of the National Security Caucus do not realize that one of the most important decisions facing the people of the United States today is to determine if we will address the new challenges facing the international community. This includes a wide range of efforts to help the United States win the peace.

Unfortunately, the history of this entire century has been marked by unsuccessful efforts to win the peace. An allied coalition was victorious in World War I, but they started to lose the peace at Versailles. The result two decades later was World War II. An allied coalition was victorious in defeating Nazi and fascist totalitarianism in World War II. Unfortunately, we began to lose the peace shortly after the war during conferences at Yalta and Potsdam. The result in just a few years was the Cold War.

Today our nation has emerged victorious in both the Cold War and Operation Desert Storm. However, we must remember the words of George Santayana who told us "Those who forget the past, are condemned to repeat it."

The world has been changing around us faster in the last few years than at any time in recent history. We have witnessed the dissolution of the former Soviet Union; the liberation of Eastern Europe; the abolishment of the Warsaw Pact; the reunification of Germany; the liberation of Kuwait; and the emergence of democracy in such diverse nations as Panama, Nicaragua and Angola.

February 26, 1992

U.S. Leadership is Essential

The free nations of the world once again learned the vital importance of collective security last year during Operation Desert Storm. This successful campaign demonstrated that we must never forget the shared responsibilities for peace, prosperity, and international security. Unfortunately, as the New Hampshire primary demonstrated, there are many national leaders who have already forgotten the lessons of Desert Storm. Such diverse politicians as Pat Buchanan, Tom Harkin and Doug Wilder are now urging isolationist policies on the U.S. Government.

These politicians, and many others, are questioning the value of the system of alliances we developed after World War II to counter Soviet expansionism. This system includes the United Nations, NATO, the U.S.-Japan Security Treaty, the U.S. Agency for International Development, the International Monetary Fund, the World Bank, the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, and a host of lesser institutions.

The isolationist arguments are being advanced by conservatives who distrust the multilateral banks and aid agencies, and by liberals who want to dismantle the U.S. defense establishment and spend the savings on new social welfare schemes. This post war system of global institutions and alliances is not beyond reproach. This is especially true in light of the collapse of the former Soviet Union and imperial communism. Without question these international institutions have made mistakes, and various reforms will be essential in the future.

The great decision facing us today is whether the leverage and benefits these institutions give to the United States and our allies is worth the cost. From the perspective of the global programs of the American Security Council, I believe these institutions and our alliances have been essential in exerting the world wide influence of the United States, and in maintaining global peace and international security. Abandoning our geopolitical role will not enrich us -- it will merely diminish us.

Congressman Les Aspin, the Chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, has just announced his response to President Bush's defense budget. In recognition of our new relationship with Russia, President Bush last year unveiled a 25 percent reduction in Pentagon spending. Under this earlier Bush plan Pentagon spending would have declined by 36 percent since 1985.

Tensions between the United States and Russia continued to significantly decline in 1991, and because of this President Bush announced an additional $50 billion reduction in defense spending during his State of the Union address last month. This new Bush plan will be very painful for the Pentagon, but it is clearly in our national security interests, and this military downsizing can and should take place.

However, we are very concerned about Chairman Aspin's program which calls for reductions ranging from $50 to $120 billion beyond the President's recommendations. The Aspin proposal would shrink our forces too much and too fast, and simply put, it is not in our national security interests.

Under the Bush plan defense spending would be sinking to its lowest level in 50 years; 81 weapons programs will be wiped out; aircraft production lines will shut down; there will be fewer soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines; and fewer Army divisions, fighter wings, ships, submarines, and aircraft carriers.

Once again, these are painful reductions, but they will maintain our power projection capabilities and our overall national security interests. Unfortunately, this is not the case when it comes to the Aspin recommendations. These reductions are very unwise and by following this alternative plan we would essentially be gambling that everything goes well in the world until we build the next generation of advanced weapons. That will not happen in this century.

The Aspin budget will not give us the ability to confront another Operation Desert Storm in the years ahead. It does not provide the military with the muscle it needs. Worse yet, could we fight and defeat smarter and stronger forces in a major war on many fronts, with a drastic force cut along the Aspin lines. Will future aggressors wait patiently while we build up our forces? For this country to stay a superpower, protecting freedom around the world, then it must have the ability to project power. The Aspin bill clearly sends us in the wrong direction.

Lessons of Desert Storm

Two important lessons came out of the Persian Gulf conflict. First, Stealth technology is extremely valuable, and it is very cost effective. The second lesson is that it is absolutely vital to be able to shoot down incoming ballistic missiles. The Aspin budget blatantly ignores these lessons.

The ASC lobbying team on Capitol Hill is constantly being told that various weapons systems are too expensive. For decades we have fully supported all Pentagon procurement reforms, and we have undertaken major initiatives to stop any waste, fraud and abuse. I believe Operation Desert Storm demonstrated that the right weapons never cost too much. We have learned in many conflicts that it is defeat that costs too much. It is needless deaths in battle that are expensive, and it is an American population totally defenseless against nuclear missile attack that must be protected.

Another major concern is that the so-called Aspin bill does not reflect any strategic world outlook. ASC supports a long term strategic perspective that will have to be driven by the fiscal constraints facing our nation and a changing world. The Bush budget was developed based upon a plan to reduce the overall size of the military, but at the same time increasing its technological and strategic ability.

Operation Desert Storm reinforced our view that the single greatest advantage our nation has is superior technology. In Operation Desert Storm this allowed us to wreak havoc on an enemy with less damage to our own troops and to innocent civilians than at any time in any military conflict in the history of the world.

The Aspin budget, which will be proposed by many House Democrats, rejects that vision and clings to the past and ignores the future. The Aspin bill clings to a past in which lawmakers had to opportunity to put "pork barrel" projects in big defense budgets.

In the past our nation was able to both prepare our troops for the future, and at the same time spend money in practically every congressional district in the nation. Lawmakers are still clinging to a past when the doctrine of mutually assured destruction might have made some sense, and they are clinging to a past when we did not have the threat of proliferation of missiles in Third World nations.

Despite domestic pressures, it is still necessary to maintain our preparedness because 15 developing nations by the year 2000 will have ballistic missiles, and eight of those nations either now have or soon will have nuclear capabilities.

Both our domestic needs and global priorities can be achieved. This is also the belief of our Commander-in-Chief, and I am in complete agreement with President Bush who recently said:

"It is our steadfastness over four decades that has brought us to this moment of historic opportunity. . . . We must protect the legacy of the post World War II era while enabling the United States to help shape a new era, one that moves beyond containment and will take us into the next century We cannot lead a new world abroad if, at home, it's politics as usual. It's time to rise above the parochial and the pork-barrel -- to do what is necessary, what's right, and what will enable this nation to play the leadership role required of us."

The price of peace and freedom has always been eternal vigilance. The United States must continue to promote global peace and prosperity. At the same time we must never allow the sacrifices of the brave men and women who served in our armed forces to have been in vain.

In conclusion, the most significant great decision before our nation is to recognize that the survival of peace, prosperity and freedom must continue to be based on the courage and moral stamina of the American people to meet the challenges of global leadership.

Mr. John M. Fisher
Chairman and C.E.O.
American Security Council Foundation
Boston, Virginia 22713

Dear John:

We are writing to you in our role as Co-Chairmen of the bi-partisan National Security Caucus and in your role as research coordinator for this Caucus.

On November 25th the House of Representatives unanimously passed House Resolution 284 (copy attached). This Sense of the Congress Resolution emphasizes the urgent "need for a comprehensive, coordinated strategy to help the United States achieve its goal of being the strongest nation on Earth militarily and economically, so that it remains the greatest nation in support of human dignity, freedom and democratic ideals."

This letter is to serve as a formal request for the ASC Foundation to develop for our consideration a strategy to meet the need described in House Resolution 284.

At no expense to the U.S. government, we would like you to do this through your National Strategy Commission which is part of the bi-partisan Coalition for International Security. This Commission would work in the public interest toward the adoption and implementation of a national strategy for peace and prosperity through military, economic, and diplomatic strength.

Because the ASC Foundation led the effort of the bi-partisan Coalition which developed the successful strategy for peace through strength, you are uniquely qualified to develop a post-Cold-War strategy through your coordination of the Coalition for International Security.

It is our understanding that the Honorable Alexander M. Haig, Jr., the former Secretary of State; Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, USN (Ret.), the former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff;

Amb. William Kintner, former U.S. Ambassador to Thailand; and you already serve as the initial Co-Chairmen of this bi-partisan Commission.

This strategy should focus on the many challenges to our security. Future defense policies should be an essential element, but we would also like this effort to address topics such as the global leadership role of the United States; our international competitiveness; economic growth; energy security; human rights; and space policy. We would also like the National Strategy Commission to deal with long-term problems such as the rapidly growing budget deficit and foreign debt; drug abuse; poverty; and waste and inefficiency in government and industry.

This is a major assignment, and we hope it can be accomplished by preparing a non-partisan synthesis of the best liberal, moderate and conservative thinking on national strategy for the United States. The National Strategy Commission will serve as a means through which scholars, national organizations, political and government leaders, experts and prominent opinion makers from both parties can work together to develop a new consensus national strategy.

As part of this process, it is important that you survey each Senator and Representative -- particularly those who belong to the National Security Caucus - for their ideas and then give them working drafts for their comment.

Further, we ask you to seek advice from the White House and the Departments of Defense, State, Energy, Commerce, Labor, Education, Health and Human Services, Justice and the Treasury.

We know many of our colleagues look forward to contributing their knowledge and views, and we will all be very interested in the resultant new strategy proposal.

Meeting The New CHALLENGE

PEACE THROUGH STRENGTH VICTORY

Early changes in Soviet Communism led by Mikhail Gorbachev and Boris Yeltsin were both made possible by and forced by President Ronald Reagan's Peace Through Strength Strategy.

Soviet Communism's subsequent unraveling was dramatically helped along by President George Bush's application of this strategy in his Operation Desert Storm demonstration of America's will combined with extraordinary diplomatic and military skill.

As an early member of the Coalition for Peace Through Strength, I supported the resolution for a Peace Through Strength strategy, and it was incorporated as part of the 1980 Republican Platform.

Quietly and effectively, your Coalition for Peace Through Strength has made a great contribution toward restoring the credibility of America's defenses and assuring that all-important margin of safety. Your work on Capitol Hill and with the public at large has been a principal factor in returning America to the days when she was militarily strong and morally principled.

President Ronald Reagan, Speech to American Security Council Foundation

You started the whole idea of Peace Through Strength. It's amazing how the whole idea of Peace Through Strength has captured the imagination and rhetoric of the congressional and presidential campaigns.

There's no lesson in history that is more obvious than the simple fact that weakness is provocative. By adopting the terminology that the ASC has, we capture the high moral, philosophical, historical, intellectual, and indeed political ground. A national strategy of Peace Through Strength is a winning idea.

Rep. Jack Kemp (R-NY) as Congressional Co-Chairman of the National Security Caucus, Speech to American Security Council

Our policy of "Peace Through Strength" is leading us toward a more stable and peaceful world, a world where human rights and individual liberty are cherished and protected. I'd like to thank each of you for your support of our strategic modernization program—the program which has played a key role in the positive changes we see unfolding around us.

Nonetheless, more work remains to be done, and continuation of the reforms we are witnessing in the Communist world cannot be taken for granted. I look to security-minded individuals like yourselves to help the Bush Administration maintain a prudent national security policy.

President George Bush, Message to Members of the American Security Council Foundation and National Security Caucus

Meeting the New Challenge

We are proud to have had some part in the peace through strength victory.

Now, we need to work together for lasting world peace and international security.

In many ways, this is even harder because our nation has a history of winning wars and then losing the peace.

Already many Americans are so euphoric over our victory that they want to disarm unilaterally just as we did after World Wars I and II. And, many of these Americans have become neo- isolationists.

These anti-defense forces have already made significant headway and may prevail unless the peace-through-strength forces renew their efforts.

This is our new challenge.

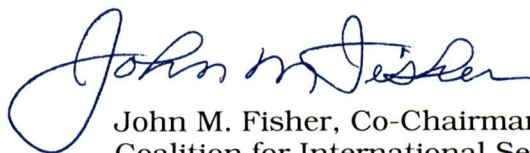

We can meet this new challenge if we work together to develop and promote the adoption of an inspiring new national strategy to best serve our national interests in a changing but still dangerous world.

This new strategy would place greater emphasis on international security cooperation like that of Operation Desert Storm. But, this new strategy must integrate our responsibilities for world leadership with priorities vital to ensuring our own strength, vitality and progress.

Thus we must also deal with long term internal threats such as the rapidly growing budget deficit and foreign debt, the adverse balance of trade, our educational deficit, drug abuse, poverty, and waste and inefficiency in government and industry.

This is why the Coalition for Peace Through Strength and the Coalition for Desert Storm have combined into the Coalition for International Security.

We invite you to join with us to meet this new challenge.

NATIONAL SECURITY CAUCUS

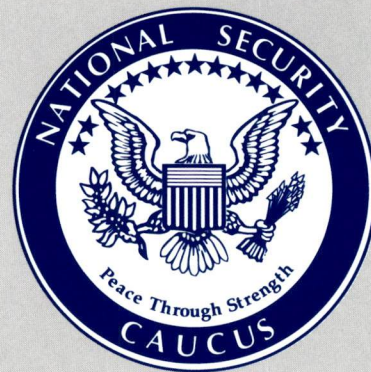

The bi-partisan National Security Caucus is an organization of Members of the U.S. Congress—Senators and Representatives who are united in subscribing to the principles and goals of a national strategy for peace through strength. They are now working on updating this strategy to cover other national interests.

The Caucus, which was founded in 1978 as the Congressional Division of the Coalition for Peace Through Strength, currently has over 200 members from 45 states.

The Caucus addresses defense and foreign policy issues, with each member of the Caucus reserving the right to decide how the principles of a national strategy are best applied in each case. Their voting record, however, is remarkably consistent. In the last Congress, for example, the average score of Caucus members on the American Security Council's National Security Voting Index was 91%, whereas the average score on the same index was only 15% for the Congressional members of the Arms Control and Foreign Policy Caucus.

The National Security Caucus takes positions on specific issues only when a majority of its Co-Chairmen, including at least two from each party, so decide. The National Security Caucus receives support on research and educational matters from the American Security Council Foundation.

The National Security Caucus Institute of the American Security Council Foundation serves the National Security Caucus as an information exchange on defense and foreign policy issues, provides a forum for the consideration of legislative and public policy options, conducts public policy analysis, legislative education, and research. The National Security Caucus and the ASC Foundation jointly sponsor an intern program, seminars, and task forces on a variety of issues. Co-Chairmen of the National Security Caucus worked with the American Security Council and the Foundation in organizing the Coalition for International Strategy to help formulate a post cold war consensus national strategy.

COALITION FOR INTERNATIONAL SECURITY

The Coalition for Peace Through Strength, organized in 1978 by the American Security Council, originated the Peace Through Strength strategy followed by Presidents Reagan and Bush.

Now that Soviet Communism has been defeated, major revisions of the Peace Through Strength strategy are necessary to meet the challenges of a rapidly changing but still dangerous world. So, the Coalition for Peace Through Strength has merged with the Coalition for International Security (CIS). CIS serves as a means through which organizations, political leaders, experts and prominent opinion makers from both parties can work together to develop a new consensus national strategy for the United States.

The Honorary CIS Co-Chairmen are former Presidents Ronald Reagan, Gerald Ford and Richard Nixon. It is bi-partisan, with five Cabinet members from the Carter Administration, other key leaders in the Democratic and Republican parties, Congressional leaders, Governors, national association executives, and American statesmen in diverse fields.

CIS originated as the Coalition for Desert Storm, which was organized by Co-Chairmen of the bi-partisan National Security Caucus in the U.S. Congress. All Coalition members signed a "Proclamation in Support of Operation Desert Storm" stating that "the bravery and sacrifice of our servicemen and women must not be in vain, and therefore we pledge to them that when they have won militarily we will continue to work vigorously for world peace and international security."

To fulfill that pledge, the Coalition for Desert Storm continued as the Coalition for International Security.

The CIS will not take any positions as such, but its members will contribute their knowledge and views to a United States National Strategy Commission, made up of Coalition members, which will synthesize the best liberal, moderate and conservative thinking into coherent Commission positions.

The Commission and the Coalition are staffed by the American Security Council and the ASC Foundation which have a long history of managing studies like this.

For example, in 1963-64 ASC worked with 102 national organizations and 128 cooperating universities and colleges in preparing a non-partisan synthesis of the best liberal, moderate and conservative thinking on a national security strategy for the United States.

In 1984, the ASC Foundation worked with 240 Members of Congress, 96 national organizations and 514 universities and colleges in preparing a study entitled "A Strategy for Peace Through Strength."

ADMINISTRATION & ADVOCACY

The American Security Council was established in 1955 and engages in public policy advocacy on national security issues. It is tax exempt under Section 501 (c) (6) of the Internal Revenue Code as a business league. Thus, business dues and business contributions to projects are deductible as an ordinary and necessary business expense. Individual contributions are not deductible because the ASC does work to influence the passage of legislation.

The ASC represents and is funded by individual members of its National Advisory Board and corporate members of its Business Advisory Board.

COMMUNICATION— THE KEY TO ACTION

In support of the work of the Coalition for International Security and the National Security Caucus, the ASCF and/or the ASC uses a multi-media approach with various combinations of press releases, press conferences, briefings, newspaper ads, direct mail, telephone, radio and TV spots, TV documentaries, films and speakers.

Congressional Members and other experts and leaders in the Coalition will be made available for interviews by electronic and print media as stories break.

The ASC/ASCF staff, and Coalition members will prepare and distribute op-ed pieces and articles to local newspapers in support of Coalition goals.

TV Documentaries

Since TV is the principal source of information concerning public affairs, it is vital to produce and show television documentaries and spots.

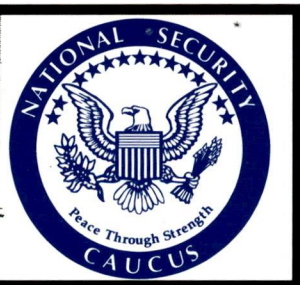

The ASC Foundation has produced eight TV documentaries which have been shown a combined total of over 6,000 times on local television stations. The majority of these TV showings have been on a public service basis.

The ASCF makes these documentaries available to the Members of Congress in the National Security Caucus to show on TV with their own introduction and close.

RESEARCH & EDUCATION

The American Security Council Foundation, a public policy center, founded in 1958, does research and education to improve public understanding of national security issues. It is publicly supported and is tax exempt under Section 501 (c) (3) of the Internal Revenue Code. Thus, contributions from individuals, corporations and foundations are deductible.

The ASCF represents and is funded by individuals on its United States Congressional Advisory Board and Advisory Council of the U.S. National Strategy Commission and corporate members of its Business Advisory Council

ASCF PUBLICATIONS

National Security Report

The National Security Report is a monthly newsletter to keep all the people cooperating in this system informed on national security issues and actions taken on these issues.

National Security Policy Papers

National Security Policy Papers are position papers published as needed on current public issues.

National Security Analysis Papers

National Security Analysis papers present the facts concerning current public policy issues without taking positions.

LEGISLATIVE AND GOVERNMENT RELATIONS

Many members and supporters of the Coalition for International Security are interested in the implementation of Coalition goals by the passage of legislation or administrative action at the federal, state and local level.

The American Security Council coordinates the legislative interests of these CIS members as it did for the Coalition for Peace Through Strength.

When a new national strategy is developed by CIS, the objective is to repeat the earlier success when the Peace Through Strength strategy was adopted as national policy.

As part of the last campaign, a Peace Through Strength Resolution was co-sponsored by 257 members of Congress, passed by 13 state legislatures and included in the 1980 & 1984 Republican Party Convention platforms. The ASC will also continue its advocacy on individual issues to repeat its past successes such as that recognized by John Tower, as chairman of the Senate Armed Services committee in saying that "without the ASC, we would not have had a B-1 bomber or a MX missile."

NATIONAL SECURITY VOTING INDEX

The American Security Council publishes a biannual National Security Voting Index.

The ASC Voting Index rates each Member of Congress by comparing key national security votes in Congress with ASC member and public opinion.

The Voting Index is given wide publicity when it is released and is frequently used by newspapers and TV news as a measure of performance in office.

It is the only national security voting index published in the Almanac of American Politics.

LEGISLATIVE ALERT

The American Security Council also publishes a Legislative Alert series as needed to let members know about key upcoming votes in the Congress and give them pertinent facts and analysis so that they might be better qualified to express their opinion to their elected representatives before the vote.

NATIONAL SECURITY CAUCUS INSTITUTE

The National Security Caucus Institute is operated by the American Security Council Foundation. This is part of its role as the research and education coordinator for the National Security Caucus and the Coalition for International Security.

The Institute is located on an 837 acre estate at Boston, Virginia about 75 miles from Washington, D.C.

This facility houses the Foundation's communications center, the Sol Feinstein library with over 7,000,000 index cards, administration offices and a live-in Gus A. Buder, Jr. seminar center.

The seminar center's conference room has complete audio-visual facilities with a six by twelve foot rear projection screen, rear projection TV and satellite downlink.

It is used for meetings of the United States National Strategy Commission, Caucus Members, Coalition leaders, briefings for key Congressional staffers, press seminars, leadership seminars for members of the ASCF's U.S. Congressional Advisory Board, ASC members and representatives of other organizations.

The ASCF also has a long history of conducting seminars for the national leadership of major organizations. For example, several seminars have been conducted for the national leadership group of the American Legion Auxiliary and the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

You will help our people understand what they are faced with in this most fateful of wars. And I know that to support the growth and strength of freedom you will make sound proposals based on solid fact, not on wishful thinking.

General Dwight D. Eisenhower.

It is important and vital work you are doing—alerting the attention of America's youth to the need for vigor as it prepares to face the realities of a world in conflict. This work of itself must give you satisfaction. More rewarding still will be the satisfaction you derive from seeing our young people responding to the challenge of the time with increasing ability to meet the challenge.

President John F. Kennedy

The will to resist aggression is strengthened by our understanding of the alternative to turning back a foe who would deny man's freedom. That understanding grows through education. It is a responsibility which public and private institutions must share. I commend your commitment to this great and urgent work of defending freedom and promoting peace. You have my every wish for success.

President Lyndon B. Johnson

It was altogether in keeping with the historic role of your organization in supporting programs which assure an adequate defense for the nation. I want you to know that your group's understanding, commitment to the national security and its active support are sources of great strength to me as Commander-in-Chief. I am deeply appreciative of the important work which you have done.

President Richard M. Nixon

The American Security Council under John Fisher has done a fine job. It is an important and constructive organization.

President Gerald R. Ford

Throughout the years, your organization has been a major bastion of support for the policy of peace through strength. You understand that in order to keep and maintain the peace at home and abroad we must continue to modernize and expand our national defenses. In this way, we will ensure that our children will have the opportunity to enjoy the sacred liberties that are the birthright of all Americans.

Honorable Sam Skinner
Chief of Staff
White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Sam:

Thank you very much for the courtesies extended today.

It was good to see you.

We are proud of the work that you are doing on behalf of all us.

As a follow-up to Jack O'Malley's campaign questions, we would appreciate the following:

1. Confirmation that you will be available on May 11, 1992 in Chicago.?
2. The possibility of Jack bringing a small group of fundraisers to the White House to meet President Bush and yourself in lieu of trying to do a meeting in Chicago with President. (This would be in addition to the May 11, 1992 with yourself, as above).

I would appreciate your input at your convenience.

Thanks again for all the help.

Kindest personal regards,

Howard G. Kaplan
