Technologies of Freedom:

Developing A Telecommunications Infrastructure For The Information Age

A Conference On How To Meet Public Needs In A Global Society

Hyatt Regency on Capitol Hill
Washington, DC

Thursday - Saturday
February 13-15, 1992

Presented by The Alliance for Public Technology

Technologies of Freedom:

Developing A Telecommunications Infrastructure For The Information Age

A Conference on Serving Public Needs in a Global Society

The Alliance For Public Technology (APT) is pleased to invite you to an important national conference, Technologies of Freedom: Developing A Telecommunications Infrastructure For The Information Age — a conference on serving public needs in a global society.

The Alliance's second national conference will focus on the infrastructure requirements necessary to achieve universal and affordable access to information age services and technologies. The expansive agenda will highlight policy and technology choices facing regulators and the industry, with comparisons from around the world. What are the infrastructure choices being made in Japan and Europe, and how do they compare to those being made in the United States?

The conference will address critical questions about the impact of infrastructure choices for consumers and public services. What are the implications for the delivery of education and health services to the home? How important will fiber deployment be and should the wire be brought to the curb or to the home? What implications will these choices have as to when services will be made available to the public?

The conference will feature panels of some of the nation's foremost experts on infrastructure, as well as international experts. A reception on the first evening of the conference will offer participants the opportunity to view many of the newest infrastructure technologies from around the world.

The Alliance's conference is a unique collaboration between the public sector and industry to explore important public technology issues. The program will include nonprofit, consumer, government and industry experts. For the first time, APT will host three joint sessions with the Interactive Services Association (formerly the Videotex Industry Association).

The conference is being held at the Hyatt Regency on Capitol Hill, 400 New Jersey Avenue, NW, Washington, DC. It will begin at 9 a.m. on February 13, 1992 and conclude at noon on Saturday, February 15, 1992.

Why do so few women reach the top of America's corporate ladder?

Is there discrimination, or a "glass ceiling," preventing women from reaching the top jobs?

Or is "glass ceiling" really a code word that will promote quotas for women in management?

These questions will be examined by scholars, policy analysts, and public opinion experts in the light of the U.S. Department of Labor's report on "The Glass Ceiling Initiative."

Dear Mr. Skinner:

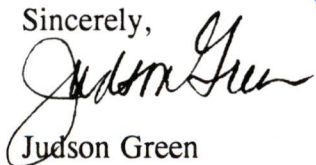

As you may know, for the last several years, we have alternated The Walt Disney World Company Stockholders' Meeting between California and Florida. I am pleased that the 1992 meeting will be held in Florida at Disney's Yacht and Beach Club Convention Center on Wednesday, February 18 from 10 a.m. to 12 noon.

As a respected community leader and a friend of Walt Disney World Co., it is my pleasure to extend an invitation to you to join us for the meeting. As in the past, the format of the meeting will provide a review of our past year as well as a glimpse into our future.

Please present the enclosed ticket at the Convention Center for the reserved seating area.

I hope you can join us. Please RSVP to Lena at 828-5545.

The American Legislative Exchange Council (ALEC) was founded in 1973 by a small group of Democratic and Republican state legislators who shared a common commitment to an agenda based on the Jeffersonian principles of free markets, limited representative government, individual liberty, and traditional family values. More than ever, these precepts remain the central tenet of the American Legislative Exchange Council.

Today, ALEC is the nation's largest bipartisan, voluntary membership organization of state legislators, with more than 2,400 members representing the 50 states, Puerto Rico, and Guam. More than one third of ALEC members hold leadership positions in their legislatures.

The Presidential, Cabinet and Congressional Briefing provides state lawmakers and corporate leaders with a unique opportunity to meet with high-level policymakers to exchange information about critical issues and ideas for effective governance. As in the past, President Bush and key Administration officials will address the ALEC membership, thus reinforcing the ALEC goal to maintain its position as the nation's most meaningful state-oriented public policy organization.

Perhaps most importantly, the Presidential, Cabinet and Congressional Briefing enables the American Legislative Exchange Council to actively promote a pro-growth, pro-freedom, pro-business agenda, thus enhancing America's competitive edge worldwide.
