Dear Mr. Cronin:

Thank you for your recent letter regarding the issues of taxes and gun control.

The Administration continues to discuss with Congress all proposals regarding the federal budget deficit. Both parties recognize the immense task at hand and are working hard to reach agreements to control spending as well as generate revenues.

Similarly, with regard to the firearms issue, President Bush announced last year a major proposal for effectively combatting violent crime which has yet to be fully addressed in Congress. The President has repeated his call for action on the proposed measure which would limit access to certain weapons by criminals and still maintain respect for the rights of firearms owners.

Again, I appreciate having your perspective on these issues and will share your views with others here who are involved in these policy areas.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

John H. Sununu
