MEMORANDUM

TO: Governor John Sununu
FROM: Congressman Newt Gingrich
DATE: April 9, 1991

As we discussed on the phone, it would be very helpful if you and the President could see Kasten, Wallop, Lott, Delay, Armey and Weber and let them explain their views on FICA taxes.

They are working with Phil Gramm and me on a growth package of tax cuts that we think you will like. It will help if the President could see them and listen to their arguments.

Phil Gramm will be briefing you and Dick on the details of our proposed growth package.

SUBJECT: PENNSYLVANIA SPECIAL ELECTION PROCESS / UPDATE

The Pennsylvania Republican State Committee has scheduled a leadership meeting for April 17 to discuss the GOP strategy for the U.S. Senate vacancy resulting from the death of Senator Heinz.

A full committee meeting will be held on May 3 and 4 at which time the committee will endorse a candidate. The Democrat State Committee will meet to endorse their candidate on a date still to be determined. This process, rather than a primary election, will provide the general election challengers.

While no potential candidates have made public statements, names surfacing at the State Committee include U.S. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, Congressman Tom Ridge, Pennsylvania Attorney General Ernie Preate, State Senator Bob Jubelire, and Drew Lewis.

Re: Presidential Video For Muslim Eid al-Fitra Celebrations

John,

Via the attached letter, Cherif Sedky, one of the AAC members, asked me to request of you a five-minute President Bush video for the 7 million members of the American Muslim community for Eid al-Fitra celebrations at the end of Ramadan.

I'm told that the President did an audio spot last year which the American Muslim Council (AMC) disseminated in mosques throughout the U.S. If the White House is willing, AMC will provide a draft of a text.

Unfortunately, time is short. Eid al-Fitra starts the evening the new moon is first seen (April 15 or 16). Celebrations tend to run for a period of 3 days.

By way of background, Eid al-Fitra marks the end of Ramadan the approximately month long-period annual period during which muslims take particular time out to reflect on their religion and their life.

An additional thought is that an Eid al-Fitra message could also be sent to Heads of State and distributed by USIA in the 40 countries which are members of the Islamic League.

Let me know your reaction.

Best regards,

Dave

Dear Dave:

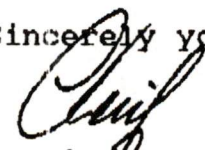

Abdurahman Alamboudi, who is the Executive Director of the American Muslim Council, asked me to help him in ascertaining whether President Bush would be willing to do about a five-minute video for dissemination to the almost 7 million members of the American Muslim community at the time of the upcoming Eid al-Fitra celebrations. I thought you might raise it with Governor Sununu.

My own reaction is that it would be a very good idea and would come at a very good time -- on the heels of the turmoil of the Gulf War. I understand that the President did an audio spot last year, and that the American Muslim Council was able to get the spot disseminated through virtually every mosque in the United States. I think a video piece would have a greater, more personal impact.

If the reaction is positive and the White House would like a draft of a text, please let me know and I will get one put together.

Kindest personal regards.

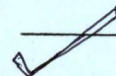

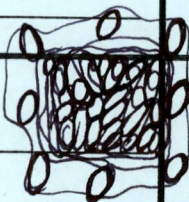

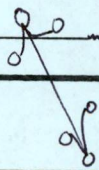

Sincerely yours,

Cherif Sedky

United States Department of State

The Chief of Protocol
Washington, D.C. 20520-2317

Easter 1991

MEMORANDUM

TO : Governor John H. Sununu
FROM : Joseph Verner Reed
SUBJECT : Blair House

Further to our conversation about Blair House, I felt that you would be interested in the manner in which the uses and expenses are accounted for.

The Rules and Regulations for the use of Blair House are set by the Department of State. They are precise. Every expense in the hospitality and maintenance departments are identified. All procedures are monitored, checked and rechecked. The diplomatic purposes for the Administration's foreign policy objectives are tagged; each lemon used at Blair House is accounted for.

Accounting is reviewed in the following manner as set up by the Department of State's management guidelines. Blair House accounting officers prepare and submit detailed vouchers for events (please see attached note for cases for personal reimbursements). These are reviewed by the Special Assistant in Protocol's Front Office (an official who has served with seven Chiefs of Protocol). The vouchers are then forwarded to the Executive Office in the Bureau for audit. The Bureau then files with the Chief Financial Officer of the Department of State who in turn certifies the accounts and forwards the accounts with all accompanying vouchers to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and Committees on Appropriations of both Houses. In 1990 Blair House provided hospitality to 11,474 persons. Overnight guests at Blair House are limited to members of the Delegation of official visitors; there are no exceptions. To date there has not been one question raised at any level of the multi-tiered review processes.

I feel that the record of achievement for President George Bush's foreign policy objectives through the use of Blair House has been satisfactory. It has been an honor to be responsible for this national treasure.

Personal Reimbursements for Meals at Blair House

Under official State Department, AID, ACDA and USIA policy (at this time) Blair House must be reimbursed for meals consumed by officers of these Agencies regardless of the foreign policy considerations involved.

These regulations do not affect other Federal officers. In view of the importance of encouraging contacts between State, AID, ACDA and USIA officials and foreign dignitaries, I have made it a practice to include many such officers in events at Blair House on a regular basis. As a matter of personal policy, I have opted to assume this expense myself rather than to request reimbursement from the guests.

I have followed the same practice on two occasions when members of my family participated. One was a luncheon for African Ambassadors on December 17, 1990 at which my brother, Adrian, was among the guests. The second was a dinner on February 28, 1991 at which the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Venezuela and his Delegation were the honored guests and at which my Mother and family members were present. This dinner was subsequent to an award presented to me at the Embassy of Venezuela in connection with my services at the United Nations.

Ambassador Reed honored by Venezuela

WASHINGTON — Florida's first lady, Permelia P. Reed, flew to Washington last week with sons Adrian and Samuel, and watched proudly as their brother, Ambassador Joseph V. Reed, was awarded the Order of Francisco de Miranda by the Republic of Venezuela at its embassy. Later, the Reeds attended a large dinner at Blair House in honor of Venezuela's foreign minister and his delegation.

GARNETT
STACKELBERG

Marilyn Quayle, wife of the vice president, came to the award ceremony for Ambassador Reed, who is now the chief of protocol. He received other awards from many of the countries he worked with when he was under secretary general of the United Nations. Reed has been interested in Latin America for years, as was his friend Nelson Rockefeller. He became ambassador to Moscow, becoming chief of protocol after George Bush took office.

At the reception in the embassy's two big salons, the walls were lined with tall, modern, wooden sculptures done by Maria Eugenia Bigott, the wife of Venezuelan Ambassador Simon Albert Consalvi. Bigott has a gallery in Washington.

John Sununu, the president's chief of staff, was there with wife Nancy, conversing with such dignitaries as CIA director William Webster and Bruce and Lueza Gelb. Bruce Gelb is head of the United States Information Agency.

Among others were Happy Rockefeller, looking smart and thinner in a black wool suit. She arrived with her 25-year-old son, Nelson Jr., who works at the Office of Management and Budget at the White House. They were surrounded by old friends, including Letitia Baldrige, author of the new book Public Affairs Private Relations. I met Tish years ago at our embassy in Rome when she served as social secretary to Ambassador Clare Booth Luce. Later, she became social secretary to Jackie Kennedy at the White House.

Many from the diplomatic corps came to the award ceremony, including the dean of the diplomatic corps, Mauritanian Ambassador Ould Daddah, and his wife Turkia, and the former dean, Count Wilhelm Wachtmeister, and his beautiful artist-wife, Countess Ulla. They now reside in Washington.

I issue a call to American business for a new American standard of quality. I urge every business to embrace the quality expectation levels of the Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award. There is no better way to work toward that superior but achievable standard than for each company, at least of minimal size, to prepare over a period of years to be worthy to compete for the Baldrige Award. Such competitiveness, preparedness and worthiness would make all our companies and their customers winners whether an award was earned or not.

The very actions of responding to the call--of preparing to compete to the Baldrige standard will naturally stimulate our economy. The reason: improved quality obliges new designs, new processes and new tools. These are the dynamic economic multipliers. Improved quality lowers costs right from the start and raises product and service values which soundly lifts demand for the more affordable and desirable goods and services. A new private sector commitment to quality is a win-win strategy for American business and America (and incidentally for Republican leadership).

Dear Clayton:

I appreciated the opportunity to talk with you yesterday. I immediately called our people in Louisiana. The report was not good in relation to Roemer. The pro-life forces are dead set against him and are determined to back Clyde Hollaway.

Last night I talked to a Louisiana State legislator who said that he had supported Roemer in two elections and had been a friend of his since high school days when they use to double date together. This man also says that Roemer does not keep his word and that he is now turning against him.

Perhaps the most damaging is the poll taken in Roemer's hometown which shows him with only 19 percent share of the vote. I am sure you are aware that when a sitting politician with statewide name recognition is unable to gain more than 19 percent of his own hometown he has a serious problem.

I am fully aware of the regional implications of Roemer's switch to our Party. I conveyed that feeling to the folks on the ground in Louisiana on two occasions.

With all good wishes, I am

Edwards holds lead in governor's race

By LANNY KELLER
Editorial Page Editor

Despite Gov. Buddy Roemer's turning of the Republican market, Edwin Edwards continues to lead in governor's race in Shreveport-Bossier, according to today's Journalpoll.

The Journalpoll survey showed Edwards with 34 percent and Roemer with 19 percent. This does not reflect any major turnaround from a January survey which showed Edwards in the lead.

The absence of major Republican candidates, except for former Klan Imperial Wizard and current state rep. David Duke, suggests that Roemer has either failed to capitalize on his conversion to the GOP or lost some support from Democratic voters.

Conventional wisdom holds that Roemer should have picked up some votes because, in the last Journalpoll survey, Republican candidates Dave Treen and Richard Baker between them generated a percentage points. Treen, a former governor, and Baker, a congressman from Baton Rouge, will not run against Roemer because he is now a Republican.

The rest of the field trailed, even Duke, who polled a respectable vote in the 1990 race for U.S. Senate.

Nevertheless, the two frontrunners combined pulled less than half the vote, and 35 percent in Shreveport-Bossier remained undecided. It is a sign of either boredom in the early stages of a lackluster election, or distaste for all the leading alternatives.

The percentages:

✓ Edwards, governor from 1972-80 and 1984-88, drew 24 percent. He had 34 percent of black voters and 21 percent of white voters contacted by Journalpoll. He also led among women and men.

✓ Roemer, a hometown boy, did relatively poorly with his 19 percent.

He gathered only 19 percent of white voters, but his 16 percent of black voters is better than Republicans usually get in pre-election surveys. The conversion of Roemer's aide, Laurence Gidry, who is black, may well have helped to hold Roemer's support together in the black community. A high 43 percent of black voters said they are undecided.

Which of the following would you prefer for governor: Aaron Broussard, David Duke, Edwin Edwards, Sam Jones, Louis Lambert or Buddy Roemer?

	Total Vote	Black (83)	White (321)	Men (178)	Women (238)
Edwards	24%	34%	21%	27%	22%
Roemer	19%	16%	19%	20%	18%
Duke	7%	—	9%	8%	8%
Broussard	6%	2%	7%	4%	7%
Lambert	5%	4%	5%	—	8%
Jones	3%	—	3%	2%	3%
Undecided	36%	43%	35%	38%	36%

Chart prepared by Martha Mallock. Respondents to Journalpoll are self-identified registered voters selected at random from the Shreveport-Bossier City telephone book.

✓ Duke, with 7 percent, trailed badly. The right-wing candidate generally runs better than he polls, and disaffection with the leading contenders may give him an opening in the October primary.

✓ Aaron Broussard, mayor of Kenner and a Democrat, polled 6 percent. Kenner is a suburb of New Orleans.

✓ Louis Lambert, a Public Service Commission member from Gonzales, polled 5 percent — a fairly low number despite two statewide buys of television advertising. A Democrat, Lambert lost the 1979 race to Treen.

✓ Sam Jones, mayor of Franklin in south Louisiana, polled 3 percent.

The bottom tier of candidates needs to move in the polls to be considered a viable alternative to the conventional wisdom, which predicts an Edwards-Roemer runoff. So far, there is little to suggest a breakthrough by the Democrats who are seeking to be an alternative to Edwards.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Governor Sununu
FROM: Secretary Madigan
RE: U. S. Guarantee Credit to Soviets

Gorbachev has asked the President for more U. S. guarantee credit for the purpose of buying more U. S. grain.

The 1990 Farm Bill says all of these credit guarantees must pass a risk analysis. Undersecretary Crowder, responding to an NSC staff request, has indicated that this is troublesome.

Prime Minister Ivan Silayev of the Russian Federation has called on me this afternoon and told me that Yeltsin and Gorbachev are mutually supportive of this request and have agreed on the manner in which the grain will be distributed.

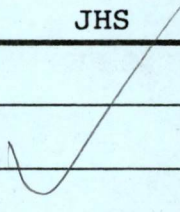

Senator Dole is urging me to support this. Chairman de la Garza is supportive of the Soviet request. The Soviet request of $1.5 billion exceeds the amount that we have available under the law. A lesser amount might be justified on the basis of the cooperation between the centralized government and the Republics, the fact that the Soviets have always paid off past credit purchases, and that this request is being backed by their Export Bank.

Granting the credit could still be criticized as not meeting the risk analysis. Undersecretary Crowder tells me that the NSC staff will recommend against it. It would be helpful to me to know if the President wants to do this.

MEMORANDUM FOR GOVERNOR SUNUNU

FROM SENATOR JACK DANFORTH

Here are the recent DOD decisions that have gone against McDonnell Douglas.

1. Loss of ATF contract.
2. Cancellation of A-12.
3. Loss of Light Helicopter contract.

Here are some ways that the Administration could be of immediate help to McDonnell Douglas.

1. $60 million in FY 92 for the remanufacture of AV-8Bs would allow McDonnell Douglas to complete an agreement for sales to Italy and Spain.

2. DOD proceeds from the sale of F-15Cs and Ds to Saudi Arabia could be used to purchase new F-15Es for the U. S. Air Force. This was understood to be the intention of DOD last year, however, DOD has indicated that it would rather buy spare parts. The issue is whether the F-15 production line can be kept open.

3. DOD could announce its already made decision to increase purchases of the F/A-18.

4. Administration approval to sell Apache Helicopters to the United Arab Emirates and Bahrain is stuck in the State Department. The Administration could expedite approval of these sales.

5. The White House could indicate to DOD its strong support for the full 12 units of the T-45 trainer which are now in the DOD authorization bill. The concern is that DOD might pare this number down during the legislative process.

CHAMBERS OF
CHIEF JUSTICE BURGER
RETIRED

April 17, 1991

Dear Mr. President,

During 1991 the Bicentennial Commission will focus all of our public and educational programs on "The Bill of Rights and Beyond" - to include all Amendments.

Our policy is to see to it that there is at least one public dramatization of each year's main activity and this year it will be the HMS "ROSE" Bill of Rights tour by a replica of the original British 18th century frigate of that name. It is the largest operational wooden sailing vessel in the world.

The tour is sponsored by the HMS ROSE Foundation with our official recognition and support. It will stop in 25 ports from Bridgeport Connecticut to Florida. At every port the advance work will focus on schools and students inviting visits by class groups. An original copy of the Rhode Island Bill of Rights and other 18th century historic documents and artifacts will be on board for viewing by students and other visitors.

It would be of enormous benefit to demonstrate America's concern with human rights, in this 43rd anniversary of the Human Rights Declaration, for you to "launch" the Bill of Rights Tour.

We see this as an opportunity to focus national - and even worldwide attention - on the plight of oppressed people around the globe who are being denied the protection our Bill of Rights guarantees to every person in America. Historians regard the HMS ROSE, although a British frigate, as an important factor in the founding of the United States Navy.

The HMS ROSE will be at the D.C. Police Pier, Washington, from Sunday, April 21st to Wednesday, April 24th and at Alexandria T-Pier, Founders Park Friday, April 26th to Saturday, May 4th. Every effort is being made to arouse the interest of teachers and students to visit the ROSE on its tour. The vessel will have all our educational materials on the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. Hundreds of thousands of students visited our Magna Carta "Road to Liberty" Tour in 1987.

Frankly I see this as an unusual opportunity for you to articulate both your commitment to education and your immediate concerns for the people being oppressed by Saddam Hussein and others.

The day and hour of a brief appearance by you we leave entirely to you.

Sincerely,

Barack I. Burger

By Hand,
President George H.W. Bush

H.M.S. ROSE 1757

The original H.M.S. ROSE was built in Hull, Yorkshire, England in 1756/57. Classed as a 24 gun frigate, she saw her first action in the Seven Years War, fighting in the English Channel and making frequent attacks on the French Channel ports. In 1761, she sailed to the West Indies and took part in capture of Havana and Martinique.

After a refit in England the ROSE arrived in Boston in 1768 under the command of Captain Sir Benjamin Caldwell. While on patrol off Boston in April of 1769, her first officer, Lt. Panton, was killed while trying to impress or draft sailors from a brig called the "Pitt Packett." An obscure young lawyer, John Adams, was appointed Public Defender of the four accused seamen of the "Pitt Packett" who were charged with piracy on the high seas. They were found not guilty by reason of self defense and thus the ROSE unwittingly helped to launch John Adams' career.

ROSE was sent to Newport, Rhode Island late in 1774 under the command of Captain James Wallace. Newport had become one of the richest cities in America by perfecting the art of smuggling to the point where it had become the city's principal industry, and Rhode Islanders had already destroyed a number of Royal Navy vessels that had been sent to put an end to smuggling. The ROSE, being considerably larger than the vessels sent previously, was able to reduce the smuggling to zero and the resulting unemployment caused Newport to lose four-fifths of her population by mid-1775. Therefore, the Rhode Island General Assembly sent a bill to the Continental Congress to establish a national Navy to deal with the ROSE. The bill, introduced by Rhode Islander Steven Hopkins, passed on October 13, 1775, thus making ROSE directly responsible for the founding of the American Navy.

In 1776 the ROSE sailed to New York as part of an attacking fleet of 300 vessels. She played a major part in the campaign making forays up the Hudson and East Rivers and patrolling the western end of Long Island Sound.

The Rose's career ended in 1779 off Savannah, Georgia. To block the approach of a French invasion fleet under Comte D'Estaing she was ordered sunk across the mouth of the harbor. As a result, the fleet was unable to get close enough to bombard the city, saving Savannah from destruction.

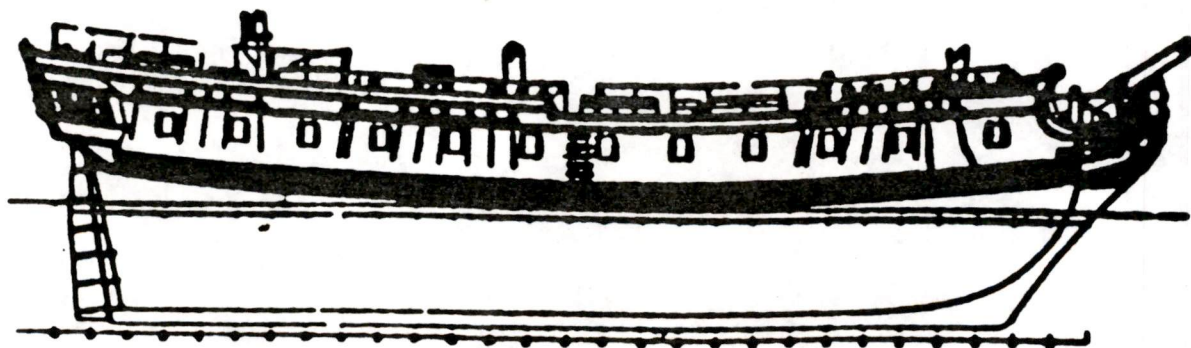

ROSE OF CONNECTICUT 1970

The new ROSE, built in 1970 from essentially the same plans as her predecessor, was launched from the renowned Smith and Rhuland Shipyard, Lunenburg, Nova Scotia. Originally berthed in Newport, Rhode Island, she fell into serious disrepair by the late seventies.

In 1984, Kaye Williams purchased the ROSE and towed her to Captain's Cove Seaport on historic Black Rock Harbor, Bridgeport, Ct. Soon after, the non-profit H.M.S. Rose Foundation was established to oversee her reconstruction and operation, and by the summer of 1985 a major restoration project was underway. A crew of veteran shipwrights aided by hundreds of volunteers rebuilt the vessel, replacing all of the frames and planks from the waterline up. A new stem, mizzen mast and bowsprit were installed and several thousand feet of rigging were either replaced or renewed. To help fund the considerable cost of this project the State of Connecticut, the City of Bridgeport, area corporations and individuals pitched in with financial support. Work completed by July 4, 1986 enabled the ROSE to attend the Op-Sail/Statue of Liberty celebration in New York Harbor. In the spring of 1987 the ROSE was hauled in Massachusetts where extensive work on her bottom was completed and upon her return to Bridgeport two new diesel engines were installed.

With her restoration virtually complete ROSE is now the largest operational wooden sailing vessel in the world. When in port at Captain's Cove she is available for school tours and for viewing by the general public. Experienced crew give visitors a guided tour of the ROSE, lectures and exhibits illustrate the rich maritime history of the colonial Connecticut.

ROSE is now poised on the threshold of a new career. In 1990 she will become US Coast Guard certified as the largest Sailing School Vessel in America. This new status will enable her to embark on educational sailing trips for trainees on day or overnight trips all along the new England coast.

Mr. Sig Rogich
Assistant to the President for Public Events
White House
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Sig:

It was nice having the opportunity to talk with you this past Tuesday. I truly appreciate your efforts in trying to arrange for the President to visit the "H.M.S." ROSE on the 21st of April during our arrival and ceremonial program. The ROSE will be docked at the Police Pier in Washington, D.C. until April 24th. She will depart that dock on the 24th and proceed to Alexandria, Virginia at "T" Pier at Founders Park. We will be open to the public from the 26th of April through May 5th.

As you know, Sig, this is an educational vessel carrying one of the 11 known existing Bill of Rights as well as other of America's precious documents, and has been officially recognized by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger (retired), chairman of the Bicentennial on the U.S. Constitution. President George Bush, being our "Educational President" as well as an avid boater, I am sure would appreciate the way we have presented these documents aboard The ROSE, World's tallest operational wooden ship.

If you could arrange, Sig, to have the President drop by sometime during the above schedule, we would plan an appropriate ceremony. Please keep me advised as to the probability of this happening.

Sincerely,

Frederick K. Biebel

Dear Chairman Gonzalez:

As the Committee on Banking, Finance and Urban Affairs moves forward with legislation addressing banking reform, let me reiterate my strong support for the Administration's proposal to modernize the nation's financial system. I believe the time has clearly come to address the fundamental problems of your banking system. We must have a comprehensive legislative solution to fuel economic growth through stronger, more competitive, banks--ones that are better able to lend to customers in good times and bad. This is exactly why the Administration has proposed such broad-based reforms.

Unfortunately, some members of Congress appear to be considering a much more narrow approach. A bill that would merely recapitalize the Bank Insurance Fund and make minor changes to the law is short-sighted. There is simply no fund large enough to insure over $2 trillion in deposits if the root causes of this problem are not addressed. Without comprehensive reform the taxpayers are exposed to another deposit insurance bailout. Without comprehensive reform the economy is exposed to future credit crunches.

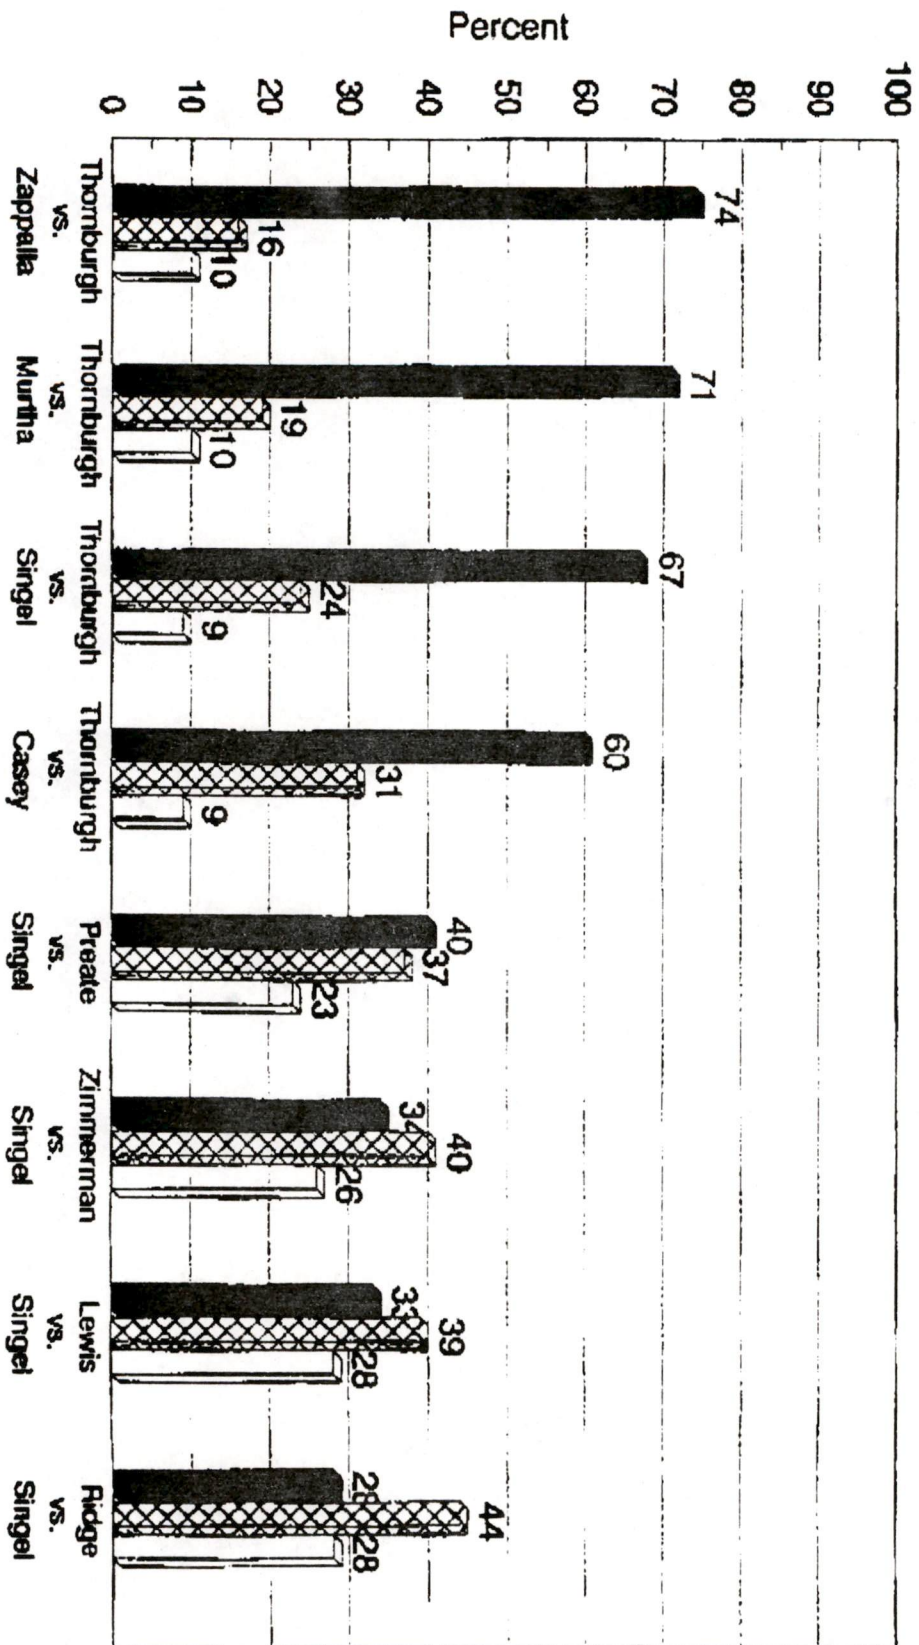

We remain committed to the principal that comprehensive reform is needed to solve a comprehensive problem. "Band aid" solutions will not work. We must fix the fundamental problems in the banking industry, not just fund them. If Congress fails to adopt a broad-based solution along the lines I have suggested, we may have to face another recapitalization of the insurance fund, this time with taxpayer funds. No one can seriously desire this result.

We have taken the first step in this process by laying a comprehensive proposal before the Congress. Now it is time for Congress to draft the broad banking reform legislation that this country clearly needs. We pledge to work with you to make this legislation a reality.

Sincerely,

GB

Richard Thornburgh

U.S. Attorney General and former Governor Richard Thornburgh is a giant in public awareness and esteem compared to the other eight Republicans and Democrats tested as U.S. Senate candidates to fill the seat of U.S. Senator John Heinz. He is universally known (98 percent awareness), well-regarded (80 percent favorable rating), and positively remembered as governor (79 percent approval). Perhaps the most impressive result on Thornburgh is the high percentage of voters who describe their favorable opinion of him with some intensity - 41 percent say their impression of him is "very favorable."

Thornburgh definitely does NOT carry a very high negative either from his days as governor or from his actions as Attorney General. Only 13 percent recall his governorship in a negative fashion (just 4 percent of the Republicans and 12 percent of the ticket-splitters.) His low unfavorable rating of 13 percent, in the context of how voters feel about him now, indicates that he has done nothing as Attorney General to negatively change people's opinions of him.

The Administration's position on the civil rights issue also is NOT a serious hindrance to Thornburgh's candidacy. The President's veto of the civil rights bill in 1990 and his general reservations about a "quota bill" are supported by a majority of Pennsylvania voters, albeit not as large as Thornburgh's majorities in the trial heats for the U.S. Senate. By 50 percent to 31 percent, the Pennsylvania voters agree with the President's veto of last year's civil rights bill. Moreover, the Pennsylvania voters lean in the direction of thinking that current civil rights laws have gone too far. Forty percent believe they have gone too far, 28 percent think they are satisfactory as is, and only 26 percent feel they need to be strengthened. The direction of these findings are even more pronounced for the voters supporting Thornburgh in the various trial heats in the survey.

None of the Democrats tested against Thornburgh offered him a very stiff test, including Governor Bob Casey. Consequently, Thornburgh's trial heat leads are extremely large. While they certainly can't be projected as November outcomes, they do mean that he has about as large a safety margin against the uncertainties of political campaigns as a candidate can possibly have.

Thornburgh's dominance of this field is so great that he almost wins when he runs against all four Democrats at once. That is, 49 percent of the voters support Thornburgh in all four of the trial heats in which Thornburgh is the Republican candidate; only 8 percent vote for all four Democrats, and 42 percent changed their vote depending on the candidate pairing. This is a very high "base vote" for Thornburgh. There is nothing unusual about it as it follows the expected Republican patterns by subgroups but at high levels with all groups with the expected exceptions of Democrats, in general, and blacks, in particular.

The Democrats

The only person tested with comparable awareness to Thornburgh, other than U.S. Senator Arlen Specter, is Governor Casey. However, he carries a very large negative. Thirty-five percent report an unfavorable general impression of him, and an even larger 47 percent disapprove of his job performance as governor. He has the highest vote against Thornburgh among the four tested Democrats (31 percent) based primarily on his greater name awareness. His high negative places a low ceiling on his vote, and, therefore, he is not a hard test of Thornburgh's ballot strength.

Lt. Governor Mark Singel falls well below Thornburgh in name awareness (50 percent). Congressman Jack Murtha (28 percent awareness) and Supreme Court Justice Steve Zappalla (15 percent awareness) have only minimal levels of statewide name awareness. While the best known of the three Democrats, Singel's 50 percent name identification overstates his real reach with the voters. Only 31 percent know enough about him to have formed a general impression of him (25 percent favorable/6 percent unfavorable.) Consequently, none of these three Democrats offer a tough test for Thornburgh. They would face the problems of all poorly known challengers - fund raising, media exposure, and image development - with a great deal of ground to cover by November.

The Alternative Republicans

State Attorney General Ernie Preate is the strongest Republican after Thornburgh among himself, Roy Zimmerman, Drew Lewis, and Tom Ridge. However, none of the four alternative Republicans have significantly high name awareness and ratings. The trial heats with them against Mark Singel are essentially ties with an average 26 percent undecided. (Ridge is the weakest of the Republicans, trailing Singel by 44 percent to 28 percent.) Any of the possible races among the Republicans and Democrats tested in the survey, aside from Thornburgh, would be wide open affairs.

Subgroup Results

Thornburgh's name identification advantage and his popularity give him wide leads over the tested opponents with virtually all the major demographic groups in the state including those that normally vote Democratic.

Thornburgh has large leads even in Philadelphia, the Southwest, and in union households.

The only exceptions to having large leads are with black voters, generally, and in Philadelphia against Governor Casey, in particular. Even these exceptions involve results that are better than expected for a Republican.

Nearly 20 percent support Thornburgh over Mark Singel while not voting for any of the other four Republicans tested against Singel. These voters are found in virtually all major subgroups but tend to be in greater numbers in the three most Democratic areas of the state: Philadelphia (27 percent), Allegheny County (24 percent), and the Southwest (28 percent). Interestingly, Thornburgh's strength with these voters may be especially based on their memories of his days in Pennsylvania than on his current federal position. A majority of them have no idea what his current position is compared to less than 40 percent of the more Republican voters in his coalition not knowing he holds a federal office.

Political Background

Although the Democrats have a 51 percent to 44 percent lead in party registration in the state (November, 1990), the underlying political orientation of the state is more favorable to a Republican candidate than the registration numbers suggest and more favorable than it has been in a long time. Republican identifiers are as numerous, if not greater, than Democratic identifiers (47 percent Republican to 46 percent Democrat). The Republican strength is with the younger voters, as it is nationally. A plurality of the voters under 35 are Republicans; the two parties are essentially tied with the middle age groups; and the Democrats lead with the senior citizens. (Senior citizens have grown to an estimated 20-23 percent of the registered voters in Pennsylvania.)

In the "generic" trial heat for the U.S. Senate, the Republican candidate is ahead by 42 percent to 34 percent which would have been a surprising result for Pennsylvania in past years.

President Bush's job performance rating in the state is comparable to his current national rating. In Pennsylvania, 78 percent approve of his job performance, and only 18 percent disapprove. The boost from the Persian Gulf War is having impressive durability.

These survey results are based on 800 interviews with registered voters from a representative sample of the state of Pennsylvania conducted from April 25-28, 1991.
