The President
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, NW
Washington, DC 20500

Dear Mr. President:

I write to express my deep concern over the course of the current education debate in the face of the deepening crisis in our education system. The National Education Goals Panel Report has sounded the alarm over the future of American students.

I would like to share with you some of my observations regarding the state of our schools. Over the past twenty years I have traveled across the country to speak in some of our nation's most troubled, as well as most prosperous schools and universities. Just this past month I have visited schools in Connecticut, Arkansas, Virginia, Maryland, and California. I have seen the destruction in the schools of East St. Louis, and I have addressed our most fortunate students at such institutions as Harvard and Yale. I have met with students, teachers, parents and administrators. I have listened to their concerns and fears and seen their glaring needs.

Throughout the course of my work I have been struck by one overwhelming development -- the lack of equal opportunity in our school system is undermining the most basic promise of our democracy -- equal protection under the law. A growing majority of students are being robbed of the opportunity to learn by virtue of poverty and lack of educational resources.

In 1954 when Brown v. Board of Education was filed, equal educational opportunity was denied to some American students on the basis of race. Now a majority of students are deprived of their educational rights on the basis of class. It has always been a two-track system, but now the tracks of rich and poor are growing farther apart and steering more and more children away from the American dream.

I am disturbed by the argument that money is not the answer. Indeed, money is not the only answer -- there is no one-dimensional solution to the crisis in our schools. Parents, for example, must take responsibility for their children's education. They must be encouraged to take their children to school, meet their children's teachers and monitor their progress. Students also have a responsibility to themselves to maintain the will to learn. For truly, what does it matter if you have a new book or an old book, if you open neither? What does it matter if the doors of opportunity are wide open, if you are too drunk, drugged or violent to stumble through? We must rid our schools of drugs and violence, and maintain an atmosphere of learning and encouragement.

Yet the educational crisis demands new resources. If you take six children, put three in a room that is cold and dark with no food, and put three in a room that is warm and light with a balanced diet, the three in the room with light and warmth will come out stronger and taller. Not because they are smarter, but because they were put up on a pedestal while the others were put in a hole. What many of our children need is not more national tests, but a national commitment to fix the lights, turn on the heat, and provide the food.

Today we see a set of law suits for equal funding sweeping the country. Thirteen states have filed them already, while several more are considering it. These suits are the biggest thrust for equal opportunity since 1954, demanding as they do equal educational access for all children: black, white and brown; rural, urban and suburban; rich and poor alike.

For too long, people have dismissed inequality in education as a question of race. In New Haven, Connecticut, for example, they only spend $4,600 per student, while in the richest districts such as Greenwich, they spend up to $9,600 per pupil. People tend to accept and expect such a state of affairs for the children of the inner city. But in Windham, a rural, predominantly white town in eastern Connecticut, they also only spend $4,600 on the students. They find that the test scores for the children in New Haven and Windham are comparable. In other words, the correlation is between resources and results, not race and results. Truly, education is not a matter of black and white, but rather a matter of wrong and right.

Our entire nation suffers from these inequalities, for they are crippling an entire generation of students. Twenty percent of all U.S. students drop out of high school each year, 600,000-700,000 of our youth. In some inner cities, the rate is as high as 50%.

Twenty-seven million Americans lack basic literacy skills, while 45-50 million are functionally illiterate Americans.

Thirty percent of American jobs will require a college education by the year 2000, yet only 25 percent of the American labor force graduates from college.

Our failure to provide education to these students is a real threat to our national security, for it is impairing our ability to compete in a global economy.

If we look at the amount we spend on grades K-12, in Sweden they spend 7.0 percent of GNP; in Japan: 4.8 percent; in West Germany; 4.6 percent; in the U.S. only 4.1 percent.

In the U.K., Germany and France, 17-24% percent of high-school graduates are prepared to do college-level work: in the U.S., only 5 percent.

Instead of investing in education and the future, we are allowing our children to fall by the wayside. One hundred and thirty-five thousand (135,000) children bring a gun to school each day. There are 1,629 children in adult jails daily.

Mr. President, we must stop wasting our children and institute a bottom up approach. We cannot turn the crisis around without new investment and new commitment. We must water the roots, not just sprinkle the leaves, and open up the doors of educational opportunity to all. All schools must be choice schools, for all of our children must be chosen.

I have spent more time in America's schools than perhaps any other national leader. I would like the opportunity to discuss with you what I see. I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Rev. Jesse L. Jackson

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

NOTES FROM "BIG THREE" PHONE CALL -- October 8, 1991

--- Expressed appreciation at President's efforts to restore confidence in the economy.

--- Since Governor Sununu meeting with Owen Bieber, Mr. Ruther been up to the Hill with the Big Three and Bieber has sent a letter to the Senate. (awaiting copy of letter)

--- Sen. Johnston "needs enough CAFE to pull Senators into the ANWR tent."

--- Governor Sununu stressed the importance of focusing the debate on the issue of jobs for American workers.

--- Big Three described advertising effort by Coalition for Vehicle Choice to bring public attention to the safety and jobs issues.

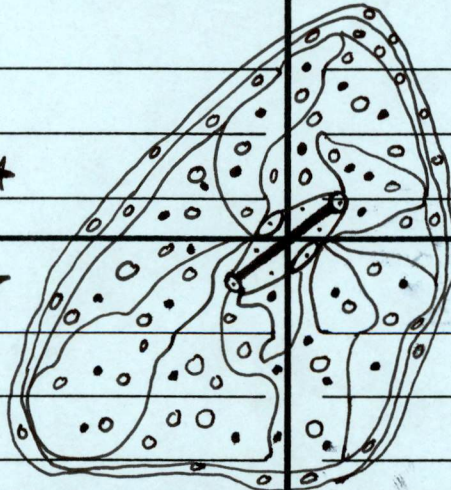

--- Big Three worried about Dept. of Energy and EPA; worried about any signal that the Administration is willing to give in CAFE. Looking for signal from White House that White House will not cave on CAFE.

--- Governor Sununu suggested market incentives for pulling removing old vehicles; as opposed to "scrappage" language being written into the law.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

Date: October 7, 1991

TO: Governor Sununu
FROM: KATHY SUPER K. Super
Deputy Assistant to the President
for Appointments and Scheduling

We previously declined this request for the President to attend a dinner in N.Y. hosted by the Asia Society.

General Scowcroft very much wants the President to address this dinner before his trip to Asia on November 26.

The President will be in N.Y. on November 12 for the Holt fundraising lunch. The Asia Society could do their dinner the evening of the 12th if the President agreed to attend.

What do you think?

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

21 SEP 17 10:50

September 16, 1991

SCHEDULE PROPOSAL

TO: KATHERINE SUPER, Deputy Assistant to the President for Appointments and Scheduling

FROM: BRENT SCOWCROFT BS

REQUEST: Speech at Asia Society Annual Dinner

PURPOSE: To outline major, regional themes of Asian initiatives prior to the President's trip to Asia. Subsequent remarks in each country will focus on country specific and sub-regional themes.

BACKGROUND: The President's trip to Asia tentatively includes stops in Japan, Korea, Australia and a country in South East Asia. The trip will be the first by the President to Asia other than for Emperor Hirohito's funeral and will be important from a foreign policy standpoint. The Asia Society Annual Dinner is the appropriate forum for the President to advance the major themes of this trip.

PREVIOUS PARTICIPATION: The President has been invited to speak at the dinner in the past two years but has not attended.

DATE AND TIME: Mid-November, shortly prior to the President's trip; Evening
DURATION: 3 hours

LOCATION: New York City

PARTICIPANTS: The President will be guest of honor. The Asia Society will invite about 1500 guests.

OUTLINE OF EVENTS: Dinner, followed by the President's speech.

REMARKS REQUIRED: To be provided by NSC.

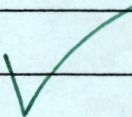

MEDIA COVERAGE: To be determined in consultation with the Asia Society.

RECOMMENDED BY: NSC

OPPOSED BY: None

and it's been very helpful to Senator Wofford. But there certainly was no deal with Senator Johnston." Scott said Wofford has not issued a public statement to the press on the topic of coastal plain drilling, but said he believed Wofford's final position will support "limited, careful exploration of oil and gas drilling in the coastal plain." Scott denied Wofford's position represents a switch from an earlier position. "I wouldn't put it that way," said Scott. "I think what it represents is a conclusion that he has reached after being educated on all sides of this problem." Steve Richetti, Executive Director of the Democratic Senate Campaign Committee, told the Bulletin the DSCC's decision to commit $500,000 to Wofford's campaign was reached in a confidential meeting of the committee in early September. "I can't comment one way or another about what occurred in the meeting," said Richetti, "but there was nothing to distinguish Johnston's support from the support of ten or twelve others."

- o The vote to consider the confirmation of White House economist Larry Lindsey to a seat on the Fed is being delayed because Majority Leader Mitchell expects lengthy floor debate over the nomination and there are more important issue to address first, report Democratic sources in the Senate. According to an aide to the Majority Leader: "There have been indications that there will have to be a lengthy time on the floor for debate and we have other matters that need to be addressed." President Bush has included criticism of the Senate inaction on the Lindsey nomination in recent remarks and White House officials have been citing the Lindsey nomination as one example of Congress's inability to seriously address economic growth issues. According to one in the White House: "There is so much pressure on the Federal Reserve Board now to reassess where the money supply should be, where interests rates should be, where capital standards for banks should be, yet they are deprived of a full board to investigate and consider those positions. Holding it up is just silly."
- o EPA Administrator Reilly's comment last week that President Bush deserves a grade of at least a "C" on environmental issues has some in the Administration in an uproar. While in Vail, Colorado last week, Reilly responded to a report released by the National Parks and Conservation Association which gave President Bush a "D" grade on environmental issues by saying "D is not a plausible grade." Reilly went on to say that Bush deserves at least a "C", and even a "B" if he were doing the grading. Reilly's lukewarm support for the President's environmental record drew an angry response this morning from an Administration official: "This is preposterous. A primary member of the Administration and he gives his President an average grade -- a 'C.' If our own side isn't supporting us, who is?"
- o Democratic presidential candidate Tom Harkin criticized the Administration this morning for being out of touch with women. Speaking on "Good Morning America," Harkin said the debate should "go beyond Clarence Thomas. What we have here is an Administration that doesn't understand the depth of feeling among women in this country -- the anxiety that they have that the heavy hand of the government is about to descend upon them. Women in this country are about to lose their right of privacy and their freedom of choice. And, understandably, they were very concerned about this appointment."
- o Federal Communications Commission Chairman Alfred Sikes will advise Congress not to pass legislation restricting the entry of the Baby Bells into the information services market. Sikes told the Bulletin during an interview yesterday: "The American Newspaper Publishers Association in particular has called for legislation that would keep the Bell Operating Companies out of any significant information services business. Partly, the hearing will be about that issue. I will tell the committee that kind of legislation would be a mistake. And I will talk more specifically about what we are doing at the FCC to

MEMORANDUM FOR GOVERNOR SUNUNU

FROM

KATHY SUPER K. Super
DEPUTY ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT
FOR APPOINTMENTS AND SCHEDULING

SUBJECT

PENDING PRESIDENTIAL SCHEDULING ITEMS

I. NATIONAL CATHOLIC EDUCATION ASSOCIATION

The National Catholic Education Association (NCEA) leadership has requested, through Leigh Ann Metzger, a meeting with you and the President for 10-12 members on November 5, 1991 in the Roosevelt Room. The President had to decline the dinner on November 6, 1991 due to his departure for the NATO Summit.

In considering this, it is important to remember that November 5 is the only full day that the President will spend in the White House within a sixteen day period. Already we have five events scheduled for that day.

Is this something we should strongly consider doing the day before he departs for Rome? If so, how much time should the President spend with this group? And, will you meet with them?

II. MEETING WITH SMALL BUSINESS LEADERS

I understand that the President has expressed a desire to meet with small business leaders as part of the series of meetings with outside groups to discuss the economy. I am told that this came up at a recent EPC meeting. How soon do you think the President wants to do this, and how much time should we allot?

III. BILL OF RIGHTS EVENT

Senator Warner has submitted a request for the President to address a luncheon sponsored by the National Trust for Historic Preservation and the Foundation for James Madison's Montpelier in celebration of the 200th Anniversary of the Bill of Rights. Boyden Gray highly recommends this event if the President is to do a commemorative ceremony for the Bill of Rights. They have requested Sunday, December 15, 1991 but they will change the day of the lunch to December 16 if the President will attend.

Ms. Katherine Super
Deputy Assistant to the President
for Appointments and Scheduling
The White House
Washington, D.C. 20005

Dear Ms. Super:

I write to bring to your attention a request from the National Trust for Historic Preservation and the Foundation for James Madison's Montpelier. They would like President Bush to address a distinguished group at a luncheon commemorating the 200th anniversary of the Bill of Rights.

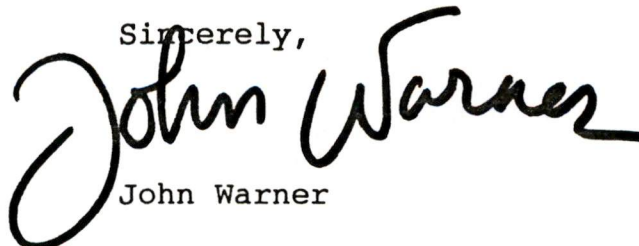

The event will be attended by members of the Supreme Court, members of Congress, Bicentennial officials, the media, and descendants of James Madison on December 15, 1991 at Montpelier in Virginia. I am sure the President would be warmly received.

A goal of the National Trust is to develop a center for scholarly and constitutional studies at Montpelier. This topic will be addressed, as will the Bill of Rights and James Madison's contribution to our heritage.

I appreciate your kind consideration of this request and thank you in advance for keeping me informed.

With warm regards, I am

Sincerely,

John Warner

RAY KERRISON

AT a tax-revolt rally on the banks of the Hudson River in Kingston Saturday, Allan Alberts, a department-store manager, stepped up to the microphone and recited the "Psalms of New York."

"Mario Cuomo is my shepherd, I shall not want," he intoned. "He leadeth me beside still factories, he restoreth my doubt in New York politics. He guideth me to the path of unemployment, he annointeth my wage with freeze, so my expense runneth over my income. Surely, poverty and hard living shall follow his administration and I shall live in a rented house forever."

New York tax-revolt movement is growing

The crowd roared. Alberts went on, "Five thousand years ago, Moses said, 'Pack your camel, pick up your shovel, mount your ass and I will lead you to the Promised Land.' Five thousand years later, Franklin D. Roosevelt said, 'Lay down your shovel, sit on your ass and light up a Camel. This is the Promised Land.'

"Today, Mario Cuomo will tax your shovel, sell your camel, kick you in the ass and tell you the Promised Land is in Japan." The crowd howled. Alberts was just one of a long line of angry taxpayers to express publicly their fury at New York's crippling taxation and wasteful government spending. Over and over, the cry went up: "Throw the bums out."

Sandwiched between the American flag and a broom was a poster listing all the taxes Americans pay: federal, state, city, property, school, corporate, gas, capital, value added, import, excise, estate, sales, Social Security, fees, sin, luxury, tolls, one-time and surcharge.

The Kingston protest was one of many held 'round the country over the weekend, coming on top of New Jersey's 18-month tax rebellion and Connecticut's fierce outcry against new taxes.

They came from everywhere to make their voices heard at Kingston — from Buffalo to Suffolk County — at the urging of the New York State Taxpayers Alliance, headed by Gordon Ross Webb. They hurled tea bags into a receptacle and roasted a pig to symbolize disgust with legislative pork-barrel spending.

"This is the first step in taking back our government,"

Webb said. "We're really building toward '92. Hopefully, it will keep growing until politicians fi-

Chairman

Nov. 1, 1991

To Gov. Sununu

John, in his comments to my memo of last week the President asked for a summary of Cuomo's debate past. Here's what we've come up with, so I thought you might want to deliver it to him.

If he'd like any additional followup, just let us know.

MARIO CUOMO: Debate History Since 1982

In his major statewide races since 1982, Cuomo has taken no consistent position on the question of candidate debates, and little evidence suggests that he has ever paid much attention to the minutiae of format or staging negotiations. Debates are a simple and basic strategic decision for Cuomo -- when he has been a poorly-financed and little-known underdog, he has pushed for debates and complained that his opponents are avoiding him; since 1986, in two gubernatorial reelections against ill-equipped Republican and minor-party candidates, he has himself avoided and limited his debate appearances. His reputation as a skilled and aggressive debater is deserved; he has a courtroom attorney's instinct for deflating one-liners, though he has occasionally pushed his advantage too hard and been criticized for cruelty and arrogance.

1982: First Gubernatorial Campaign

In the Democratic primary against New York City Mayor Ed Koch, Cuomo was outspent two-to-one and Koch was the overwhelming favorite to win. Cuomo pushed hard for a series of debates: "We need truth-in-packaging for this important gubernatorial campaign, and we can't get that in 30 second TV commercials. Only when candidates get together can the facts be presented. I urge the Mayor to lift the campaign curtain." Koch agreed to seven debates in a variety of moderated formats: three newspaper panels (New York Post, New York Times, Buffalo Courier Express); two radio broadcasts (WGBB and WMCA); and two television station studio appearances (WOKR and WPIX). Cuomo destroyed Koch in the first debate, a New York Post-sponsored event on July 7: "Ed won the toss of the coin and chose to let me open so he could close. Seconds after he called and won with 'tails' I grabbed the microphone and said, 'No wonder he's for casino gambling.' The audience enjoyed it. It set a tone immediately. Ed was unhappier."

Cuomo was again heavily outspent in the general election by Republican Lew Lehrman, who sought to limit debate and emphasize television advertising. Cuomo was clearly frustrated by Lehrman's tactics: "I have not yet been engaged with Lehrman," he wrote in his diary. "He's ducking us: he'll give us only one or two debates and they're tough because I've increased the level of expectations by my debates with Koch." Lehrman ultimately agreed to two late-campaign October debates sponsored by the New York Post and New York Daily News. Many observers believe the election was clinched by a single Cuomo line in the second debate (Daily News, October 24):

"What occurred was, we were standing side by side debating and Lew was trying to interrupt my answers. Apparently, he had some kind of strategy in mind, and at one point he leaned right over in front of me while I was speaking and jammed his watch in my face. He said, 'Look at the time.' And I never even touched him. I looked at the watch and I said, 'My, that's an expensive watch.' And the place broke up."

1986: Second Gubernatorial Campaign

After a successful first term, a highly popular Cuomo entered the 1986 race as an overwhelming favorite. His opponent was a little-known county executive named Andy O'Rourke. This time, Cuomo did everything he could to avoid debates, and for several months O'Rourke attempted to make an issue of the governor's invisibility by appearing at press conferences next to a life-size cardboard photograph of Cuomo. Cuomo's position throughout the campaign was that he would not debate Andy O'Rourke until O'Rourke disclosed a list of the clients he had represented as an attorney, a list some reports indicate Cuomo was primarily interested in because he knew it would include a homosexual bar in Westchester. On October 16, a frustrated O'Rourke phoned WWCN radio in Delmar during a live call-in show featuring Cuomo, a stunt that produced the following excerpted interchange:

O'Rourke: "I'm willing to debate you, 24 debates. Are you going to debate or not?"

Cuomo: "I don't believe you, Andy. Let me ask you a question Andy, are you telling the people you don't remember who you represented?"

O'Rourke: Let's talk about ...

Cuomo (interrupting): Andy, I'm waiting for you, Andy.

O'Rourke tries to speak

Cuomo: Andy, will you say yes or no?

O'Rourke: Tell me what you caught me doing.

Cuomo: Goodbye, Andy. So long, Andy.

O'Rourke: Listen, I can't answer that question because you didn't catch me in a goddamn thing.

Cuomo: Oh, be careful, Andy! Be careful, Andy!

Cuomo finally did agree to a single, 90-minute, untelevised debate before the New York Times editorial board one week before the election. Cuomo declined to offer O'Rourke a face-to-face individual debate; the Times event also featured the Conservative Party and Right to Life Party gubernatorial nominees.

1990: Third Gubernatorial Campaign

In 1990, Cuomo again refused to grant Republican nominee Pierre Rinfret a one-on-one debate, and continually insisted that any debate include schismatic Republican Herb London (running on the Conservative Party line) and Right to Life Party nominee Louis Wein. Twice in August, Rinfret interrupted public appearances by Cuomo to press the governor on the debate question. Outside a General Mills cereal plant in Buffalo, where the governor was announcing a state industrial effectiveness grant, Cuomo shook Rinfret's hand but curtly dismissed the issue: "I've said over and over, I've said this to you personally, I'd be delighted to debate you. I don't think you're entitled to any more than the Conservative or the Right to Life" candidates. "Don't you think the two major parties are entitled to more?" Rinfret asked. "No," Cuomo replied. "I'll see you."

Two four-way debates were eventually arranged. The first took place on Friday, October 19, during a World Series game, and was only given tape-delay radio and television broadcast during late-night odd hours. The second debate was held at the WNBC television studio in New York City on the Sunday afternoon before the election -- during football season. Cuomo hardly participated in either debate; bitter interchanges between Rinfret and London dominated both events. In the second debate, Cuomo expressed a standard frontrunner's disdain for such fora: "They're a joke. I've said that over and over and if ever the population needed proof of how stupid they are, listen to this one." When the second debate was over, Cuomo said "I was trying very hard not to laugh."
