THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

October 6, 1990

TO: GOVERNOR SUNUNU
RICHARD G. DARMAN

Attached is a summary which shows the Congress' reliance on CR's over the past decade. This is a pretty strong indictment of the budget process (not that further evidence is needed these days...).

FISCAL YEAR 1989

NONE

Historical Note: On 1/25/88, when President Reagan delivered his State of the Union Message in the House chamber, the President also carried back the hand-enrollments of the Continuing Appropriations bill for FY 1988, H.J.Res. 395 and the Reconciliation bill, H.R. 3545, lifted each up and then dropped them down on the rostrum and stated that if the Congress sent him "another one of these . . . I will not sign it." No continuing appropriations bills were passed by the Congress for FY 1989.

MEMORANDUM FOR JOHN H. SUNUNU

FROM: FREDERICK D. MCCLURE
NICHOLAS E. CALIO

✓ will work on Pashayan -

The following Members need to be called on the budget agreement:

Archer ok
yes
get money
Rep. Don Young (R-AK): As of last night, he was indicating that he might support the package. The oil and gas incentives in the deal may convince him.

DW
Rep. Don Ritter (R-PA): He is chronically worried about his re-election prospects. He comes from a largely Democratic district (Lehigh Valley, Pennsylvania), but generally wins with solid, although not overwhelming, margins. Last week he was quite concerned about the effects of sequestration on his constituents. This week he is worried about the effect of the budget package on his constituents. He needs to be convinced that the budget plan is better than the alternative of sequestration.

Rep. Jim Courter (R-NJ): In the past, he has allied himself with the supply-side wing of the House Republicans. Now he is also using the anti-tax sentiment in New Jersey as an excuse to express doubts about the budget plan.

However, having lost the gubernatorial election last year, he will be retiring. He is rumored to be interested in being appointed U.S. Attorney for northern New Jersey.

ew
Rep. Larry Hopkins (R-KY): He is concerned about the effect of the tobacco tax increase on his constituents. He is also running for Governor, a race in which the President has been quite helpful. He serves on the Armed Services Committee so he may be amenable to the argument that the defense numbers in the budget plan are the best we are going to get. He is leaning against it.

AD
Rep. Charles Pashayan (R-CA): Generally, it is very difficult to tell beforehand exactly where he stands on issues. He prefers to think of himself as very judicious and deliberative. He has a tight re-election campaign going, so he may be concerned about the increases in excise taxes, such as those on wine, which might affect his area. He is leaning against the package at this point.

Thinking
Rep. Steve Bartlett (R-TX): Normally a staunch, anti-tax conservative, he is sending signals that we may be able to get very circumspect about his intentions. Senator Phil Gramm's support of the package could be very influential with Bartlett.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: Frederick D. McClure fm
SUBJECT: Additional Telephone Calls re: Budget Resolution

There are additional Members that we would like you to contact personally regarding the Budget Resolution.

- (1) Bob Lagomarsino (CA)
-- has told outside groups that he is displeased that he has not received a call from the President.

-- he is presently a "no", but we believe your call could turn him around. Is particularly concerned over the tax issue. He may be impressed that his former constituent, President Ronald Reagan, supports us.
- ② (2) Mike Bilirakis (FL)
-- per Secretary Derwinski, he is leaning no but may be "gettable".

-- seems most concerned about Medicare.

-- may be useful to tell him that his Florida colleagues, Bill Young, Andy Ireland, and Clay Shaw are with us.
- ③ (3) Ron Packard (CA)
-- has said he plans to oppose because of tax issue, but we believe another loyalty appeal may be effective.
- ✓ (4) Virginia Smith (NE)
-- she was on board, until Governor Kay Orr called with concerns over the gas tax.

(5) Ralph Regula (OH)

-- according to other members he is now undecided. As you know, he is concerned about the Kennedy Center tickets from last night. He wants to help you.

(6) Helen Bentley (MD)

-- she is now leaning our way and has said she wants to be loyal to the President.

(8) Howard Nielson (UT)

-- this second call to Nielson is recommended based on new information this evening that a call from you emphasizing the entitlement reforms would be effective in getting his support. We recommend that you refer to Representative Henry Waxman's opposition to the plan.

(9) Bill Emerson (MO)

-- according to Senators Bond and Danforth a call from you this evening could be effective in getting his support. (He also received a call from you on Tuesday)

MEMORANDUM

TO: Governor John H. Sununu
FROM: Congressman Newt Gingrich
DATE: September 25, 1990

The House Appropriations Republicans have given the President two opportunities to seize the initiative and put pressure on the Democrats. First, all but one of the Republicans voted against the continuing resolution. Second, Joe McDade offered an amendment to separate Desert Shield money from the continuing resolution. Democrats publicly stated they had to keep Desert Shield money in to protect their political spending.

These two votes give the Administration a great opportunity to rally House Republican support for tomorrow's vote on the continuing resolution and to shift the debate off capital gains toward Democratic political spending.

Our goal should be to have strong stories on all four network shows and the morning news shows.

Can you push your press team to think creatively and in the next three hours have an event or activity which gets the President into the evening news cycle with our message? Can you offer people to the morning shows to help get our message across?

The key is to measure success (are we in the show with our story?) and not effort (did we try?).

We have a great opportunity to strengthen our hand and we should move aggressively now.

cc: The Honorable Andrew H. Card, Jr.
The Honorable Edward M. Rogers
The Honorable Nicholas Calio

Gephardt Says Budget Deal He Worked On Is Lousy&lt;

ST. LOUIS (AP) House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., says the budget package he helped negotiate and is now trying to sell to House Democrats is "horribly unfair," but it was the "least-worst alternative."

"I detest it. I think it's wrong," Gephardt was quoted as saying in a copyright story in today's St. Louis Post-Dispatch. "It is my bitterest disappointment in the summit. But there is nothing more that we could do."

Gephardt spent nearly five months with other budget negotiators developing the deficit-reduction deal announced Sunday. But he said its package of tax increases hits middle-income taxpayers harder than the rich.

Nevertheless, he said, he signed on to the five-year, $500 billion deficit-cutting deal because he would "rather have a compromise than chaos," threatened by automatic budget cuts.

"It's the least-worst alternative," Gephardt told the Post-Dispatch. "That's where you finally wind up."

Even though he joined President George Bush and other budget conferees on Sunday at the White House to announce the budget deal, Gephardt said he blamed Bush and his Republican administration for insisting on a regressive tax package.

"I would be happy to send (Bush) a fair tax bill; he wouldn't sign it," Gephardt said.

Gephardt told the Post-Dispatch on Tuesday that the budget summit was unsatisfactory and frustrating. He said that if he had known what he would go through to get a budget deal, he would have turned down the offer to lead negotiations. "You're forced to sit in rooms for five months, talking to people you don't agree with, making agreements with people you don't agree with, and coming up with a package that you hate," Gephardt said. "But it's something you feel you've got to do in order to best represent your people and do the right thing for the country."

He said that getting Congress to approve the budget deal would be tough.

"It's up in the air at this point," he said, noting that he had been urging House Democrats to vote yes.

Gephardt said that before going to the Rose Garden on Sunday to announce the deal, he told Bush: "This is like achieving a tie in a football game."

On Tuesday, Gephardt added: "I'm not even sure it's that satisfying. You're just left with an empty feeling in the pit of your stomach that this is a lousy alternative but that's better than the alternative to that."

Gephardt 'Detests' Budget Proposal

WASHINGTON — Like a salesman with damaged goods, House Majority Leader Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., says he is trying to sell a budget package to House Democrats that is "horribly unfair."

"I detest it. I think it's wrong," Gephardt said in an interview Tuesday. "It is my bitterest disappointment in the summit. But there is nothing more that we could do."

Gephardt — who spent nearly five months with other budget negotiators developing the deficit-reduction deal — said its package of tax increases "hits middle-income taxpayers more than people at the top."

But Gephardt said he signed on to the five-year, $500 billion deficit-cutting deal — and is working to convince other House Democrats to vote for it — because he would "rather have a compromise than chaos," threatened by automatic budget cuts.

"It's the least-worst alternative," Gephardt said of the budget agreement. "That's where you finally wind up."

Bush Asks Nation To Support Budget Plan

By Lawrence M. O'Rourke

WASHINGTON — President George Bush appealed to the nation Tuesday night to support a compromise $300 billion five-year package of tax increases and spending cuts.

Oval Office, Bush warned that rejection of the plan by Congress — a distinct possibility — would severely hurt the country.

"If we fail to enact this agreement, our economy will falter, markets may tumble, and recession will follow."

"I cannot claim it's the best deficit reduction plan possible. It's not," Bush said. But it was the best one, he said, that could be worked out under the circumstances of a Republican president and a Democratic-controlled Congress with contradictory positions on national priorities.

Just after the president spoke, Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, speaking from the Capitol, said the package advocated by Bush is "imperfect."

But Mitchell echoed Bush's warning of the dangerous consequences of re-years of budget deficits, as a "cancer gnawing away at our nation's health." Actually, rejection of the plan would again raise the likelihood of the mandatory cuts and furloughs under the sequester provisions of the Gramm-Rudman law.

Seated at his desk and using a low-keyed speaking style, Bush said that the compromise plan is the "toughest deficit reduction agreement ever."

Bush said the plan is the "result of eight months of blood, sweat and tears, fears of the economic chaos that would follow if we fail to reduce the deficit."

They should not turn us back to higher income tax rates."

The plan does not change rates on individual or corporate taxes. It would raise revenue largely through higher taxes on gasoline, beer, wine and hard liquor, luxury items, air flights, and adjustments in deductions that would force taxpayers with taxable incomes over $100,000 to pay more in taxes.

In a response to his critics, Bush said, "each and every one of us can find fault with something in this agreement. In fact, that is a burden that any truly fair solution must carry. Any worthwhile solution must be judged as a whole, not piece by piece.

Democratic leadership in Congress joins in that appeal," Mitchell said.

"We recognize that this budget demands sacrifice from all Americans. But if enacted, it holds the promise of restoring a sound economy from which all Americans will benefit."

Just as Bush directed his appeal to his special constituency of conservative Republicans, Mitchell had a special message for liberal Democrats. "Democrats and Republicans have deep differences over values and priorities," Mitchell said.

"We prefer a budget that asks more from the wealthy and less from the elderly," Mitchell said. But when the president asked for Democratic help, the Democrats agreed to a comproafter the first of three sessions between Bush and GOP lawmakers.

Congressional leaders pondered letting the Senate take the first vote on an outline of the plan.

Support for the package is viewed as stronger in the Senate, if only because only one-third of the 100-member Senate is up for re-election this year, while all 435 House seats are up for grabs.

Dole said letting the Senate cast the initial vote would "put heat on the House."

It was Bush's fourth televised speech from the Oval Office.

sive tax package.

"I would be happy to send [Bush] a fair tax bill; he wouldn't sign it," Gephardt said.

During the interview in his Capitol office, Gephardt:

- Called the budget summit "very unsatisfactory and very frustrating." If he had foreseen what he would go through to get a budget deal, Gephardt said he would have turned down the offer to lead the negotiations.

"You're forced to sit in rooms for five months, talking to people you don't agree with, making agreements with people you don't agree with, and coming up with a package that you hate," Gephardt said. "But it's something you feel you've got to do in order to best represent your people and do the right thing for the country."

- Conceded that some economic assumptions behind the five-year budget deal probably were overly optimistic.

"The economy won't do what we think it's going to do now. And probably, in three years, we'll be back into a summit," Gephardt said. "Unless we have a Democratic president — which would be, of course, the best solution to this problem."

- Said getting Congress to approve the budget deal would be tough. "It's up in the air at this point," he said, noting that he had been urging House Democrats to vote yes.

"We're working on our [Democratic] members, and trying to get our majority — which we promised to do. And the Republicans have a similar obligation," Gephardt said.

- Said he and other Democratic negotiators worked for months to get a "more progressive" tax plan into the budget deal — and had some successes — but were unable to convince Bush and his negotiators to make enough concessions.

"The initial Republican offer was much more regressive than what we came out with," Gephardt said. "They seem to want regressivity; they seem to favor unfair taxes. The people elected him [Bush] president; he has at least half the power in this place — probably two-thirds, because he can veto a bill."

A government analysts of the tax package that was leaked to the press indicated that taxpayers in the income ranges of $30,000 to $40,000 and from $40,000 to $50,000, would be hit hardest — paying an average 3.3 percent more taxes under the plan. By contrast, taxpayers in the income range of $50,000 to $100,000 would see their total tax bills rise 2 percent under the plan.

"We had proposals to take money from the top from people over $300,000 a year through a surtax and funnel that money back into the middle class through the standard deduction — in order to offset the regressivity of the excise-tax increases," Gephardt said.

"We made a number of proposals of that kind, and they were all flatly resisted by the president and by his representatives."

Gephardt added: "My final judgment was that it's better to take this than nothing — even though it's deficient, in my view, in terms of regressivity — and put off the fight for another day."

Before the announcement of the budget deal Sunday, Gephardt said he told Bush: "This is like achieving a tie in a football game."
