Dear George:

As I observed during your talk, you had the absolute and unswerving attention of everyone when you spoke at lunch to the Texas Commerce Directors and Chief Executive Officers.

You have that rare combination of intellect and warmth. I noted two head waiters came over to shake your hand as though you were a long lost friend and I also was aware that you inquired about Earl Loggins on the 9th floor so that you might be sure to greet him while you were in the Houston Club. Considering the responsibility you have and the pressures resulting from that responsibility, this "people" trait is all the more impressive.

Additionally, George, I am indebted to you for another Bush...this one named Jeb. You and Barbara have raised an exceptional family. Young Jeb daily demonstrates his energies and his abilities. He is a pleasure to be associated with and we are grateful to his parents!

Most sincerely,

Ben F. Love

Dear George:

On behalf of the officers and members of the Association, I would like to express to you our appreciation for speaking at our annual meeting.

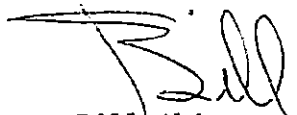

Many of our members have expressed to me that this was the best Mid-Continent meeting they have attended in several years and I am sure it was because of the speakers we had on our program.

You have many friends in the petroleum industry and they were all appreciative of you taking the time to be with us. I know that they join me in our thanks to you for the contributions you have made and are making to our government and I am sure they were as pleased as I in hearing your intentions of directing the office of the CIA.

It was certainly my pleasure to see you again. If we can ever be of any assistance, please call on us.

With best wishes, I am

Sincerely yours,

Bill Abington

Dear George:

The postal service apparently out did itself and delivered the attached envelope and its contents to us at the Hyatt Regency Houston during our convention. Amid the jumble of scribbling we find it is addressed to you. Maybe your stable experts can make some sense out of it.

I must say I enjoyed my visit with you and Senator Goldwater very much. From the comments that we heard, your address evoked a great deal of interest on the part of our membership, which seemed most appreciative.

Sincerely,

John W. Wagner

SUBJECT : Your Speech to the Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association,
October 15, 1976

1. Attached is a suggested outline for the substantive portion of your remarks to the Oil & Gas Association. It seemed more appropriate to me to prepare this in outline form rather than finished text, but it can easily be converted if you wish.

2. The text is largely drawn from OER material and has been cleared by OER and by the A/NIO for Economics. Hans Heymann will look it over early next week. A copy has also gone to Andrew Falkiewicz.

3. Also attached are the two briefing papers we prepared but did not use for Governor Carter on Energy and Petrodollars. You might wish to review them before your talk.

4. I will be available to make whatever changes you might wish and can provide you with additional copies or a larger type as you desire.

ECONOMIC INTELLIGENCE

I. The world has changed greatly since World War II, and so have the interests of the Intelligence Community. In particular, economic intelligence has grown steadily in importance during the { Back for Foxbat

Nuclear Profit

last decade. This growth is no fad. It derives from a change in the nature of the policy issues of concern to the President and his principal advisers.

A. Until a few years ago, national security issues were overwhelmingly political in nature.

1. The main role for economic intelligence was in assessing the economic potential of the USSR, China, and Eastern European nations for making war.
2. This mission remains, and CIA continues to devote a large portion of its economic analytical resources to understanding the strengths and weaknesses of the Communist economies. study of Sov. economy

B. Today, however, international economic problems -- many of which bear no relationship to the Soviet Union or the Communist countries -- are of great concern.
We now must consider the tradeoffs between our foreign economic, political, and military objectives. In addition, international economic developments have a direct impact on our domestic economy.

II. Policymakers today have greatly increased their demand for economic intelligence support. They want to know what is going on, what it means, and what to expect in the future.

- A. Since 1970, the stable international economic environment, which had stimulated very rapid growth of international trade, has been badly shaken. Several crises occurred in quick succession, and to a greater or lesser extent they are still with us:
 - 1. A dollar crisis;
 - 2. A less dramatic, but probably more lasting trade crisis;
 - 3. A grain crisis;
 - 4. An energy crisis.
- B. Beginning in 1971 the monetary rules changed, gold was dethroned, and international negotiations on exchange rates, exchange market intervention, and the like became of direct concern to our most senior policymakers.
- C. Overshadowing more traditional economic concerns is the question of access to resources.
 - 1. The OPEC oil cartel -- I'll speak more of that later -- is in the forefront.
 - 2. We may face similar challenges in other raw materials. Shortfalls in grain production in the USSR and elsewhere affect both the American farmer and the American consumer.

George read him
some of this speech -
Book House - Shakespeare
Festival

3. Trade negotiations, the price of gold, and the increasingly strident demands of Third World countries for a redistribution of income in their favor are but a few of the important economic issues concerning Begin us all.

III. These newer problems have vastly broadened the number of countries about which economic intelligence must be concerned. The world is increasingly interdependent, and our economic security is linked to developments worldwide. Foreign economic policy can no longer be viewed as a subordinate aspect of foreign policy to be left largely to technicians.

- A. Foreign economic matters can have a major impact on our ability to maintain troops in NATO, on our relations with Western Europe, on relations with the USSR and China, and on the whole spectrum of our relations with Japan. Thus, the Secretary of State must concern himself with economics.
- B. Foreign economic questions now also involve such matters as the price of bread in American markets, the availability of gas and fuel oil, jobs for textile, shoe, and auto workers. Therefore the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Commerce, the Secretary of Labor, the Secretary of Agriculture -- all must concern themselves with international economics.

IV. To support these consumers -- and the Council of Economic Advisers, the Council on International Economic Policy, the Economic Policy Board -- the U.S. Intelligence Community has made major changes in dealing with foreign economic intelligence.

- A. CIA's Office of Economic Research is the main national analytic research base. It is the largest element of the U.S. Government engaged in research on foreign economic matters. It is manned by well over two hundred graduate economists and industry specialists.
- B. Economic specialists in many other areas of the Government are also at work in this area -- in Treasury, the Department of State, Agriculture, etc. We are trying hard to bring about the best possible coordination of these informed people -- sharing information and judgments. We believe strongly that competition in analysis is highly desirable -- and we have, of course, greatly increased our efforts to collect foreign economic intelligence abroad as well.
- C. There are a number of vehicles by which we can send our analysis to the policymaker. We have daily current intelligence publications, a specialized Economic Intelligence Weekly, and a bi-weekly publication on International Oil Developments. Many unclassified publications are released to the public via the Library of Congress or Government Printing Office.

V. Let me now give you some samples of the kinds of issues we are currently working on.

- A. Economic growth and inflation: We closely monitor changes in economic activity and inflation worldwide, especially in the industrial countries. We produce integrated economic projections for these countries on at least a quarterly basis.
- B. Petrodollars: The Intelligence Community has a major responsibility for tracking petrodollars -- their volume, location, the currencies and type of assets in which they are held. We also estimate and project the balance of payments surplus of the OPEC countries from which the petrodollars are created.
- C. Grain: The emphasis on grain reflects the extreme tightness in the international grain market since U.S. surplus stocks were exhausted. Any substantial shortfall abroad is now quickly reflected in higher grain prices, with a direct economic and political impact on the U.S. In this situation, the priority of our long-established work on Soviet and Chinese agriculture has greatly increased.

- D. Trade and monetary negotiations: The Intelligence Community supports U.S. negotiators in these areas with estimates, projections, and advanced economic methodology. We maintain a large and growing data bank.
- E. Technology transfers: There is a great deal of concern in the Government about the impact on the Communist countries of the transfer of advanced U.S. technology. This is a very difficult area to analyze because many things besides technology influence these countries' economic performances and military programs.
- F. Soviet defense expenditures: We have just completed -- and released to the public -- two major studies of the burden of defense expenditures on the Soviet economy. We will continue to refine our analyses in this vital area.

VII. Let me now turn to the subject of greatest interest to this group -- international oil. Much of this information may be familiar to you -- and in fact I will welcome your comments as to how well our perceptions agree with your own.

- A. As you know, the Middle East has become the critical geographic area in the Free World's energy supply in the last 15-20 years. The Middle East oil producers, together with Algeria, Libya, Nigeria, Venezuela, and Indonesia, have formed the OPEC cartel, giving them control over international oil prices.

1. OPEC will be considering another price boost this ✓ December.
 2. Over the longer term, it is certain that OPEC will ✓ increase oil prices at a rate that at least matches inflation in the major developed countries.
 3. Accounting for over 40 percent of current Free World ✓ oil output, the Arab countries have shown their willingness to use their oil as a weapon against the West and, given another Middle East war, would be likely to use it again.
 4. ✓ The effectiveness of the Arab oil weapon is not likely to decline in the foreseeable future because:
 - a. Free World energy consumption is rising, and ✓ oil's share of that rising consumption is still going up despite recent price increases and oil conservation efforts.
 - b. ✓ The Arab countries, and Saudi Arabia in particular, hold the bulk of world oil reserves from which the required increase in production will come.
- B. Even though many people in government and industry around the world are concerned about the increased reliance on OPEC and Arab oil, the cost of developing alternative sources is so high and the market for these alternatives is so uncertain that little has been done to move from research and development to the market place. Even the fears of an energy shortage as the oil age comes to an end have done little to stimulate the development of alternative energy sources. P

11. C. With demand for Middle East oil rising through 1980 and beyond, Western nations will be increasingly affected by cost pressures and transfers of income inherent in progressively higher oil prices. 9-73 10-12 early 74

1. The large rise in crude oil prices in 1973/74 had from 2.70 to $ 10.50 - by end 74 a severe contractionary impact on Free World economies. 0x 75 = 4 11.50
2. Future price hikes by OPEC countries will have similar effects.

- D. Because oil demand will be so high, OPEC will have little difficulty in continuing to set the world price of oil.
1. OPEC should have little trouble maintaining its cohesion in the period through 1980, when its oil exports will generally be increasing.
2. Those few countries with the option of substantially raising oil production -- notably Saudi Arabia -- find OPEC a useful instrument of political influence and do not want to risk the political isolation that lowering prices and boosting output would bring about.

3. Moreover, there is little economic incentive for these countries to run the political risks involved in such a policy. Even if all other OPEC countries produce as much as they would be likely to without the cartel, Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Kuwait, and the UAE can more than maintain their current level of production through 1980.
4. In the situation we are projecting, formal prorationing should be unnecessary. This is not to say, however, that these issues will not be continuing sources of friction amongst cartel members, simply that they will not be sticky enough to endanger the coalition.

Dear George:

I am pleased to enclose one of the mailers that we sent to our members to publicize our annual meeting. You will note that the theme of our business meeting has given each speaker considerable leeway to discuss his particular field.

We will need more specific information about the nature of your address and would like to have a title for your speech. I would like to request that your office furnish us 50 copies of your speech by no later than October 13 directed to my attention at the Hyatt Regency Hotel, 1200 Louisiana, Houston, Texas 77002, marked "Hold For Delivery."

It is quite likely that the press would like to interview you during your stay in Houston and our staff will be very glad to set up a press conference or assist you in handling an interview. If you will have a member of your staff contact Mr. Jay Cassell in our office, he will make all the necessary arrangements.

We are very pleased that you will be one of our speakers and we look forward to assisting you in any way that you desire.

Sincerely yours,

Bill Abington

Texas Oil Men and the National Interest

At the 57th Annual Meeting of Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association, Oct. 14-15, petroleum industry decision makers will profit from the ideas of a panel of distinguished business and governmental leaders.

On the eve of the election... Where does America stand?

ECONOMICS

Peter G. Peterson
Chairman, Lehman Brothers, Inc.

From a background of marketing and corporate management, service as Secretary of Commerce, and U. S. trade negotiator, Peter G. Peterson became chairman of the international investment banking firm of Lehman Brothers in August, 1973.

Now turned 50, Peterson, a native of Kearney, Neb., earned his MBA at the University of Chicago, was a vice president of the advertising firm of McCann-Erickson at 27, joined Bell & Howell in 1958 and was president at 34, chairman at 42.

He took a White House assignment in 1971 to make recommendations for international economic policy, was named Secretary of Commerce in January 1972, where he served until mid-1973. Author of a comprehensive trade negotiating strategy for the U. S., Peterson as Secretary headed up negotiations for commercial and lend-lease agreements with the Soviet Union and Poland.

Peterson is also a director of Black & Decker, Federated Department Stores, General Foods, and Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing.

POLITICS

Barry M. Goldwater
U.S. Senator, Arizona

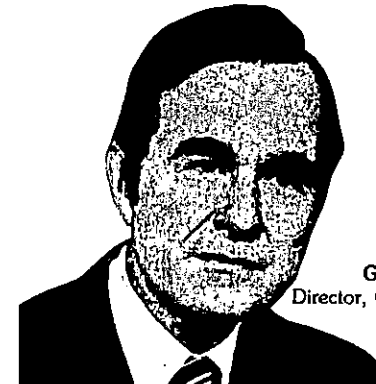

Colorful, straight-talking Senator Barry M. Goldwater is one of the best-known figures in contemporary American politics.

In his 67 years he has combined numerous successful pursuits into an action-filled career. Son of a Phoenix merchant, he became a member of the family department store enterprise, Goldwater's, later becoming chairman of the board.

He left the presidency of Goldwater's in 1953 to run for the U. S. Senate as a Republican, serving Arizona until 1964. That year he was the Republican nominee for President. Arizona voters sent him back to the Senate in 1968, where he is one of the key Republican leaders. He is ranking minority member of the Committee on Aeronautical and Space Sciences, serves on numerous subcommittees of the Armed Services Committee, and is a member of the Select Committee on Intelligence.

A World War II Air Force pilot, Senator Goldwater is a major general in the Reserve. His excellence as a photographer has given him membership in the Royal Photographers Society. He is author of numerous books on Arizona and his political experiences and philosophy. He served as a TV political commentator for ABC during the 1976 Democratic Convention.

NATIONAL SECURITY

George H. W. Bush
Director, Central Intelligence Agency

George H. W. Bush, a New Englander who started his business career selling oil field supplies in West Texas, now presides in the highly sensitive Office of the Director of this nation's Central Intelligence Agency.

A Yale Phi Beta Kappa, Bush saw duty as a carrier pilot in the Pacific during World War II (Distinguished Flying Cross and three air medals).

He worked for Dresser at Midland from 1948-51, formed an oil development firm, later co-founded Zapata Petroleum Corp., then Zapata Off-Shore.

Bush, a Republican, was elected to Congress from Houston in 1966, re-elected in 1968. Following loss of the 1970 Senate race, he was named U. S. ambassador to the United Nations in 1971, was Chairman of the Republican National Committee in 1973, and became Chief of the U. S. Liaison Office, Peking, People's Republic of China, Sept., 1974.

Bush, now 52, started a new era for the Central Intelligence Agency when he became Director Jan. 30, 1976

Washington, D. C. 20505

Dear George:

Plans for our annual meeting are being finalized and all indications are that we will have excellent attendance. We are particularly grateful you have agreed to speak to us, and we feel that our program is an outstanding one. I am enclosing a copy of our program for the annual meeting.

We ordinarily have only one speaker on the platform during delivery of his remarks. It would be very helpful if you could be seated near the platform in the front of the meeting room prior to your address. I will be presiding at the meeting and will present you to the general session at approximately 11:00 a.m.

Your son, Jeb Bush, notified me that you plan to speak at the Board meeting of the Texas Commerce Bank at ~~noon~~ and I am very confident that we will conclude our program in plenty of time for you to be there. We are sorry that you cannot remain with us for our Distinguished Service Awards luncheon, but we certainly understand your desire to attend the other program.

I will be registered at the Hyatt Regency Hotel beginning Tuesday evening and will be glad to assist you in any way that you desire. We are looking forward to having you with us in Houston.

Sincerely yours,

Bill Abington

Dr. Norman Hackerman, President
Rice University
6100 Main Street
Houston, Texas 77005

Dear Norman:

On October 15th, I am coming back to Houston and I would like very much to meet with you and one or two of your colleagues from Rice University. I am inviting representatives from other Houston universities.

Here's what I have in mind. There is a lot of misunderstanding about CIA and about opportunities here for employment: I have been most impressed with the quality of the people with whom I work here at CIA. There are facets of our work that would appeal to almost any bright and able young person. We only accept 400 new professional employees each year. Entrance is highly competitive, but for those who are accepted, the rewards in terms of an interesting career are great.

I would like to invite you to sit down with me for an hour or so to talk, off the record, about CIA. My hope would be that after the meeting you would be able to steer a few exceptional prospects our way. I hope you will bring your Placement Director and/or an appropriate Dean.

Here are the details:

Place: Commerce Room of the Houston Club
Time: 4:00 p.m.
Date: Friday, 15 October

Dr. Philip G. Hoffman, President
University of Houston
3801 Cullen Boulevard
Houston, Texas 77004

Dear Phil:

On October 15th, I am coming back to Houston and I would like very much to meet with you and one or two of your colleagues from the University of Houston. I am inviting representatives from other Houston universities.

Here's what I have in mind. There is a lot of misunderstanding about CIA and about opportunities here for employment. I have been most impressed with the quality of the people with whom I work here at CIA. There are facets of our work that would appeal to almost any bright and able young person. We only accept 400 new professional employees each year. Entrance is highly competitive, but for those who are accepted, the rewards in terms of an interesting career are great.

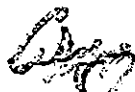

I would like to invite you to sit down with me for an hour or so to talk, off the record, about CIA. My hope would be that after the meeting you would be able to steer a few exceptional prospects our way. I hope you will bring your Placement Director and/or an appropriate Dean.

Here are the details:

Place: Commerce Room of the Houston Club
Time: 4:00 p.m.

I do hope you can make it.
