SUBJECT: Yugoslav Update

Please pass to the General for his 6:00 p.m. meeting with Dutch FM van den Broek.

We have shared with van den Broek today's White House Statement, which echoes a shorter EC statement issued at about the same time. You might begin by stressing our strong support for the EC's efforts and the close U.S.-EC cooperation on Yugoslavia. (This has been real coordination. The Twelve have several times overridden internal resistance by insisting on keeping faith with Washington. We have acted in the same spirit.)

A cease-fire in Slovenia has been restored for the moment. Mesic and Macedonia's presidency representative brokered an agreement between the JNA and the Slovenes. However, there are new clashes in Croatia, and Serbia has deployed massive force in Kosovo.

Van den Broek's ideas about next steps are very close to ours. Against German waffling, he continues to stress that Slovenia and Croatia could only gain independence in accordance with CSCE principles -- i.e., in consultation with all involved parties. We and the EC look to tomorrow's CSCE meeting in Prague to reaffirm the Berlin statement (with updating), endorse the EC's efforts, agree on continue CSCE monitoring, and seek agreement on cease-fire observers. (These ideas were raised but not resolved at yesterday's meeting of the CSCE Conflict Prevention Center.) The EC is sending Troika "correspondents" (Assistant Secretary level) to Yugoslavia tomorrow to prepare the way for observers.

As he will discuss the operational aspects at State, you might look beyond the immediate and see what he thinks can be achieved when (if) a cease fire can be agreed and sustained. Have the Slovenes gone too far to be brought back in? Is there a formula for a "Yugoslav community" or "alliance of Yugoslav republics/states" that can be made acceptable to Serbia and Slovenia alike? Is there a means whereby Slovenia can negotiate its way out while other republics negotiate their way toward a new rump Yugoslavia?

Phone call from UNDP staff this morning alerted us that Bill Draper can be expected to mention that the Soviet Union has asked for UNDP assistance. Nick Burns suggests not turning it off but not fully endorsing it at this stage either. Following are his points re this:

-- Technical aid and assistance from UNDP could be useful to the Soviet Union and is consistent with what we and the EC are planning/doing.

-- Sounds encouraging but UNDP should be sure to contact the State Department on this with more detail.

She asked if Secy Baker should be invited; any others? Will there be a paper?

I checked w/BS -- he has no objection to Baker being there but does not want to invite him. As to providing a paper, BS said if anyone knows what this is about, we could do a paper.

Based on this, I have passed to Ruth in Pryce's ofc that Pryce did a package on Rockefeller request (#3878) and now the meeting is scheduled, asking that Pryce do a meeting paper for BS to send forward.

I have passed to Alice Victor that we have gotten this time on the President's calendar but that you will be in touch with her on Monday to reconfirm. We have his DOB but will need to ask Alice for SSN.

Needless to say, I was delighted to receive your letter of June 4 which was waiting for me upon my return from the recent Baden-Baden meeting of the Bilderberg Conference. I am very glad that you felt that my New Orleans speech was useful and that the idea of a Hemispheric Forum sponsored by the Americas Society and the Council of the Americas has sufficient merit to justify my talking with the President about it. Alice Victor, my close associate here, is already in touch with Florence Gantt in your office to work out a date when I could see the President.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

June 4, 1991

Dear David:

Many thanks for your letter of May 22. Your speech to the New Orleans Council of Trade really hit the mark. Now that Fast Track is assured we will continue to work closely with you and other business leaders as we enter the negotiating process on the North American Free Trade Agreement.

We have been doing some thinking on your idea for a Hemispheric Forum sponsored by the Council of the Americas, and I believe it would be worthwhile for you to meet with the President to talk about it before too long. As we discussed briefly, one of the factors to be considered is how such a meeting would fit in with the Enrique Iglesias proposal to hold a somewhat similar meeting in September under Inter-American Development Bank auspices.

Your suggestion that the Council of the Americas focus on plans for hemispheric-wide free trade area by the year 2000 has appeal. I feel it would be useful for the President to participate in a Council of the Americas forum, especially if it were held in Washington or New York. We would need to consider carefully the level of participation of other governments.

I think it would be useful for you to have a brief meeting with the President on the subject, perhaps sometime around mid-June. In the meantime, let me thank you once again for all you have done to help get passage of Fast Track.

Sincerely,

Brent Scowcroft

MEMORANDUM FOR BRENT SCOWCROFT

THROUGH: WILLIAM T. PRYCE
SUBJECT: David Rockefeller's Letter Asking About a Meeting with the President

David Rockefeller has written you basically to follow-up on his request to meet the President to discuss the President's possible participation in a hemispheric meeting sponsored by the Forum of the Americas. He discussed the idea with you several weeks ago. (George Landau asked that we go slow on it until he had a chance to talk with David to focus the proposal more sharply.) As we mentioned to Rockefeller, we need to coordinate this proposal with a similar one by Inter-American Development Bank President Enrique Iglesias to hold a meeting on the Enterprise for the Americas in September. Iglesias would like to invite about 15 heads of state as well as prominent business leaders.

You will recall that President Lacalle raised this with the President on behalf of Iglesias. Enrique told me subsequently that all he wants from the President is for him to make a speech, preferably at a dinner and to have a joint meeting with the hemispheric presidents who come. He suggested that we could avoid the need for bilateral meetings here by scheduling the conference to coincide with the UNGA, where he assumes there would be Chiefs of State bilaterals anyway. This could probably ease some of the burden, but not all of it. The President would be asked for bilaterals by all the participants, not just the eight or so Latins he would normally see at the U.N.

I would recommend that we move first to give Iglesias a positive response in view of the Bank's key role in the Enterprise and the fact that September may be a good time to get help on the Enterprise legislation with the Congress if we haven't succeeded before then.

Once we make a decision on Iglesias' request we would be in a position to have David Rockefeller see the President. I would suggest that the President support a meeting sponsored by Rockefeller's group, but that we seek to have it concentrate on the private sector and not invite Chiefs of State -- perhaps we could invite Ministers of Economy.

In the meantime, we have drafted a interim reply to Rockefeller. Jules Katz of USTR agrees in principle to the focus of a hemisphere wide free trade zone.

Concurrences by: Tim Deal, Virginia Lampley

RECOMMENDATION

That you sign the letter to Rockefeller at Tab I.

That you recommend to the President that he accept in principle Iglesias' request to speak on investment at the Conference for the Enterprise in September to which other Chiefs of State would be invited. (State and Treasury concur)

May 22, 1991

Dear Brent:

I am giving a speech tomorrow in New Orleans at the request of Governor Roemer who has organized a New Orleans Conference on North American Free Trade. There will be a number of important speakers including Bob Mosbacher for our Government; Jaime Serra Puche, Secretary of Commerce of Mexico; and John Crosbie, Minister of International Trade of Canada. I am giving the dinner speech on "Hemispheric Free Trade" and am taking advantage of the opportunity to suggest where hemisphere relations and trade might go in this decade assuming the North American Free Trade Agreement is approved and further support is given for President Bush's Enterprise for the Americas Initiative.

In a sense, I am trying to anticipate a bit what a 1992 Forum of the Americas, which I would like to discuss with President Bush, might deal with. I am taking the liberty of attaching a copy of the speech in the hope that you might find the time to glance at it. The first part deals with the importance of the continuation of fast track for both the North American Free Trade Agreement and for GATT. Starting on Page 8, I touch on the idea of the Forum, and it is that part, in particular, which I hope you might have time to look at.

Although I do not specifically mention the idea in my New Orleans speech, I would favor focusing the proposed 1992 Forum, in which we hope the President might be willing to participate, on setting as an objective a Western Hemisphere free trade area by the Year 2000. This would be consistent with what the President has been advocating for the hemisphere and I believe is an achievable goal if the President gives it his ongoing support.

As I mentioned when we met a couple of weeks ago, it would seem to me that, given our growing Hispanic population in this country, given the fact that the President's Initiative has already been well received in Latin America and given the fact that it would not appear to me that the President could readily anticipate another political success comparable to Desert Storm elsewhere in the world in 1992, a focus in such a key election year on the fertile opportunities which are opening up in Latin America would make a lot of sense.

At your convenience, I would be grateful if you could indicate to me whether you feel it would be appropriate for me to seek an opportunity to meet briefly with the President on this subject.

With best regards,

Sincerely,

David Rockefeller

REMARKS BY DAVID ROCKEFELLER
THE NEW ORLEANS CONFERENCE ON NORTH AMERICAN FREE TRADE
May 23, 1991

Thank you, Governor (Roemer). I was once told that being the after-dinner speaker at a day-long conference is like being the body at an Irish wake. You're necessary for the proceedings, but you're not expected to say much.

One thing I do want to express, though, is my congratulations and thanks to the organizer of our most successful conference, a fine leader and, I'm happy to add, a fine Republican -- Governor Buddy Roemer.

Throughout this stimulating day we have been talking about the North American Free Trade Agreement and its implications for the future of our hemisphere.

After his nation's last presidential election, Mexico's most eminent man of letters, Nobel laureate Octavio Paz, said "We are a different country." Following Congress' vote to give President Bush the authority he needs to negotiate a North American Free Trade Agreement, ours will be a different hemisphere.

Either the United States will embrace the vision of free trade and open investment in Latin America. Either we will say that the United States recognizes, rewards and is ready to be a partner in democratic reform throughout the hemisphere.

Or we will turn our backs on this new era of hope and usher in a return to oligarchical governments, statist economies and to anti-Americanism south of our border -- at a time when the countries there will be far more populous than ever before.

Mexico and much of Latin America today are blessed with the most visionary and courageous leaders since Bolivar, San Martin and Juarez. The question they are all asking tonight is, will we stand behind them.

You would think that our answer would come without hesitation -- a firm yes. And yet, as we know, from certain labor groups to some textile executives to a few in the environmental lobby, many powerful groups have lined up against a Free Trade Agreement and may well continue to try to block it.

All of us respect the sincerity of these groups. But in every objection they raise, they pit their fears against the Nation's actual experience -- which tells us something quite different.

They fear that a North American Free Trade Area will lead to a flood of cheap Mexican imports made with cheap Mexican labor, and that U.S. companies will rush to move jobs across the border to escape high U.S. wages.

Our experience, however, is different. President Salinas has opened Mexico to foreign investment and has lowered trade barriers as never before, but this has not led to a growing U.S. trade deficit or the loss of U.S. jobs in vulnerable industries. Just the opposite.

U.S. textile and apparel exports to Mexico, for example, have grown 25 percent a year since 1986, shifting us from a trade deficit to a trade surplus for the last two years.

At a recent meeting of the Council of the Americas in Washington, the president of a Massachusetts-based textile manufacturing company, stood up and said that 300 American manufacturing jobs in his firm -- about 25% of their total employment

-- depended on the boom the company has experienced in sales to Mexico these last several years.

The fact is, since 1986 consumer goods exports to Mexico have tripled; capital goods exports have doubled; manufacturing exports overall have gone up two and a half times, twice the rate of manufacturing exports to the rest of the world. We now have a trade surplus in steel exports. Today more than 600,000 U.S. jobs depend on exports to Mexico.

The lesson of experience is that as trade and investment with Mexico have become more open, the U.S. has benefited. Mexico, too, has benefited, with inflation today less than a fifth what it was four years ago and per capita gross domestic product growing for the third year in a row after a decade in which it declined by 20%.

But there is more to do. Despite its reform, Mexico's tariffs remain two and a half to five times those of the United States, while almost half our imports from Mexico come in duty free. Meanwhile Mexican import restrictions continue to be far more extensive than ours. And although we have few restrictions on foreign investments, Mexico still has many. How can anyone who looks at the clear evidence of experience, rather than at blinding fears, believe we will lose from a free trade agreement?

You may remember how busy the Port of New Orleans was a decade ago, before the debt crisis. Think of what it would mean today to New Orleans, Mobile, El Paso, and the entire U.S. southern tier, if Latin American and particularly Mexican trade were fully to revive. As Peter Drucker has said, "Latin America holds the key to the U.S. trade deficit." Mexico is the key ring.

Experience rather than fears will also tell us the truth about the environmental impact of an agreement. It's very simple: everywhere in the world, poverty produces pollution, desertification, and the destruction of forests. Prosperity produces environmental responsibility. As the editors of The Economist wrote recently in support of a Free Trade Agreement, "There is no surer way of making Mexico a bad neighbor than to keep it poor."

The underlying issue is protectionism. Hardly an argument has been advanced against the North American Free Trade Agreement that could not be advanced against a GATT agreement.

Protectionism, of course, is the international trade equivalent of socialism, and if anyone still doubts where socialism leads, there's an instructive, true story about the graves of Karl Marx and Adam Smith that should leave one in no doubt.

The London grave site of Karl Marx is owned by, of all things, a private company. The company charges admission to visitors, takes immaculate care of the tomb and, at a tasteful concession stand nearby, in true capitalistic fashion, sells Karl Marx mugs.

Meanwhile the grave of capitalist philosopher Adam Smith is on public land owned by the government. The site is littered and the walls around it are crumbling... another failure of socialism, they can't even bury us right.

I am glad to say that President Salinas is moving Mexico away from the Mexican version of Marxism to something which is closer to a U.S. version of Adam Smith's capitalism. "Perestroika a la Mexicana," as many call it.

I have met with President Salinas several times since he took office and I have found him to be a statesman of extraordinary courage and sense of destiny for his people -- the epitome of a modern world leader. He has battled the special interests and semi-feudal traditions that have shackled that country to the past and condemned it all these years to underdevelopment. He is a true believer in free markets and open systems, and his vision is matched by enormous political skills.

With the first rate team he has assembled, he is guiding his country in the direction that for so long so many of us and, indeed, the United State government itself have seen as essential. Today, other leaders in Latin America, such as Chile, Venezuela and Columbia are following this same path of economic and matching political reforms. Despite all their problems Argentina and Brazil are making brave efforts in the same direction.

For us to turn our back on Mexico now could be a crushing blow to Salinas.

It would pull the rug out from under the new generation of Mexican political leaders that have risen to prominence with him.

It would slam the door on the economic growth that Mexico must have if it is to have the capacity peacefully to absorb a nearly 20% growth in population before the end of this decade.

It would scuttle President Bush's Enterprise for the Americas Initiative and the remarkable momentum that the President has built up for inter-American cooperation.

It would have catastrophic repercussions throughout the continent.

The President of the Americas Society, my good friend Ambassador George Landau, told a group of U.S. senators not long ago the Free Trade Agreement is a foreign policy issue as much as a trade issue. I have spent the greater part of my life associated with Latin American affairs. Never have the prospects for Latin America which so many of us have dreamed of for so long been so close. But never have the consequences of turning back been so great.

So where do we go from here? For one thing there is a need for the leadership of the hemisphere, both public and private sectors, to get together, map out our accomplishments, and chart the course for the future.

Nearly two and a half years ago, in Caracas, I proposed that we mark the 500th anniversary of Columbus' voyage with a hemispheric gathering, what I would now call a Forum for the Americas.

At that time a hemisphere-wide free trade area seemed a distant possibility. Nevertheless, I noted in that address that I hoped a Forum for the Americas would build support for such an idea and that in addition it would address pressing environmental and social issues.

Today, as a result of President Bush's Enterprise for the Americas Initiative, we are far closer to achieving some of these critical goals than I imagined possible just two years ago. I believe that the need and the promise of such a Forum for the Americas is now all the greater.

A number of us connected with the Americas Society are actively exploring how it could be brought about. To that end we are talking with hemispheric governmental leaders including some in this country. We are also talking with privately based organizations and of course would be glad if there were an interest here in New Orleans.

The questions for the hemisphere is what's next, in particular, how will the reach of free trade extend southward. Free trade with the U.S. should follow democratic and open market reforms, of course. But where reforms do occur, it should follow quickly. Chile, with a sound democratic government and the most progressive economy in the region, is clearly ready.

Until recently Latin America's economic systems have not been capitalist, nor truly socialist, but what South American economist Hernando de Soto has called mercantilist. Elite groups dominated, thanks to stifling and arbitrary government regulations that kept entrepreneurial challengers out.

Nevertheless, a middle class and upwardly mobile lower class were born and grew. In many cases, they arose because small entrepreneurs ignored official obstacles. But they also came through the influence of U.S. and other international companies, with their higher pay, frequently extensive worker training and capitalistic cultures.

This middle class is the new dynamic force driving the continent toward political and economic freedom.

Since the 1820s the leaders of our hemisphere have groped for ways to bring our nations more closely together. Now -- as a common front of common values emerges -- we are in the morning of the day in which the collaboration and cooperation of which they dreamed becomes a reality.

The Forum for the Americas can be the first meeting of what is truly a new hemisphere. For half a millennium, the Americas have been called the New World -- a new world that has often looked too much like the old. I would suggest that we are just now discovering the New World and the Forum for the Americas could very well serve as its inaugural meeting.

"Liberty is the true destiny of this hemisphere," North American philosopher and theologian, Michael Novak, has written. And yet so often in the past half millennium we have fallen short of this destiny. Today it is within our grasp. I would suggest that The Forum for the Americas could be one way of taking positive steps toward bringing it about -- it could also be helpful as the arena in which to debate and promote free trade for the entire hemisphere.

In the months ahead, we in the United States can take great steps towards ensuring that the promise of 500 years becomes a reality in our lifetimes. Never before have the winds of economic and political freedom blown with such force across our continents. And yet, as Peruvian writer and champion of freedom, Mario Vargas Llosa has said, "It is important that the U.S. take initiatives" to advance the cause of freedom.

We must seize the moment. We must do our part. For if we do, the next 500 years in our hemisphere can be all that so many for these last 500 years have dreamed of.

Thank you all very much.

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

Dear David:

Many thanks for your letter of May 22. Your speech to the New Orleans Council of Trade really hit the mark. Now that Fast Track is assured we will continue to work closely with you and other business leaders as we enter the negotiating process on the North American Free Trade Agreement.

We have been doing some thinking on your idea for a Hemispheric Forum sponsored by the Council of the Americas, and I believe it would be worthwhile for you to meet with the President to talk about it before too long. As we discussed briefly, one of the factors to be considered is how such a meeting would fit in with the Enrique Iglesias proposal to hold a somewhat similar meeting in September under Inter-American Development Bank auspices.

Your suggestion that the Council of the Americas focus on plans for hemispheric-wide free trade area by the year 2000 has appeal. I feel ~~sure that the President would want~~ to participate in a Council of the Americas forum, if held in Washington or New York. We need to consider carefully the level of participation of other governments.

it would If you would like, I would be happy to try to set up a brief meeting with the President on the subject, perhaps sometime ~~in~~ around mid-June. In the meantime, let me thank you once again for all you have done to help get passage of Fast Track.

it would be useful for Sincerely,

SUBJECT: spanish defense minister's proposal

Please pass the following message to the General:

Brent:

In his meeting with Cheney earlier today, the Spanish Defense Minister expressed concern about the isolation of the French on the question of the future of NATO and the European Pillar. He proceeded to tell Cheney that Spain was considering making a new proposal in this week's WEU Ministerial to ease the problem. While the proposal makes a bow toward WEU-NATO linkage, as we favor, it is aimed principally at building up the WEU, tying it closely to the EC, and then having it absorbed by the EC in 1996 (when the WEU treaty expires).

This is bad news. In addition to being inimical to our approach and interests, it will only reopen the division between the pro-NATO and pro-EC camps. I suggest that you tell the Minister that we will work to ensure that the French are not isolated and that there will be an opportunity for a European pillar to develop. That said, we believe it would be undesirable for the WEU now to take up a proposal that would be at odds with or competing with the recent NATO decisions. The Spaniards should be under no illusion that we might soften our opposition to a separate EC-run European Security Identity.

(I was led to believe that Cheney might not have knocked this idea on the head when it was presented to him, since he wasn't sure what it really meant.)

SUBJECT: Philippines: World Bank Loan

Wilma/Dona: I understand that you have scheduled the meeting with Robson and Eagleburger for Monday, June 24 to discuss the proposed World Bank loan to the Philippines. Please pass the following background information to the General.

State and Treasury are at loggerheads over a proposed World Bank loan to the Philippines. The $220 million loan is for "adjustment in the environment and natural resources sector in the Philippines". Treasury wants to vote no on the grounds that the loan conditions are too weak and that it is really an economic support, not an environmental, loan. State strongly favors a positive vote, challenges Treasury's economic arguments, but essentially rests its case on political grounds (e.g. base negotiations). AID agrees with State.

Eagleburger called me and asked that if he and John Robson could not resolve the issue, the NSC convene a meeting in an effort to reach a solution. They could not come to terms, and Robson confirmed to me that Treasury would not budge -- at least today. Prior efforts to resolve the issue at the Assistant Secretary level have failed.

You may recall that after Treasury abstained on another loan to the Philippines in 1989, Mrs. Aquino complained to the USG. Secretary Baker later wrote you, asking that NSC take the lead in developing a process for high level appeals in cases where a negative vote or abstention on an MDB loan would have important foreign policy implications. Your subsequent memo to State, Treasury, and AID called for establishment of an appeals process in sensitive cases.

Eagleburger wants to invoke the provisions of your memo; Robson has agreed to the procedure (i.e. a meeting chaired by you).

We will prepare for your use a memorandum summarizing the substantive issues and suggesting a possible outcome if, as expected, Robson and Eagleburger hold to their current positions.

Regarding Mexican political concerns about the North American FTA, originally Salinas had wanted to wrap up the negotiations before his Congressional elections this (1991) September. There are scattered Gubernatorial elections in 1992, but no real political crunch point of which we are aware.

SUBJECT: Mrs. Thatcher's Visit, June 14-20

Florence -- Please pass to the General.

Brent --

For most of her visit, Mrs. Thatcher be staying at White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia, branching out from there to her East Coast and Midwestern events. Washington is not on her schedule, but we know from Ray Seitz that she hopes to see the President.

The President will be travelling June 14-17 and occupied with President Collor's State Visit the 18th.

If you agree, I will ask Ray Seitz to tell Mrs. Thatcher that the President would like very much to see her, explain his unavailability June 14-18, and suggest June 13 or June 19-21. (I will double-track with the British Embassy and follow up with a Schedule Proposal as soon as Ray gives us Mrs. T's reaction.)

Should we plan on a 45- to 60-minute meeting in the Oval?

The President's calendar is free for dinner on the 20th should he wish to invite her.

SUBJECT: Tunisian Foreign Minister Call on General Scowcroft

Tunisia's Foreign Minister Habib Ben Yahia will be visiting June 12-14. He will be meeting with Baker June 13 and would also like to see General Scowcroft. Ben Yahia, formerly Tunisia's Ambassador in Washington, is perhaps the most pro-western member of President Ben Ali's government and was extremely helpful to us in managing the U.S.-PLO dialogue. We anticipate that Ben Yahia will be looking to mend fences here in Washington. Iraq's position during the war had significant popular support in Tunisia, and the GOT took an equivocal stand. The Tunisians should be lobbied to take a more supportive position on the President's Mideast peace initiatives, and both Richard Haass and I believe the General should see Ben Yahia to this end. The meeting could take place any time after 1000 on Friday, June 14, or any time Wednesday, June 12 outside of lunchtime.

MEMORANDUM FOR BRENT SCOWCROFT

THROUGH: RICHARD N. HAASS

FROM: EDMUND J. HULL

SUBJECT: Response to a letter from Harold Brown, Chairman,
The Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS)

Harold Brown has sent you a draft report of a SAIS study group on postwar U.S. policy in the Middle East and the Gulf (Tab II). It reflects the consensus views of a score of "wisemen" -- Brown, Brzezinski, Bundy, Carlucci, Clausen, Helms, Jones, Laird, Linowitz, McNamara, Muskie, Nitze, Henry Owen, Gerard Smith, Strauss, Vance, Volcker. The report is largely, but not totally, consistent with our current policy on Arab-Israeli peace process, regional security, arms control, economic reconstruction, reducing U.S. dependency on Mideast oil and democratization. The relatively minor points of disagreement include a greater emphasis on: elections in the peace process, restoring contacts with Iran, and reduced consumption rather than increased production to lessen oil dependency.

In general, we believe the report will promote bipartisan support for the administration's policies and have prepared a letter (Tab I) informing Brown that you would be pleased to meet with him during the May 23-29 period to receive it and discuss how the group might be helpful.

RECOMMENDATION

That you sign the letter at Tab I to Harold Brown.

Dear Brent,

I enclose an advance copy of a Policy Consensus Report on postwar U.S. policy in the Middle East and the Gulf, just completed under the auspices of The Johns Hopkins Foreign Policy Institute. You will see from the list of those who took part in its preparation that it represents a bipartisan consensus of a group of individuals with well known service in public and private life. As the Report says, we offer our conclusions and recommendations in a spirit of constructive support.

We intend to issue the Report publicly in a few weeks' time. I would welcome the opportunity to meet with you during the period May 23-29 to present it more formally and to discuss with you how the group might be helpful in this area.

Sincerely,

Shaping the Peace: Postwar United States
Policy in the Middle East and the Gulf

Policy Consensus Report

The conclusions and recommendations which follow represent a consensus that has been endorsed by Harold Brown, Zbigniew Brzezinski, McGeorge Bundy, Frank Carlucci, Thomas Clausen, William Crowe, Charles Duncan, Peter Goldmark, David Hamburg, Richard Helms, David Jones, Melvin Laird, Sol Linowitz, Robert McNamara, Edmund Muskie, Paul Nitze, Henry Owen, Gerard Smith, Robert Strauss, Cyrus Vance, and Paul Volcker. We are a bipartisan group, with varied experience in many sectors of governmental and private life. We offer our conclusions and recommendations in a spirit of constructive support.

Having waged a successful war, the United States must now show responsible and far-sighted leadership in shaping the peace.

In the wake of the coalition's military victory, the situation in the Middle East and the Gulf offers a combination of circumstances that may not last and that may not recur. The opportunity should be seized.

The issues of postwar United States policy in the region can be considered under six headings:

- (1) Arab-Israeli peace,
- (2) regional security,
- (3) arms control,
- (4) economic reconstruction and cooperation,
- (5) reducing U.S. dependence on Mideast oil, and
- (6) democratization and legitimacy.

1. Arab-Israeli Peace: The Gulf crisis demonstrates that the Arab-Israeli conflict is hardly the only source of tension in the Middle East. Nevertheless, there is sufficient interaction between this and the other issues of regional stability that the Administration is correct to try to seize the opportunity that the new situation affords. The coalition's success against Saddam Hussein strengthens the Administration's hand in both interrelated dimensions--regional security and Arab-Israeli peace. Progress in one area would reinforce efforts in the other.

Just as the role of moderate Arabs should be strengthened by the war's outcome, so too Israel should be reassured by the weakening of the Iraqi threat and the enhanced credibility of American reassurances. The scale of the prewar Iraqi military threat also raises doubts as to whether in foreseeable conditions Israel can assure its future security by military means alone. It must seek also to do so by political means, meaning the give-and-take of compromise. It will also need American backing.

American diplomatic efforts must be directed at both sides, pressing both to demonstrate "new thinking." We support the Administration's two-track approach of seeking progress both in state-to-state relations and on the Palestinian issue, but we believe the Palestinian issue is a key:

* We should ask all Arab states to declare their willingness to live in peace, normalized relations, and reconciliation with Israel once the Palestinian issue is resolved. We should ask them to state this publicly, and to be prepared to take incremental steps to these ends in parallel with incremental steps achieved on the Palestinian issue (as described below). No Arab country is likely to make significant moves in relations with Israel unless there is also movement on the Palestinian front.

* A Syrian-Israeli negotiation should be sought, on Lebanon and/or on bilateral relations, recognizing that it is unlikely to make real headway unless Israel is prepared to contemplate at least some increment of withdrawal on the Golan Heights.

* Saudi Arabia and Egypt should be urged to press Syria into genuine peacemaking and should backstop a moderate solution to the issue of Palestinian representation, in the wake of the present discrediting of the PLO. Jordan should be included as a possible partner of the resident Palestinians, despite its pro-Iraqi tilt during the war.

U.N. Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338 remain the basic guidelines of policy. The U.S. should continue, until circumstances change, to pursue a more functional than territorial approach to ending the Israeli occupation--aimed at autonomy for the Palestinians as an interim step--including through elections in the occupied territories:

- * Israel and the Palestinians should both be pressed for flexibility in the modalities of elections. The Palestinians, especially, should recognize the advantage of elections, because the elevation of a legitimate indigenous Palestinian leadership will be a political breakthrough for them.

- * Israel's willingness to turn over real functional powers to elected Palestinian authorities, explored in the autonomy talks following Camp David, should be vigorously tested again.

- * Israel and the Palestinians must accept that an interim agreement will neither preclude nor assure later achievement of an independent state. The final outcome (final status) will depend on how the parties conduct themselves--at the negotiating table and on the ground--after an initial agreement.

- * The U.S. should continue to press strongly the point that the continued construction of Israeli settlements in the West Bank is an obstacle to peace and to the negotiating process.

The focus of diplomacy should be direct negotiations among the parties immediately concerned, irrespective of whether there may initially be some international umbrella under which the direct negotiations are launched. Similarly, the focus should be less on these modalities than on the substantive issues that divide the parties. In addition:

- * The U.S. should be prepared to consider a formal security guarantee to Israel in the context of a peace settlement.

- * International guarantees under the U.N. should also play a part in any interim and final settlement.

2. Regional Security: The dilemma of Mideast and Gulf security is that no effective system of regional security is likely without a pivotal American military role, yet the sensitivities of regional politics make an intrusive American military presence unwise.

An effort must be made, in the first instance, to restore an equilibrium among the Mideast powers, so that the region will not be vulnerable to domination by any future Saddam Hussein:

- * The new grouping of our Arab coalition partners--the "GCC-plus-two"¹--holds promise as the nucleus of a new stabilizing regional alignment. We should support it. Our friends Egypt and Saudi Arabia are the pivotal countries here. Their ability to moderate Syria will be put to the test.

* Our ally Turkey is also a key regional player now. It deserves more U.S. and European financial and military support.

* Insofar as Iran is prepared to play a constructive role, the U.S. should seek to restore contacts with that country, whose importance is bound to grow. We share Iran's interest in the security of the "northern tier" (Iran, Pakistan, Afghanistan).

* Iraq needs to be dealt with in any scheme of regional security, first under the terms of the U.N.-declared ceasefire (Security Council Resolution 687), and after the departure of the Saddam regime, in an eventual peace treaty or broader political or security arrangement. Iraq is entitled to reasonable self-defense capabilities but not to be in a position to threaten again.

* A way must be found, perhaps through the U.N., to commit Western Europe, Japan, and the Soviet Union in support of any regional arrangements.

The long-term American military role should not be intrusive. Political reactions and sensitivities in the Arab world are an important limiting condition. Yet, our commitment to our interests in the region must be clear, and there must be tangible means of ensuring its credibility. Most U.S. forces should withdraw, in parallel with the perceived decline of the Iraqi threat. However, unless the resulting security links with us are more substantial than they were before the crisis, our Gulf partners and we risk a more problematic outcome the next time there is a serious challenge:

- * The U.S. presence could consist of augmented naval forces, prepositioning of heavy equipment, more frequent joint exercises (including ground exercises), rotation into the region of tactical air units based elsewhere, and other infrastructure and logistical programs.

- * Any long-term U.S. ground presence should be limited to training and logistical functions, except for possible participation in a multilateral force to protect Kuwait, if requested. Any forward U.S. Central Command Headquarters should be small and low-profile.

3. Arms Control: The key criterion for arms control is security. Little progress will be achieved in arms control--or in the Arab-Israeli peace process--if measures are imposed that the states in the region see as creating new vulnerabilities.

Limiting the spread of unconventional systems should be the priority--meaning nuclear, chemical, and biological weapons and the ballistic missiles that can deliver them. Proliferation of nuclear weapons capabilities remains the gravest danger. Israel, long jealous of its freedom of action, now understands its own interest in region-wide restraints on unconventional weaponry:

* The U.S. should seek, as a near-term priority, to freeze the development of nuclear weapons capabilities in the Middle East (and South Asia), including verifiable limits--through on-site inspection--on Israel's and other countries' production facilities. After the achievement of peace between Israel and its neighbors, staged implementation of a nuclear-free zone should be the U.S. objective.

* Iraq must be held to the strict implementation of Resolution 687 and its provisions for verified destruction of chemical, biological, nuclear, and missile production and storage facilities.

The U.S. and other supplier countries should tighten controls on exports of technology and systems that aid in the development of missiles and unconventional weapons:

* The relaxation of COCOM controls that is now (properly) taking place in response to the collapse of the Warsaw Pact cannot be permitted to loosen up the availability of dangerous technology to the Middle East.

* The supplier countries must make special efforts to enforce a tight embargo on all those regimes that continue to pose a particular threat in this regard, including (in the Middle East) Iraq, Iran, Libya, and (still) Syria.

* The cooperation of China and the USSR is essential in these endeavors, and it should be a major issue in our relations with them. "Middle powers" such as Brazil must be similarly persuaded.

* Existing global mechanisms, such as the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty and the 1925 Geneva Protocol on CW use should be utilized. President Bush's pursuit of a negotiated global ban on possession of chemical weapons deserves support. Strong provisions for enforcement are needed.

The flow of conventional arms to the region is a problem much harder to manage. The United States cannot abandon allies that have legitimate defense needs. Nevertheless, our hopes of inducing restraint on the part of the Soviets, Chinese, Europeans, and others would be well served by U.S. restraint in resuming arms sales to the Middle East--at least unless and until the destabilizing actions of others force us to look to the security of our friends.

D. Economic Reconstruction and Cooperation: The United States should support a role for the international financial institutions. They have unique technical capabilities and an established procedure of setting appropriate economic policy conditions for assistance; they can also reflect the world community's interest in the region's economic future:

- * The World Bank and International Monetary Fund (IMF) should be asked (by the Gulf countries) to set up a special task force to study the economic policy challenges of the region and its countries. Modeled after the report done last year on the USSR, it could provide a market-oriented macroeconomic framework to guide national policies and also assistance programs.

- * A World Bank/IMF special fund should be set up, outside of existing quotas, to be the main conduit for outside economic aid and to channel it according to such criteria.

- * The problems of demography and water should also be studied by special task forces. The initiative of Turkish President Ozal in convening a regional water summit meeting in 1991 should be vigorously supported.

- * Threats to the region's ecology, exacerbated by the war, call for multilateral cooperation through either regional efforts or international institutions, including United Nations mechanisms.

Much of the capital needed for reconstruction--as well as for assistance to the less wealthy Mideast countries--can come from the region itself. Even the oil-producing states with current cash flow problems are in a position to borrow from outside against future oil revenues. While continuing our bilateral aid programs, the United States should also encourage regional cooperation in support of key countries like Egypt.

5. Reducing U.S. Dependence on Mideast Oil: The U.S. dependence on Middle East oil exacerbates our foreign policy problems in the region. It leaves us subject to potential political blackmail; it makes an important element of our standard of living and price level vulnerable to the vagaries of an unstable political situation. This dependence must be reduced:

- * The most significant impact of actual or anticipated supply disruptions comes from their price effect, specifically the dollar effect of oil price spikes on our GNP.

- * A strategy for more flexible use of the U.S. Strategic Petroleum Reserve (and other IEA member-state reserves) would help dampen the height and duration of a price spike in a crisis.

- * The Administration's National Energy Strategy, however, with its emphasis on expanding production, is not an adequate response to the deeper problem of either the political or the economic impact of price spikes. Reduced consumption, in the form of enhanced conservation and efficiency of energy use, would do more to reduce the impact of price spikes on our GNP than would increases in production.

* A variety of fiscal, regulatory, technological, and policy tools are available to reduce U.S. dependence on oil. The goal of reducing that dependence is vital enough that no method should be excluded from consideration, even such controversial means as nuclear power or a tax on gasoline or petroleum products. We share the Administration's belief in the virtue of the market, and note that there are many ways at hand to make use of market forces, via incentives and disincentives, to improve the efficiency of energy consumption sharply.

6. Democratization and Legitimacy: Whether we or our Arab coalition partners like it or not, the internal structure of Arab governments has now become one of the major issues of regional politics. Our strategic interest may give us a stake in the independence and security of regional states regardless of their form of government, yet the question of their legitimacy is bound to affect the American people's and Congress's judgment of new long-term commitments we may be undertaking.

The issue also goes to the heart of the stability we are seeking for this region. The long-run viability of our security arrangements, especially a U.S. military presence, is inescapably hostage to the internal legitimacy of friendly governments whose security we seek to enhance.

The dilemmas are real, and should be approached by Americans with some care:

* In Kuwait, it will be hard for us to escape responsibility for how our influence is used or perceived to be used. Amid likely instability, we should be on the side of evolutionary democratic reform.

* Continuation of the present regime in Iraq complicates all our regional diplomatic endeavors. Nor is there much hope the refugees will all return in such circumstances. We should recognize Iraq's territorial integrity, while continuing, in concert with others, to use political and economic means (including a continued embargo) to encourage a change of regime.

* Saudi Arabia is a society under pressure simultaneously from a reform-minded intelligentsia and also from fundamentalist clerics. Here, too, we should be on the side of evolutionary reform.

In the region as a whole, we should tread cautiously--consistently speaking up against human rights abuses and encouraging evolutionary reforms in a democratic direction, without adding to the political instability that can endanger regional security, hopes for peace, and our strategic interests.

Dear Brent,

I am pleased to enclose a copy of the FPI's latest Policy Consensus Report, "Shaping the Peace: Postwar United States Policy in the Middle East and the Gulf."

The report originated in an idea of Henry Owen, who suggested, during the war, that the Johns Hopkins Foreign Policy Institute convene a group to think about postwar issues. The conclusions and recommendations have been agreed by a group that includes a broad political spectrum of individuals with varied experience in government and the private sector. At the same time it contains several specific ideas and proposals.

The report makes recommendations in six areas: (1) Arab-Israeli peace; (2) regional security; (3) arms control; (4) economic reconstruction and cooperation; (5) reducing U.S. dependence on Mideast oil; and (6) democratization and legitimacy among Middle East states.

I hope you find this report of interest.

Sincerely,

Fred Wilson -- as in golf, friend, California & President Ford -- is coming to Washington next week to play golf at Burning Tree on Friday and Saturday. Asked if you might be able to play some golf with him on Wednesday and Thursday. I told him that with your compressed schedule, it is difficult for you to get away from the office and I just didn't think there was even a possibility to play golf -- much as you would love to!

Mr. Wilson asked if he might be able to drop by your office "just to say hello." He is willing to adjust his schedule to do.

FOR FLORENCE:

Mr. Wilson plans to depart Calif on Thursday at 8:00 am, arrive Washington at 4:00 pm. He could come on Wednesday if BS schedule is not doable on Thursday after his arrival. I told him you would call him on Monday re whether it might be possible to see BS.

Last but not least, Fred Wilson (golfing buddy) called again this evening -- he will arrive tomorrow and will call upon arrival. Tee-Off time is 1:00 pm on Friday and Saturday if BS has changed his mind. In any case, he, Dick Herman (Delegate to Nixon) and Jim Murray all want to stop by to pay their respects. BS is also invited to join the "old gang" at the Palm Restaurant tomorrow evening at 7:00 pm (BS regrets on dinner!).

SUBJECT: Request for Meeting with USIA Director Catto

I recommend that you meet soon with Ambassador Henry Catto, who has now taken over the reins at USIA. This is an important time in USIA history, as the need for public diplomacy increases and the budget remains about the same. It would be very appropriate and productive if you spent 30 minutes with him, discussing some of the priorities and challenges of the Administration.

Friday's 1:15 meeting with Secs. Baker and Cheney

Brent: As we discussed, I don't think there is much more to this meeting than Dick wanting to learn where we stand with the peace process so that he can avoid the minefields...and Baker wanting to be sure that Dick is not too generous with the Israelis at a time the Israelis are sticking it to us on settlements, deportations, etc.

Two other issues to settle:

--timing of arms control initiative, which Cheney favors doing soon so that we can go ahead with arms sales; also important Cheney hangs tough with Israelis on this subject as they are making a lot of protests on what we are about to launch; you may also want to discuss venue of our announcement.

--getting agreement on who heads the teams that will go out to negotiate post-war security arrangements. State sees this as rightfully their lead, and want PM head Dick Clarke to lead...DoD doubts Clarke has the weight/status...They may be right (Reg or Kimmitt would be better probably) but it is not worth holding up things over...so I suggest we just get Cheney to sign off on Clarke or someone else and get this on the road.

SUBJECT: Meeting with Ambassador Sotirhos

DECLASSIFIED
PER NSC WAIVER, 1500 8021-02
By SS NARA, Date 3/6/24

Please pass to General Scowcroft and Bob Gates for the General's 3:00 p.m. meeting May 24 with U.S. Ambassador to Greece, Michael Sotirhos.

You have agreed to see Ambassador Sotirhos for a brief meeting today at 3:00 p.m.

He will want to discuss with you the President's upcoming trip to Athens and developments in our bilateral relationship with Greece.

He may raise one issue that I wanted to make sure you were aware of--

Amb. Sotirhos and Tom Korologos would like to create, with the help of wealthy Greek-Americans, a U.S.-Greek Cultural Foundation. The foundation, with initial private capitalization of $25 million, would sponsor exchanges, scholarships, conferences etc. to promote a closer U.S.-Greek relationship.
We think this is an excellent initiative which, in a small way, would help
Mitsotakis and our relationship with Greece.

Sotirhos and Korologos have spoken to Sig Rogich and me about having the President ask a group of Greek Americans to create the group in order to assist our efforts to improve relations with Greece. After consulting with Bill Sittmann, we agreed it would be inappropriate for the President to request the group be formed. We have told Korologos and Sotirhos that it would be better for the group to be created by private initiative.

If the group does get off the ground by July, they would like the President to meet with them before his trip to Greece or in Athens. We have told them we would consider seriously such a request should it be made.

MEMORANDUM FOR BRENT SCOWCROFT

THROUGH: DAVID GOMPERT all

FROM: NICHOLAS BURNS NB

SUBJECT: Request for Meeting with Ambassador Mike Sotirhos

Ambassador Mike Sotirhos will be in Washington for consultations May 20-23 and has requested an appointment with you. He would like to brief you on U.S.-Greek relations and discuss his ideas for the President's possible visit to Athens this summer.

Sotirhos has an excellent relationship with Mitsotakis and is doing a first-rate job in Athens. We think a brief, 15-minute meeting with him would be worthwhile.

RECOMMENDATION

That you agree to a 15-minute meeting with Ambassador Sotirhos on May 21-23.

General Brent Scowcroft, USAF (Ret.)
Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs
The White House
1600 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Brent:

I hope this letter finds you well. You have a great deal on your mind these days, so I hope this request will not make your life any more complicated. If I did not think that Greece has a unique role to play in the President's New World Order, I would not make this recommendation.

The Honorable Athanasios Tsaldaris, Speaker of the Greek Parliament, will be visiting Washington on 21 and 22 May as a guest of his counterpart, Speaker Foley. On instructions from Prime Minister Mitsotakis, he wishes to meet with you on either of these days to discuss the following three issues: (1) international terrorism (Greek security has had several successes recently and approximately fifteen foreign nationals are currently held by the Greek police); (2) narcotic trafficking in the region; and (3) Greek views on the postwar situation in the Eastern Mediterranean. I believe that Helen Bentley also called your office yesterday about the interest Mr. Tsaldaris has in talking with you.

I hope that you will be able to put Mr. Tsaldaris on your calendar for either 21 or 22 May.

The offer of some well-deserved R&R in Athens and the Greek Aegean islands still holds good, whenever you like. With all best regards, I remain

Sincerely yours,

Bob

SUBJECT: Korean Amb seeks mtg

Ambassador Hyun of South Korea is seeking to make his initial call on the General tomorrow or Friday. He will seek confirmation that President Roh Tae Woo will be invited to Washington in July. (This issue is part of the six-month projection the General is working on now. The Roh official visit does not appear controversial; Seoul is working to accomplish some goals we have set to achieve before the meeting.) The Koreans are being squeezed by the Canadians who are trying to sked a visit there for Roh before/after Washington. Roh wants to be here on July 2. I understand it is doable.

Valentin Fyodorov

Valentin Fyodorov, elected popularly to serve as Governor of Sakhalin Oblast (state) and a people's deputy in the national parliament, is a free-market economist attempting to create a free enterprise zone as an experiment in a market economy on Sakhalin Island. His dream is to make Sakhalin one of the next "Asian Tigers."

Governor Fyodorov is seeking to capitalize on Sakhalin's natural resources -- coal, oil, natural gas, fish and lumber -- to bring hard currency into the local economy. The hard currency would in turn be used to build infrastructure and stimulate economic development on Sakhalin.

Formerly Rector of the Plekhanov Institute of National Economy, and a graduate of Loyola Marymount in Los Angeles, Governor Fyodorov has a 1984 Candidate's degree based on field work in the economy of West Germany. Governor Fyodorov also was affiliated with the Institute of World Economics. Recently, Governor Fyodorov was named to Boris Yeltsin's new Supreme Consultative Council.

As a follow-up to my telephone request made last week through your personal secretary, Florence, I would like to inform you that I have confirmed my return schedule to the United States.

I will be returning to Washington this weekend and would like to know if you would be available to meet with me the week of May 6th. I will be at the White House on Friday May 10th to attend the luncheon hosted by Chairman Yeutter at 1:00PM. If your schedule permits, we could meet after the luncheon and if that is not convenient then possibly some other time next week.

I look forward to seeing you soon.

April 17, 1991

Dear Brent:

I will be in Washington on consultations April 30 - May 10 following my annual speech on Paraguayan democracy to the Latin American colonels at the Colegio de las Americas at Fort Benning, Georgia. I want to stop by and say hello to you.

I will also be seeing Chase Untermeyer to see if there is "significant life after Paraguay." As you know, my three-year tour is up this summer. It has been an historic period, and I am pleased with what we have been able to accomplish here. The February 1989 coup that swept away the 34-year dictatorship of Stroessner provided the United States with unprecedented opportunities to advance long-standing U.S. goals of fostering democracy, respect for human rights, market-oriented economic reform, while pursuing a vigorous campaign against narcotics trafficking.

I am proud of the way this mission moved to seize this unique opportunity to advance U.S. interests here and help the Paraguayans in their transition towards democracy and economic reform. The Inspectors were here for three weeks in February and gave us very high marks, while Washington end-users -- including the intelligence community -- praised us for our reporting in their annual review.

In short, I leave Asuncion in top shape for Jon Glassman. I look forward to seeing you soon.

Sincerely,

I just heard from the Peres party in NY, and despite all that Jack Stein said it now seems his schedule is too busy to come down here to meet. So they asked if he and Brent could speak by phone; the number in NY is (212) 759-4100 ext 1531. Peres is available between 10 and 12:45 and 3-5 today and between 1130 and 12 tomorrow.

I'm not sure what is going on; maybe Shimon did not want to come without a guarantee of seeing the President or Baker...or maybe he's worried that any meeting here now would backfire in Israel...or maybe he really is busy.

Anyhow, I recommend Brent calling...if he does, it is important to give a sense of Baker's upcoming trip and the need for Labor to support the government on the peace process if Shamir is deserted by folks on the far right.

MEMORANDUM:

TO: Florence Gantt

FROM: Alice Victor Alice

SUBJECT: See below

*Birthdates

Calendar*

I have been trying to send this fax to you and just learned, when I called your office and spoke to Wilma, that you have changed numbers. Here goes again with my message, slightly revised.

Mr. Rockefeller asked me to get in touch with you because he would very much like to see General Scowcroft sometime this spring. You have had so much on your plate that he has been restraining himself thus far!!

Here are a couple of thoughts, in the hope that one might work out.

1. There is a White House Endowment Fund lunch and meeting on Wednesday, May 1st. That morning would be ideal for such an appointment, if General Scowcroft had some free time.

2. Having said that, my first choice would be Tuesday, May 7th, when he will be in Washington for the Council of the Americas meeting. He is finished by lunchtime and if you had an opening that afternoon....

3. My next thought would be dinner on May 16th or breakfast (or early AM) on May 17th. He will be flying back from Atlanta on the 16th and could stop off in Washington.

4. My final "May" thought would be Monday morning, May 20th.

I understand you are away this week. If you could give me a call by Wednesday of next week (I am off Monday and Tuesday) - if only to react to the May 1st possibility, that would be very helpful. Just so you don't have to look them up, my numbers are:

Phone: 212-649-5622
Fax: 212-765-6817

Many thanks for your consideration. Although he didn't mention a specific subject, it certainly concerns Latin America, and perhaps other issues as well.

MEMORANDUM FOR BRENT SCOWCROFT

THROUGH: R. RAND BEERS RF CTING

FROM: ROBERT C. FRASUR RF

SUBJECT: Meeting Request from South African Ambassador

South African Harry Schwarz has asked to pay a brief call on you. I know normally you do not deal much with ambassadors but, in this case, I would recommend an exception. Schwarz has been an active opponent of Apartheid and the National Party government for forty years. His assignment to Washington dramatically reflects the nature of the de Klerk revolution in South African politics. Schwarz will want to talk about sanctions as we head toward the June denouement.

In forwarding this request to you, I have made it clear to the South Africans that there is no prospect of a direct channel to the White House outside the State Department, although you will continue to get to savor a periodic phone call from Pik Botha.

RECOMMENDATION

That you schedule a brief meeting with the South African ambassador sometime in the week of May 6-10.

Dear General,

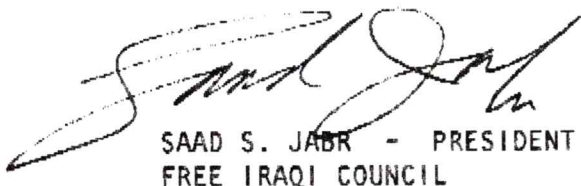

It has been a long time since we last met. Many events and changes have taken place, but I hope the end result should prove beneficial.

I am planning to be in Washington on Thursday the 4th of April for one week and will be staying at the Sheraton Washington Hotel.

I would very much like to have a short meeting with you, not only to say hello again, but to convey to you the feelings and aspirations of an impressive group of Iraqis who chose to work together under the name of The Free Iraqi Council. While I am aware of the inadequacy of this short notice I hope you can find a few minutes free to accommodate me despite your very crowded timetable.

Best of luck to you and kindest personal regards.

Yours sincerely,

SAAD S. JABR - PRESIDENT
